James B. Townsend, of Lima, O., Appointed Receiver of the D. & L. N. R'y.

On Tuesday, September 6, James B. Townsend, of Lima, O., was appointed receiver of the D. & L. N. R'y on motion of Joshua J. Harmon. By order of the court the first monies received will be applied for payment of employees wages, material used and current expenses. As the road is actually doing plenty of business to pay expenses and has been all along, the men employed and those who furnished material and supplies will, no doubt, soon be paid. Of the future of the road the HERALD is in no doubt. Mr. C. N. Haskell has sold his interest to parties who have plenty of money and railroad experience, and the receivership is simply a matter of reorganization. The two streaks of rust that run from Columbus to Detroit are winners and Tecumseh has a better chance for becoming a railroad center than ever before.

A MATTER OF FAITH.

Many of the Clergy in Michigan Endorse the little conqueror.

Our religious opinions are, as a whole, a matter of faith. Whatever denomination or seal we follow we pin our faith on the words and teachings of our Pastor. His sincerity is never doubted; that he thoroughly believes his adopted creed is unquestioned. The opinions of the Clergy on any subject carry well deserved weight with all classes of people. Many reverend gentlemen in Michigan are testifying for the little conqueror, their praise is not given lightly and only after personal experience. Gratitude and a desire to promote the welfare of the public brings forth such testimony as follows:

The Rev. F. A. Smith, of 829 First street, Kalamazoo, Mich., says: "When I procured Doan's Kidney Pills I was, at the time, and had been considerably troubled with my kidneys. Backache was quite pronounced, being especially severe when I sat or stood in a stooped position for any length of time. Other symptoms usually attending disordered kidneys plainly indicated what caused the difficulty. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected the annoyance in a very short time and I have not noticed, up to date, any indication of a recurrence. As I took no other medicine there can be no doubt but Doan's Kidney Pills were the direct means of curing me. I am most favorably impressed with them."

So certain is Dr. Miles of this fact that all druggists are authorized to refund price paid for the first bottle tried, providing it does not benefit.

Mrs. Henry Bruns, wife of the well known blacksmith at Grand Junction, Iowa, says: "I was troubled with sleeplessness, nervousness, headache and irregular menstruation; suffering untold misery for years. I used various advertised remedies for female complaints besides being under the care of local physicians, without help. I noticed in Dr. Miles' advertisement the testimonial of a lady cured of ailments similar to mine, and I shall never cease to thank that lady. Her testimonial induced me to use Dr. Miles' Nervine and Nerve and Liver Pills, which restored me to health. I cannot say enough for Dr. Miles' Remedies."

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on diseases of the heart and nerves free. Address, HEROES HAVE RETURNED.

Detroit Warmly Welcomes the 33d and 34th Regiments Home from the War.

THEIR RECEPTION A MOST HEARTY ONE.

Sad Sights Are Witnessed on the Train Bearing the Sick Soldiers—The Sufferers Taken to Various Hospitals—Those Who Are Able to Go to Their Home Towns.

Detroit, Sept. 5.—Detroit welcomed Michigan's brave soldiers of the Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth regiments on their arrival early Sunday morning. Immense crowds of shrieking, happy thousands lined the downtown streets and occupied every point of vantage where it was possible to catch a glimpse of the home-coming soldiers. The first section of 11 cars came in about noon. It brought company G, Owosso, 45 men; company H, Cheboygan, 56 men; company I, Benton Harbor, 58 men; company B, Alpena, 31 men; company E, Saginaw, 54 men; company A, Flint, 31 men; Thirty-third regiment band, Bay City, 12 men and eight officers; all of the Thirty-third regiment. The second section arrived a few minutes later. This brought companies D of Saginaw, C of Bay City, L composed of Sons of Veterans, K of Three Rivers, M of Detroit, and F of Port Huron.

It was reported here that the third section would show the condition of the troops in their worst light. The arrival of the train proved the truth of the report. Men were crowded in dirty, wicker-seated cars and were sleeping on the bare floor. The crowd shrank from the sight, horror-stricken. Then the citizens rushed forward to relieve the suffering soldiers. Man after man was tenderly carried from the train and transported to hospitals. Many of them seemed little more than corpses. The wonder of it all to many of those who watched was how the men ever lived to reach Detroit. There were 118 men suffering with fevers out of less than 350 on the train. Women of the auxiliary to the Patriotic association went here and there with pitchers of milk or water and gave many a cooling drink to the fever-stricken patients. Doctors were busy, too, extending what aid was possible before the trip to the hospital.

Police patrol wagons, furniture vans, carriages, omnibuses, hacks and buggies were all pressed into service to carry the returning soldiers to the hotels, while all the ambulances of the city, supplemented by the light spring delivery wagons of the big dry goods houses, bore the sick to the hospitals and to the old post office building, where cots had been arranged and a corps of physicians and nurses stood ready to relieve the suffering of the patients. The fourth section arrived at 7:20 o'clock. The boys were given a great ovation.

The hospital patients are all doing nicely. Gov. Pingree and Mayor Maybury made the rounds of the hospitals this afternoon, each stopping to give a word of cheer to each patient and to see if anything was needed for his comfort. The companies of the Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth Michigan have left for their home towns as follows:

Ionia.	Owosso.
Lansing.	Calumet.
Petoskey.	Iron Mountain.
Benton Harbor.	Houghton.
Traverse City.	Sault Ste. Marie.
Allegan.	Marquette.
Ironwood.	Escanaba.
Fenton.	Three Rivers.
Manistee.	Port Huron.
Bay City.	Alpena.
Saginaw.	Cheboygan.
Flint.

The men of both regiments did very little complaining, most of what was done being at the medical facilities in Cuba, which they said were very inadequate. The reason ascribed for this by many of the volunteers was that the regimental surgeons were taken from their regiments and sent to general hospitals. Praise for Camp Wikoff was heard in nearly all directions, most of the men saying their treatment there was all that could be desired.

Took 749 Ballots.

Port Huron, Sept. 5.—After 749 ballots the Seventh district republican convention Saturday night nominated Edgar Weeks, of Macomb county, for congress. Horace G. Snover, the present congressman from that district, was fought by the St. Clair county delegation, which on the seven hundred and forty-ninth ballot flopped from William Hartsuff, of Port Huron, who had received their support at the beginning, to Edgar Weeks, nominating him by one ballot.

Michigan Man Dead.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 5.—John B. Dyar, a well-known capitalist and business man of Detroit, is dead at his summer home in Grosse Pointe. Mr. Dyar suffered some financial reverses a short time ago, alleged to have been caused by an electric road he projected from Detroit to Port Huron. Up to the time he met his reverses Mr. Dyar was a director of the Commercial national bank and president of the Michigan Radiator and Manufacturing company.

Capt. Clark Leaves.

Grand Rapids, Sept. 7.—Capt. Charles E. Clark, accompanied by his wife and two daughters, left unexpectedly via the Big Four early Tuesday morning for Asheville, N. C., where he will spend the rest of his furlough. The banquet to have been given in his honor in the near future has been indefinitely postponed.

I. O. O. F. Lodge.

Lansing, Sept. 5.—The annual convention of the grand lodge, I. O. O. F., and the Rebekah assembly will be held here October 17-20. The senate chamber and the house of representatives will be used by the delegates.

The peach trains are now running on the Michigan Central, and vast quantities of Michigan's famous fruit is being hauled to market each day. Whole trainloads leave South Haven each day for distant points, beside the thousands of bushels going into Chicago.

Pension Frauds Charged.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 7. — George F. Anderson, formerly a member of congress from Michigan, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Hagner in this city Tuesday on the charge of fraudulently representing himself to be a United States pension agent and obtaining money under false pretenses. He was held in $2,000 bail for United States court in Baltimore in October. It is stated that Anderson has been under surveillance of the secret service for the past ten years, but not until he began alleged operations near this city was sufficient evidence secured to warrant his arrest.

Another Mine to Be Worked.

Ishpeming, Sept. 2. — The title to the Eagle River copper mine, in Keweenaw county, has been cleared of the clouds that have long hung over it and mining is to be resumed within 60 days if possible. It is rumored that the capital for the development of the property comes mainly from England. In any case there is enough money in sight to guarantee an adequate development of the mine.

Michigan College of Mines.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 5.—A special to the Free Press from Houghton, Mich., says: The eleventh annual commencement exercises of the Michigan College of Mines were held here Friday evening. The graduating class was the largest in the history of the college and embraced men from all over the United States, several from Europe, one from Mexico and one from South Africa.

Steamer Burns at St. Joseph.

St. Joseph, Sept. 7.—The river steamer Tourist caught fire Tuesday night while lying at her dock and was burned to the water's edge. She was built two years ago for the trade up the St. Joseph river and cost about $4,000. The fire started in the engine-room and spread rapidly. Drake & Wallace owned the steamer.

Mule Power Used.

Bessemer, Sept. 3. — The Oliver Mining company have adopted mules for tramming. It is claimed that a 50 per cent. reduction in the cost of tramming is thus effected. The mules are lowered and hoisted mornings and evenings and are only in the mines when at work.

Michigan Soldiers Die.

New York, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Edward Royce and Stephen Otto, of the Thirty-fourth Michigan volunteers, died at the Presbyterian hospital Sunday from malaria.

A STARTLED MOTHER

Strange Happening to Her Four-year Old Daughter—not Realize the Danger Until too Late.

From the Bulletin, Freeport, Ill.

While busy at work in her home, Mrs. William Shay, corner of Taylor and Hancock Avenues, Freeport, Ill., was startled by hearing a noise just behind her.

Turning quickly she saw creeping toward her, her four-year-old daughter, Beatrice. The child moved over the floor with an effort, but seemed filled with joy at finding her mother.

Beatrice Shay.

The rest of the happening is best told in the mother's own words. She said:

"On the 28th of Sept. 1896, while in the bloom of health Beatrice was suddenly and severely afflicted with spinal meningitis. Strong and vigorous before, in five weeks she became feeble and suffered from a paralytic stroke which twisted her head back to the side and made it impossible for her to move a limb. Her speech however was not affected. We called in our family doctor, one of the most experienced and successful practitioners in the city. He considered the case a very grave one.

"The child's body was bandaged to keep her in position. Soon it was seen that other means must be adopted. Little Beatrice, much against her will, was housed up in a plaster paris jacket which she wore for several months.

"In the hope of receiving some help for the child we consulted in turn nine of the most prominent physicians of Freeport. Two of them applied electric batteries, but none of the doctors' treatment gave any lasting benefit. It was then that my husband's opportune visit to a drug store brought us the means which led to the cure of our child. While there he learned of the wonderful power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and decided to buy some for our daughter's benefit.

"We tried them and the hopes which we had fixed regarding their merits were more than realized before one box of the pills had been used.

"Busy in my kitchen one afternoon I was startled with the cry of 'Mamma' from little Beatrice who was creeping toward me. I had placed her on an improvised bed in the parlor comfortably close to the fireside and given her some books and playthings. She became tired of waiting for me to come and made up her mind to go to me, so the story 'My Pink Pills made me walk,' which she tells everyone who comes to our home was then for the first time verified. She walked ever since. She has now taken nine boxes of the pills and her pale and pinched face has been growing rosy, and her limbs gained strength day by day. She sleeps all night long now, while before taking the pills she could rest but a few hours at a time.

"I shall be glad if anything that I may say for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, may be of benefit to those in need. There must be many children who suffer as Beatrice did and I hope that my story may be noticed by their parents."

A specific for all forms of weakness is contained in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. The blood is vitalized and becomes pregnant with the elements of life. The nervous system is reorganized, all irregularities are corrected, strength returns and disease disappears. So remarkable have been the cures performed by these pills that their fame has spread to the far ends of civilization. Wherever you go you will find the most important article in every drug store to be Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

SHORE CARGOES SHIFTED.

How Truckloads Are Shaken Over by Continued Jolting in the Same Direction.

Once in awhile we read, says the New York Sun, that the ship So-and-so or the steamer So-and-so has returned to port, or has arrived, perhaps, with "a decided list, cargo shifted." Sometimes we see a land craft, a truck, with cargo shifted—a big pile of boxes, towering high, shaken over to one side or the other by continued jolting along on the side of the street on the slope. A load thus shifted can't be shaken back by running along on the opposite slope of the road; it is like a stick of wood that has been bent and kept bent till the grain is set; whatever you do with it the crook stays in.

If care is exercised in turning corners and in navigating generally, the shifted load can usually be carried to its destination as it is without upsetting, though it may work harder; the experienced truckman knows just what can be done with it, and whether it has shifted as far as it will go, and all that. If it is so badly shifted as to make the operation of the truck difficult or dangerous, he hauls to one side by the curb and anchors, that is to say he halts and unloads the shifted top courses of his cargo and then reloads and makes everything trim and secure and sets out again.

Starving in Alaska.

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 24.—Capt. Abercrombie has sent a letter to Secretary of War Alger from Port Valdes, Alaska, asking the government to send a steamer there to bring home the stranded men who are already dependent upon Abercrombie's exploration party for food.

A New Navy.

Washington, Aug. 24.—The navy department opened bids at noon Tuesday for 16 torpedo destroyers and 12 torpedo boats, to cost in the aggregate not to exceed $16,900,000, as provided in the last naval appropriation act.

Burned to Death.

Rio, Wis., Aug. 30.—A temporary dwelling on the farm of Warren Gilbert, six miles southwest of this village, was destroyed by fire and a two-year-old daughter of Eugene Gilbert, who was asleep in an upper room, was burned to death.

Drowned in Diamond Lake.

Grove City, Minn., Aug. 31.—Halvor Floren, aged 22, and Annie Dillnar, aged 18, were drowned in Diamond lake.

Deed of a Jealous Farmer.

Middlesboro, Ky., Aug. 31.—Walter Burrows, a prosperous farmer, killed his wife and then himself at Powell's Valley, Tenn. This is the fourth killing in Claiborne county in two days. Burrows was jealous of his wife.

Forty-Three Perished.

San Francisco, Aug. 27.—The steamer Dora upon its arrival here from Alaska confirmed the news of the loss of the steamer Stickeen Chief, and says that the crew and passengers, 43 in number, were lost.

Carterville, Ill., Aug. 23.—At 4:30 o'clock this city again suffered a loss by fire estimated at $56,000 and at a time when it was just recovering from the fire of last year which destroyed one-half of the city. No fatalities are reported, but many accidents occurred.

Garcia Resigns.

Havana, Aug. 23.—Calixto Garcia, the rebel leader who had trouble with Gen. Shafter at Santiago and tendered his resignation to the rebel government, is now at Gibara. He has handed in his resignation for the second time and it has been accepted.

Sigsbee Promoted.

Washington, Aug. 23.—The president has promoted Capt. Charles D. Sigsbee, U. S. N., now commanding the St. Paul, by advancing him three numbers on the list of captains in the navy for "extraordinary heroism."

ADMINISTRATOR'S SALE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

In the matter of the estate of JOHN AIKEN, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to an order granted to the undersigned administrator of the estate of said John Aiken, deceased, by the judge of probate for the County of Lenawee on the 25th day of July A. Monday was a red letter day for the village as the following teachers left for their schools: Floyd Smith in the Bird district, Macon; Elmer Pocklington, near Devils Lake; Lura Palmer, McLean Dist; Lena Stewart, Mills Dist., near Clinton; Merle Yokom, near Cadmus, Dover township; Fred Yokom, Little Hope, Raisin; Arton Yokom, Watt Aten Dist., Clinton. The first four are graduates from our school.

One of the oldest, if not the oldest, landmarks in the village was struck by lightning during Monday morning's thunder storm and burned. It was the cottage built by Oliver Miller when the village was in its infancy, nearly 70 years ago. After Mr. Waring built his new brick home on the site of the cottage, it was used as a hall and known as "Cottage Hall." When Mr. Lake, the present owner, purchased the property of Mr. Waring, he converted it into a fine henery.

The GRAPHOPHONE

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired, your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

STARVED ON THE PLAINS.

The Memorable Donner-Reed Expedition of 1846—Snowbound in the Sierras—Forty Emigrants Dying of Hunger.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

Probably no event of similar character ever more stirred the feelings of the earlier settlers of the West, and particularly those living in Illinois, than did the tragic ending of the Reed and Donner expedition to California in 1846. The originators of this expedition were James F. Reed and George and Jacob Donner, kind and open-hearted men, yet of bold and energetic dispositions. They had come with their families into Illinois only a short time after its admittance into the Union and finally settled in Sangamon county, not far from Springfield. In 1845 vague reports would occasionally reach that vicinity of the richness of soil and healthfulness of the climate of the far West, and especially the land known as California, and these began to create a restless spirit among the settlers. Reed and Donners called meetings of their neighbors, and induced many to join the proposed expedition, which finally left Springfield on the morning of April 14, 1846. The party numbered about forty persons, two-thirds of whom were women and children.

At Independence, Mo., the final preparations for crossing the plains were to be made. They were joined there by parties from Illinois, Iowa, Tennessee, Missouri, and Ohio, swelling the original number to nearly 100 persons. As all know, it was necessary at that period for persons crossing the plains to travel in large bodies, as the Indians were hostile. Again it was never safe to set forth on such a journey until the grass was of sufficient growth to afford sustenance for the stock. Everything being in readiness, extra wagons filled with provisions, etc., the company departed from Independence early on the morning of May 11, 1846, upon their long and weary journey.

All went well until they arrived at a point a few miles above the mouth of the Big Blue river, the spot where Manhattan, Kan., now stands. The party continued its journey up the Platte river valley, passing Fort Laramie, and at last reached Fort Bridger without serious mishap. So far the trip had occupied the entire summer, and the month of September was well advanced.

At Fort Bridger the expedition tarried four days to rest man and beast. It was here they met with an act of treachery which undoubtedly led to their horrible fate. A prominent guide of that period, one Hastings, had discovered a more direct route to California, known as Hastings' cut off. It passed through Weber's canon to the south end of Salt Lake about where Salt Lake City now stands, and was three or four hundred miles shorter than the old route. But it was fraught with so many difficulties and dangers that it was safer to travel by the northwestern trail. It was the intention of the Reed and Donner party to take the old route; but one Vasquez, who was in command of the fort, and who was in some manner connected with the Hastings cut off, urged Reed and his party to take the new route, telling them that it was much safer, and that they would reach their destination many weeks earlier. Reed and his friends agreed upon the Hastings route, and started once more upon their journey.

Reaching the present site of Salt Lake City, the first great obstacle presented itself. There was no road at all, the country being one dense mass of forest and underbrush. There was no other course but to literally cut and hew their way through to the outlet of Salt Lake, now termed the river Jordan. This stupendous task was the indirect cause of several deaths in the party, and brought about much bad blood among its members, the malcontents charging Reed with the entire blame of the prevailing state of affairs, as he had been rather urgent in having the party take the Hastings route. The dissatisfied ones at last openly declared that Reed or they should leave the company, or bloodshed would follow. So it proved; in an altercation with Reed soon after, the ringleader of the grumblers, one Patrick Breen, who had come from Iowa struck him fiercely over the head with the butt end of a loaded ox gad, cutting him severely. He was about to repeat the blow when Reed's wife, who was a witness of the affair, sprang in between the two men, to prevent further trouble. In his madness Breen struck the woman to the ground with the whip handle. This made Reed almost insane, and in a moment he had cut his opponent in two with a butcher knife which he carried, then, drawing a brace of large revolvers, dared any of the dead man's friends to interfere. By strenuous efforts his friends prevented further butchery, and the affair for the time was ended. This tragedy cast a gloom over the entire party.

Two or three days' travel from the scene of the disturbance brought them to the springs where they were to provide water and grass for crossing what was known as Hastings desert, an alkaline region destitute of water or vegetation. The treacherous Vasquez had informed them that it was less than fifty miles wide, while it proved in fact, more than eighty. It was understood that they must travel day and night, only stopping to feed and water the cattle. When about two-thirds of the way across the stock manifested signs of exhaustion and the company directed Mr. Reed to go forward until he found water, and report. He did so, reaching it in about twenty miles, and was on his way back to camp when he met his teamsters, about 11 o'clock at night, driving the cattle, having left their wagons. Soon after leaving his teamsters one of their horses sank down in the road, and while they were endeavoring to raise it, the cattle—nine yoke of oxen—scented the water and made for it. They were never found; and there was Reed and his family, with all their supplies, out on a desert hundreds of miles from any human habitation and the winter very nearly at hand. The other members of the expedition drove their teams much further, and some succeeded in reaching water. Reed not receiving any information and their supply of water being nearly gone, he started with his family on foot, carrying the youngest child in his arms. In the course of the night the children became exhausted; but a cold hurricane commenced blowing and they were forced to move on, although the sufferings of the children were intense. Near daylight, to their great joy, one of Jacob Donner's wagons was reached, which proved to contain the latter's family. Donner kindly conveyed the unfortunate family to where the others were camped, where they remained a week trying to find Reed's cattle, but the search was fruitless. He then divided his provisions, borrowed a yoke of oxen, and, leaving his seven wagons in the desert, moved on with the others.

Some days further on it was found that the provisions were running short. Reed proposed that, if two men would go forward to Capt. Sutter's in California, he would write him (Sutter) a letter asking for provisions and animals to assist the party to its destination. None were eager to undertake a journey fraught with so many dangers, but finally two men consented to go. These two were Wm. McCutcheon, who had joined the train from Missouri, and a Mr. Stanton, of Chicago, a man of the most daring bravery and whose nobleness of character cost him his life. Their progress was slow, and week after week elapsed without any tidings from them. Affairs were now becoming very desperate in the camp; the food was well-nigh exhausted. The expedition was camped in the mountains, and it was impossible to proceed further at that season of the year on account of the heavy snows. Here the party would have to remain until spring. It was finally agreed that Reed should go forward to ascertain what had become of Stanton and McCutcheon and hurry up supplies. So, leaving his wife and five children in care of friends, he started out on horseback. The Donner brothers were camped a mile or two in advance of the main body and with them was a man by the name of Walter Herron, who, when Reed reached them, volunteered to go with him, which Reed agreed to. Having but one horse they rode in turns. In the course of a week their provisions gave out and they traveled for days without food, except wild geese and other game, which they were obliged to devour raw. When crossing the Sierra Nevada mountains Herron became so desperate as to propose the killing of the horse. Reed, knowing that they would never be able to cross the mountains alive without the aid of this animal, vowed he would put an end to his own life rather than perish of hunger and cold among the mountains. That afternoon Herron became delirious for want of food and his case looked hopeless, when, to Reed's great joy, he found a handful of beans in the hollow of a log, and, although almost starved himself, gave them to his companion. The following day they came upon some abandoned wagons, which they ransacked, but failed to find any food. Taking the tar bucket from one of the wagons, and scraping the tar from the bottom, Mr. Reed found a streak of rancid tallow, which he made known to Herron, who at once swallowed a large piece without giving it a smell. He swallowed a second piece and wanted more, which Reed refused to give him, having himself eaten some which made him deathly sick. Soon afterward they descended into Bear River valley where they found a party of emigrants who relieved their sufferings. They here found Stanton and the two Indians sent by Capt. Sutter to aid in carrying the provisions which he had kindly let Stanton have. Reed was so terribly emaciated that the others did not recognize him until they had conversed together for some minutes.

The next morning, Oct. 23, 1846, both parties continued their journeys. Mr. Reed went on to Capt. Sutters's told his story of the terrible conditions of the expedition, and Sutter ever ready to extend a helping hand to the suffering, supplied him with an abundance of provisions and thirty horses and mules to convey the same to the emigrants. Reed here found McCutcheon, who had been prevented from joining Stanton on account of sickness. With the aid of two Indians, Reed and McCutcheon started to return to their friends. Weeks and weeks were spent in the attempt to recross the mountains, but every plan proved fruitless. The snow was so deep that men and horses sunk out of sight in it. To Reed, who had so many lives at stake, the failure was terrible. Of the suffering of those who had been caught in the mountains no better description can be had than that furnished in a diary, the writer of which is unknown. It came into possession of Capt. George McKinstry, who was stationed at Fort Sacramento in 1847.

Truckee's Lake, Nov. 20, 1846.

Came to this place the 31st of last month; went into the pass; the snow so deep we were unable to find the road, and turned back to the shanty on Truckee lake. Stanton came up one day after we arrived here. We again took our teams and wagons, and made another unsuccessful attempt to cross the mountains, as snow fell all the time. We now have killed most of our cattle having to remain here until next spring and live on lean meat without bread or salt. It snowed during the space of eight days after our arrival, with little intermission, though now clear and pleasant, freezing at night; the snow nearly all gone from the valleys.

Nov. 29—Still snowing; now about three feet deep; wind west; killed my last oxen to day; wood hard to get.

Nov. 30—Snowing fast, and seems likely to continue for days; no living thing without wings can get about.

Dec. 1—Still snowing; snow about six and a half feet deep; very difficult to get wood, and we are completely housed up; our cattle are all killed but two or three, and these with the horses and mules, all lost in the snow; no hopes of finding them alive.

Dec. 9—Commenced snowing about 11 o'clock; took in Spitzer yesterday, who is so weak that he cannot rise without help, caused by starvation; some have a scant supply of beef; Stanton trying to get some for himself and Indians; not likely to get much.

Dec. 14—Snows faster than any previous day; Stanton and Graves, with others, making preparations to cross the mountains on snow shoes; snow eight feet on a level.

Dec. 17—Pleasant; Wm. Murphy returned from the mountain party last night; Bayless Williams died night before last.

Dec. 21—Milton arrived from Donner's last night; sad news, Jacob Donner, Samuel Shoemaker, Rhinehardt and Smith are dead; the most of them in a low condition; snowed all night, with a strong southwest wind.

Dec. 25—Began to snow yesterday; snowed all night, and snows yet; extremely hard to find wood; offered our prayers to God this (Christmas) morning; the prospect is appalling, but we trust in Him.

Jan. 1, 1847—We pray the God of Mercy to deliver us from our present calamity, if it be His holy will. Commenced snowing last night; provisions scant; dug up a hide from under the snow yesterday, but have not commenced on it yet.

Jan. 4—Fine morning; looks like spring; Mrs. Reed, Milton Elliott, and Eliza Williams started a short time ago with the hope of crossing the mountains; left the children here, it was hard for Mrs. Reed to part with them.

Jan. 6—Eliza Williams came back from the mountains yesterday evening, not able to proceed; the others kept ahead.

Jan. 8—Very cold this morning; Mrs. Reed came back, not being able to find their way over the mountains; they have nothing but hides to live on.

Jan. 13—Snowing fast; snow higher than the shanty; it must be 13 feet deep; cannot get wood this morning; it is a dreadful sight for us to look upon.

Jan. 15—Clear day again; Mrs. Murphy blind, and Lathron not able to get wood; has but one ax between him and Kieaburg; it looks like another storm; expect to hear from Sutter's soon.

Jan. 17—Lathron became crazy last night; provisions scarce; hides our main subsistence; may the Almighty send us help.

Jan. 21—Fine morning; the women do not like hides, but must either eat them or die.

Jan. 28—Commenced snowing yesterday, and still continues; one of Stanton's Indians died three days ago; food growing scarcer; don't have fire enough to cook our hides.

Feb. 5—Snowed hard until 12 o'clock last night; many uneasy for fear we shall all perish with hunger; we have but little meat left, and three hides; Mrs. Reed has but one hide, and that is on the Graves house; Milton lives there and will likely keep that; two children died last night.

Feb. 8 - Fine, clear morning; Spitzer died last night; we will bury him in the snow; Mrs. Eddy died on the night of the 7th.

Feb. 9—Mr. Pike's child died last night; Milton is at Murphy's, not able to get out of bed; Mrs. Eddy and child were buried to day; wind southeast.

Feb. 10—Beautiful morning; thawing in the sun; Milton Elliot died last night at Murphy's shanty; Mrs. Reed went there to see after his effects; John Denton trying to borrow meat for the Graveses but failed; they have nothing but hides; all are entirely out of meat, but we still have a little; our hides are nearly gone; God's help, spring will soon smile upon us.

Feb. 15—Morning cloudy until 9 o'clock, then cleared off warm. Mrs. Murphy refused to give Mrs. Reed any hides; put Sutter's pack hides on her shanty, and would not let her have them.

Feb. 19—Froze hard last night. Seven men arrived yesterday from California with provisions, but left the greater part on the way. Some of the men have gone to Donner's camp, and will start back on Monday.

Feb. 22—The Californians started this morning, accompanied by some of our party, who were in a very weak condition. Mrs. Kiesburg started with them and left Kiesburg here unable to go. Buried Pike's child this morning in the snow; it died two days ago.

Feb. 23—Froze hard last night. To day pleasant and thawy, and has the appearance of spring all but the deep snow. Shot a dog to day and dressed his flesh.

Feb. 25—To day Mrs. Murphy says the wolves are about to dig up the dead bodies around her shanty, and the nights are too cold to watch them, but we can hear them howl.

Feb. 26—Hungry times in camp; plenty of hides, but the folks won't eat them; our little party eat them with tolerably good appetite, thanks be to the Almighty God. Mrs. Murphy said here yesterday that she thought she would commence on Milton and eat him. I dont think she has done so yet. It is distressing. The Donners told the California folks four days ago that they would commence on the dead people if they did not find their cattle, then ten or twelve feet under snow, and did not know the spot or anywhere near it; they have done it ere this.

Feb. 28—One solitary Indian passed by to day; had a heavy pack on his back; gave me five or six roots resembling onions in shape; tasted like sweet potato, but full of tough little fibers.

Feb. 29—Ten men arrived this morning from Bear Valley with provisions; We all leave in two or three days and cache our goods here; they say the snow will remain until June.

Thus ends the journal. Capt. McKinstry who forwarded it to Springfield as before stated, furnished the conclusion of the affair in his brief letter:

The above mentioned men started for the valley with seventeen of the sufferers. They traveled fifteen miles and a severe snow storm came on. They left fourteen of the emigrants, including the writer of the above journal and his family. Lieut. Woodworth was immediately sent to the assistance of the others, but before he reached them they had eaten three of their number who had died from hunger and fatigue. Woodworth brought in the remainder. The rest of the unfortunate party reached Sutter's Fort in April, 1847.

The emigrants thus caught in the mountains, died one by one, until about forty of their number were literally starved to death, among them being the two Donner brothers and their wives, together with seven of their children. The camp where the Donners died is marked by a small body of water among the mountains, now known as Lake Donner, in the western part of the State of Nevada.

Omaha Exposition.

When the World's Fair at Chicago ceased to exist, it was supposed that we should ne'er look upon its like again. However, the Trans-Mississippi Exposition at Omaha has effectively reproduced in similarity all of the buildings, which made the White City so attractive.

It does not now take weeks to wander through grounds and structures and then be compelled to go away with a jumble of ideas, for the Omaha Exposition people have profited by past experience, and have so in[illegible] the arrangement of exhibi[illegible] more than two or three days [illegible]ed be consumed in admiratio[illegible]spection of the marvelous resources of the West, collected together in the chief city of Nebraska.

Even the new Midway is a reproduction of the far famed Street of All Nations of 1893 with many improvements on the original.

The electric lighting of the buildings, grounds and lagoon at night makes a scene of enchanting beauty, alone worth traveling a thousand miles to see.

The means of communication between the city and the grounds are ample, and the distance to be traversed is short.

The ways of reaching Omaha are innumerable, but the chief among them is the direct Chicago and Omaha short line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, with its electric-lighted, vestibuled trains, leaving Chicago every night at 6:15 p. m., and arriving at Omaha at 8:20 the next morning. Dining car service en route.

Excursion tickets are on sale at every coupon ticket office in the United States over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway through Northern Illinois and Iowa, as well as at 95 Adams St., and at the Union Passenger Station, Canal and Adams streets, Chicago.

Cultivation of Orchards.

It is an exceptional case when it can be considered best to plow or cultivate the orchard after the middle of summer or during the fall. The principal reason for this is that in nearly all cases late cultivation tends to induce a late growth of wood. No late supply growth of wood is desirable; what is wanted is that the growth of wood made during the early part of the growing season should have plenty of time to mature and harden before freezing weather sets in.—Farmers' Voice.

How to Care for Silk.

Silk being always worn, it is strange how few women understand how to treat the beautiful fabric. One fact not by any means widely known is that silks should never be folded. Then again, use a clean, smooth table to sponge the fabrics on. A good renovating fluid for black silk is a little piece of ammonia and a piece of common soda, put into a bottle and dissolved into one-half pint of boiling water. Sponge with this and iron; this is also good for restoring rusty-looking black woolen goods. A French recipe says to clean black silk by sponging on both sides with spirits of wine and ironing on the wrong side. The sponging with coffee removes all of a greasy appearance that especially affects gros grain silks.

CRIME OF AN ASSASSIN

Elizabeth, Empress of Austria, Stabbed to Death by a Villain on the Quay at Geneva.

THE MURDERER AN ITALIAN ANARCHIST

He Is Captured While Attempting to Escape—Glories in the Deed—Great Grief in Vienna Over the Horrible Deed—The Grief of the Aged Emperor Is Affecting.

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 12.—Elizabeth Amelia Eugenie, empress of Austria and queen of Hungary, was assassinated at two o'clock Saturday afternoon as she was walking from the Hotel Beaurivage, where she had been at luncheon, to the steamboat dock. She intended taking a steamer to the Castle Chillon, at Territet, and was accompanied only by the ladies of her suite. As the empress was passing the Brunswick monument a rough-looking man rushed at her and struck her a blow in the chest, which knocked her to the ground. The ladies with her picked her up and carried her to the boat, while her assailant ran away. The empress was carried on a litter to the hotel. A physician and the mayor were called and everything possible was done to restore her majesty, but she breathed her last at three o'clock without regaining consciousness.

Stabbed with a File.

A more careful examination was now made and it was discovered that the empress had been stabbed to the heart with a stilletto apparently made from a triangular file. After striking his death blow the assassin ran along the Rue Alps, but was caught by two men, who handed him over to a gendarme. He proved to be Luigi Laochini, an Italian anarchist from Paris. When arrested he said: "I have struck well. She must be dead. I came to Geneva purposely to assassinate her." The empress had been staying at Montcaux, near Geneva. Her majesty was visiting Geneva for pleasure, accompanied only by her suite.

Great Grief in Vienna.

Vienna, Sept. 12.—The news of the assassination became known here shortly before six o'clock Saturday evening. It spread like lightning. The streets suddenly filled with multitudes of people, many becoming impassable for vehicles. Extra editions were issued by all the papers.

The Emperor's Grief.

The emperor's fortitude is the topic of universal admiration. He is bearing up manfully despite the terrible shock, which, in view of his age, had inspired the greatest apprehension. Although at first stunned and then slightly hysterical, he soon regained his self-control, and displayed remarkable calmness. Occasionally, however, completely overpowered by his grief, he moaned piteously, repeatedly sobbing the name of the empress. Addressing Prince Von Liecchtstein, chief marshal of the imperial household, he exclaimed Saturday evening: "It is inconceivable how a man could lift his hand against one who never in her life injured anybody, one who did nothing but good." Then he moaned: "Nothing is spared to me in this world."

Dispatches of condolence are arriving at the palace from all parts of the world, testifying to profound horror and sympathy. Among them are messages from President McKinley, from Emperor William and from nearly all the European sovereigns. The court will go into mourning for six months.

FIXING TERMS OF PEACE.

The President and Cabinet Decide Upon the Policy of the United States.

THE COMMISSIONERS TO BE INSTRUCTED

There Will Be No Mistake as to the Attitude of the Two Countries—Sentiment as to the Philippine Question—Spain May Lose All—Instructions Not to Be Made Public.

Washington, Sept. 14.—Two important meetings of the cabinet were held Tuesday, at which the situation in the Philippines was carefully considered and an outline arrived at of the instructions which the peace commissioners will carry with them to Paris.

It was first decided that there should be no mistake as to the attitude of the two countries. The United States will treat with Spain as a conqueror with the conquered. This much is established, and the commissioners will be clearly instructed to this effect.

Cuba and Puerto Rico will not be subjects of negotiation, except incidentally. They were disposed of by the armistice, and the future government of Cuba will be established by the United States without reference to Spain's demands or wishes.

The Philippine question will be only partially open to negotiation. That is to say, Manila bay, with the capital of the island, Cavite and the Corregidor islands, must remain as the absolute property of the United States.

Sentiment of the Cabinet.

The sentiment of the cabinet is that while the bay is the important thing, military and commercial necessities would probably involve the whole island of Luzon, and this is likely to be the minimum of the American demands. The cabinet is nearly if not quite a unit on this point.

As to the rest of the Spanish islands there is some slight difference of opinion. It is agreed by the president and his advisers that the natives are not capable of self-government now and probably will not be for generations to come, so that the idea of an independent government with an American protectorate would be too much in the nature of a 99 year lease to be considered feasible.

The cabinet was also apparently agreed that Spain's misgovernment of the Philippines was practically the same as that in Cuba, and hence that the reasons which rendered necessary its abolition in the West Indies were equally potential in the China seas.

Spain May Lose All.

There is nearly unanimity of opinion that none of the Philippines shall revert to Spain. The disposition of the islands outside of Luzon is still open. The sentiment at the conferences was that military and commerce advantages would probably be complete with the possession of the Island of Luzon, and that in fact the problems of colonial government would be much easier if the United States did not control the other islands. It was felt, however, that the United States could not afford to select a part of the conquered territory likely to be pecuniarily profitable and then shrink from the burden and responsibility of bringing a civilized system of government to the whole group.

Not to Be Made Public.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The cabinet at its second session Tuesday continued the discussion of the instructions to be given to the American members of the peace commission. Although the document is practically agreed upon as a whole, the matter will be left open until the meeting here of the members of the commission, two days hence, when a final revision will be made. It is the president's wish as expressed to the cabinet members that nothing concerning the instructions be made public.

Thinks War May Reopen.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The opinion of Maj. Gen. Joseph Wheeler, that the war is not over, and that Spain will refuse to give up the Philippines until forced to do so, is shared by many army officers and by members of the cabinet.

President McKinley is not an optimist as to the continuance of peace, and he has insisted that the war department shall keep fully 100,000 volunteers in the service until the peace commissioners have succeeded in drafting a satisfactory treaty or have failed in this effort. The president has been importuned by senators, congressmen and governors to muster out particular regiments, but he has put his foot down and said that the war department shall maintain sufficient troops to be ready for any emergency, even that of resuming hostilities, in the event of failure to agree upon a settlement of the Philippine question.

Situation at Manila.

The officials at the navy and army department profess to feel more confidence than they have heretofore expressed regarding the present situation in the Philippine islands. In spite of all the disquieting reports that have come of late from newspaper sources indicating the existence of critically strained relations between the insurgents and the American forces of occupation, it is a fact that for three days past no word came to either state, navy or war departments from Manila until Tuesday. That was a message from Admiral Dewey asking authority from the departmental officers to purchase some fresh beef which would afford him a supply for three months. The admiral made no mention of any disturbance.

One reason for the confidence felt by the war department officials in a peaceable solution of the difficulties is their knowledge of the peculiar fitness of Gen. Otis, the American military commander, for the discharge of just such duties—diplomatic as well as military—as now confront him. The officials are confident that if by discretion and judgment a clash with the insurgents can be avoided without losing any of our advantages, Gen. Otis may be safely trusted to exhibit these qualities.

Death of Judge Cooley.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 13.—Judge Thomas M. Cooley, the eminent jurist and publicist, died at his home in this city yesterday, aged 74 years. He stood for years among the foremost members of the American bench and bar, was three times elected justice of the supreme court of Michigan, and his work on the supreme bench extends through 44 volumes of Michigan reports.

The Late Empress.

[The empress of Austria was born December 24, 1837. She was a daughter of Duke Maxmilian of Bavaria, and was married to Francis Joseph, emperor of Austria and king of Hungary, April 24, 1854. They had three children, Archduchess Gisela, who is married to Prince Luitpold, of Bavaria; Archduke Rudolph, who married Princess Stephanie of Belgium, and who was (seemingly) assassinated in 1889, and Archduchess Maria Valeria, who married Archduke Franz Salvator, of Austria-Tuscany. The late empress was an enthusiastic horsewoman.]

SINGULAR FREAK OF NATURE.

An Airquake in an Italian Town Which Caused a Great Deal of Damage.

The earthquake that took place in the Umbrian town of Rieti, on the Velino, in Italy, the other day was accompanied by a phenomenon of which the first meager account of the shock gave no mention. According to a correspondent of the Osservatorie Romano it was not an earthquake, but an "airquake." The air shook or vibrated like a violently agitated liquid; great rents were made in tall buildings and towers, and walls were thrown to the ground. The earth, however, seemed to be undisturbed, and no shifting of the street pavement was noticed. From the bishop down to the beggar, all seemed frightened. It is said that many felt the air vibrations and were thrown to the ground, while others were almost suffocated. A dense black cloud hung over the town while the phenomenon was passing. The church steeples, the savings bank, the theater, and no fewer than six palaces were more or less wrecked, as well as eighty or a hundred dwellings.

Five hundred tents have been sent to the place by the government. The people, in the meantime, are living in hastily-built huts and in the half-ruined post office and the churches. Soldiers have been sent from Rome to the scene of the disaster, and they, with the students, are busy policing the ruins and trying to save some of the household goods. King Humbert has sent 35,000 francs from his private purse to relieve the first necessities of the people. At the time of the catastrophe a slight earthquake, like a shudder, was felt in Rome. Even there, too, people say they noticed a peculiar convulsion of the air.

At the organization of the Columbian League of Michigan the membership was confined to the male sex. There was soon a clamor for the admission of ladies, and the supreme lodge finally decided to let each subordinate lodge decide for itself whether or not to admit them. Many lodges availed themselves of the opportunity at once, others waiting to note the affect. It was soon demonstrated that they were all that was needed to make the lodge room more homelike, adding grace, beauty and refinement to the meetings. Pinzon Lodge No. 15 of this place at their last regular meeting unaminously decided to open its doors to them and receive them into its membership upon the same qualifications and conditions as that imposed upon the other sex. They may also carry fraternal insurance in the same amounts and at the same rates.

La Grippe,

Followed by Heart Disease, Cured by DR. MILES' HEART CURE.

MR. C. C. SHULTS, of Winterset, Iowa, inventor and manufacturer of Shults' Safety Whiffletree Coupling, writes of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. "Two years ago an attack of LaGrippe left me with a weak heart. I had run down in flesh to mere skin and bone. I could not sleep lying down for smothering spells; frequent sharp darting pains and palpitation caused a constant fear of sudden death, nothing could induce me to remain away from home over night. My local physician prescribed Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and in a few days I was able to sleep well and the pains gradually lessened, and finally ceased. I reduced the the doses, having gained fifteen pounds, and am now feeling better in every way than I have for years."

PLAYERS OF POLICY.

Many Thousands of Them Are to Be Found in Washington.

A State of Affairs Which Is Demoralizing the National Capital and Breeding Criminals by the Score.

[Special Washington Letter.]

DESPITE the vigorous and incessant efforts of the police to suppress and prevent the nefarious practice of writing policy in the District of Columbia, the extent of the business and the amount of money daily thrown away by the player demonstrates the fact that the practice is yet one which numbers among its participants thousands of not only the lowest and most dissolute of the district's inhabitants, but in addition hundreds of men, women and boys who would blush and hang their heads in shame to have it known that they "played policy," as it is technically designated.

The drawings of the companies are telegraphed to its agents here in cipher, and are then put in printed form over in Virginia, and immediately afterward distributed in the district by their "writers." The drawings take place in Virginia, just across from the city, and are printed there.

The first move of a person desiring to play policy is to find a "policy writer."

Now the "writer," as may be inferred, is that agent of the company who receives and records the play desired to be made by the policy player, which he uses for the purpose of giving the player a record of the numbers played, a record book in which, by means of manifold and carbon paper, duplicate records of all plays written are made, and a dated stamp, with which all tickets given the player are stamped.

Strange as it may appear, in this land of newspapers, telephones and phonographs, people are found in great numbers who gamble in numerous ways. The national capital is infested and surrounded by devices for organized theft. The most popular of all is playing policy.

A FAIR WASHINGTON VICTIM OF THE POLICY HABIT.

For example, the plan of procedure observed by both the player and writer may thus be described: Seventy-eight numbers, running from 1 to 78, inclusive, are used in the drawing, 12 of which are drawn in the morning drawing and 13 in the evening drawing. The player informs the writer what numbers he desires to play; or, in other words, those numbers he (the player) bets will be drawn. The player at the same time, of course, hands the writer the amount of the bet. In no other gambling game under the sun is there such regard and respect for the limited means of the player, for a bet of even as small an amount as one cent will be accepted by the "writer." However, as the "writer" receives from the company 20 per cent. of the total of all bets taken by him, it is, of course, to his interest to have the bets as large and as many of them as possible. So it is, knowing well the common superstition of his patrons regarding the significance of dreams, he also provides himself with a "Dream Book," in which the anxious inquirer may find, as regards the right numbers to be played, a correct interpretation of all the dreams he may have. From one cent a bet may run almost as much higher as the player desires to go. It is known that a man who several years ago was convicted here of defrauding the government used to play as high a bet as $300. After the player has made his play he must, of course, await the result of the drawings. As stated above, there are two daily drawings, one about noon and the other about five p. m. As soon as they are printed the writers are provided with copies of them for general distribution among their patrons and such of the general public as may be trusted.

The object of the player is to foretell certain numbers which will appear in the drawing. Hence the usual practice of the player is to play a "gig." A "gig" is the naming by the player of any three numbers, from one to seventy-eight, which he believes will be drawn. For instance, suppose that the player believes that among the numbers to be drawn the following will appear in the morning drawing: 7-28-4, and he desires to back his belief to the extravagant amount of five cents. He so informs the "writer," hands him the amount and receives in return a little slip of white paper on which appear the numbers 7-28-4 and the amount of the bet made. On the back of the slip of paper the "writer" stamps the date of the play and also the drawing for which it is intended; that is, whether it is for the morning or evening drawing or whether, as is frequently the case, it is for "all day;" the term "all day," as will be naturally inferred, meaning that the play is intended for both the morning and evening drawing.

Supposing that the player has intended his play or bet for the morning drawing he would, should the numbers appear in that drawing, receive two hundred for one, or ten dollars for his five cents invested. If they should have been intended for the evening drawing, and should have appeared, he would receive one hundred and eighty for one, or nine dollars for his five cents invested. Now if he had played the numbers for "all day," and they had appeared in one of the two drawings for that day his winnings would have been proportionately lessened, because of the increased chances of success the two drawings would have given him. As many more numbers may be named by the player as he pleases, but the addition of every number above the usual three of a "gig" reduces, of course, the odds given if successful.

The player having made his play, which we will suppose was for the morning drawing, now awaits its result. The drawing having taken place about noon and the result having been duly printed on the little slips before mentioned, the "writer," who had returned to the Virginia headquarters of the company with his sheets and the receipts from the plays taken by him, now prepares to return to the city. But before leaving for the city the "hits" made with him, that is, the winning plays made on his record sheets, are carefully noted, the funds necessary to pay them are calculated and he is then provided by the company's agent with an amount of money large enough to pay all "hits." With his money and hundreds of printed copies of the drawing he then sets out on his return to the city. The "writer," if he has a fixed place for the transaction of his business, directs his steps towards that place, or if, as the case commonly is, he has no fixed place of business, but transacts it on the "fly," his patrons, knowing this, meet him as he wanders from point to point. In these ways the results of all drawings are distributed and winners paid. Such are the methods observed by the "writers" and the "players," excepting the fact, as before stated, that the "snide" or cutthroat concerns refuse the payment of big "hits," or indeed all others when they so see fit.

The players of policy number thousands of men, women and children of the district, and according to Detective Bloak, a recognized authority here upon all matters relating to policy playing, it is responsible for the commission of more crime than any other evil to be found. The players not only risk their money in a game in which the chances are heavily against them, but also, it is stated, are frequently cheated out of their winnings. For the means to engage in it, murders have been committed, robberies have been perpetrated, and steps taken which lead to ruin and disgrace. SMITH D. FRY.

Diseases of Children.

A PITIABLE CONDITION IN WHICH DEATH PREFERABLE.

A Fearful Disease which is Destructive to Little Folks—General Baffles Medical Treatment—A Remarkable Cure.

From the Evening Crescent, Appleton, Wis.

The story of a remarkable cure from a disease which has generally wrecked the lives of children, and left them in a condition to which death itself would be preferred has attracted a great amount of attention among the residents of the west end of Appleton, Wisconsin.

The case is that of little Willard Creech, son of Richard D. Creech, a well known employe of one of the large paper mills in the Fox River Valley. The lad was attacked by spinal disease and his parents had given up all hope of his ever being well again when, as by a miracle, he was healed and is now in school, as happy as any of his mates.

Mr. Creech, the father of the boy, who resides at 1062 Second Street, Appleton, Wisconsin, told the following story:

"Our boy had just become old enough to begin school when he began to act rather queer and finally we called a doctor who said the trouble was indigestion. The lad grew worse, however, and another doctor was summoned who at once pronounced the trouble spinal disease and put the boy on a stretcher. Other doctors were called in and there was a consultation. They all called it spinal disease and for a year one of them gave the boy treatment.

"He grew worse instead of better and was absolutely helpless. His lower limbs were paralyzed, and when we used electricity he could not feel it below his hips. Finally we let the doctor go as he did not seem to help our son and we nearly gave up hope. Finally my mother who lives in Canada wrote advising the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and I bought some though I had no hope of success where the doctors had utterly failed.

"This was when our boy had been on the stretcher for an entire year and helpless for nine months. In six weeks after taking the pills we noted signs of vitality in the legs, and in four months from the time we began the use of this medicine the boy was able to go to school. We kept him at home however fearing a relapse if he returned to school too early and for a year we gave him the pills regularly.

"It is two years since he took the first of the pills, and he is now nine years old. He is at school now and just as happy and well as any of the other children. "It was nothing else in the world that saved the boy but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

All of Mr. Creech's neighbors were cognizant of the work done by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and many of them are using the pills in their families.

The blood is the vital element in our bodies and consequently it must be kept pure, rich and red in order to have perfect health. The cause of little Willard Creech's sickness was disordered blood. He had skilled medical treatment but derived no benefit until Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People were used and these cured him.

This proves that this remedy is the true means of imparting those elements that enrich and vitalize and enrich the blood, thus stimulating bodily functions and arousing every nerve into healthful action and in this way reaching the entire system. That is the reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are so many diseases, why doctors prescribe them and why druggists recommend them and why they are so universally used.

A MATTER OF FAITH.

Many of the Clergy in Michigan Endorse the little conqueror.

Our religious opinions are, as a whole, a matter of faith. Whatever denomination or seal we follow we pin our faith on the words and teachings of our Pastor. His sincerity is never doubted; that he thoroughly believes his adopted creed is unquestioned. The opinions of the Clergy on any subject carry well deserved weight with all classes of people. Many reverend gentlemen in Michigan are testifying for the little conqueror, their praise is not given lightly and only after personal experience. Gratitude and a desire to promote the welfare of the public brings forth such testimony as follows:

The Rev. F. A. Smith, of 829 First street, Kalamazoo, Mich., says: "When I procured Doan's Kidney Pills I was, at the time, and had been considerably troubled with my kidneys. Backache was quite pronounced, being especially severe when I sat or stood in a stooped position for any length of time. Other symptoms usually attending disordered kidneys plainly indicated what caused the difficulty. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected the annoyance in a very short time and I have not noticed, up to date, any indication of a recurrence. As I took no other medicine there can be no doubt but Doan's Kidney Pills were the direct means of curing me. I am most favorably impressed with them."

At the Reformed church on Sunday morning at 10:30 a. m. the pastor will preach; topic, "The Death Sacrifice." The Lord's supper will be administered preceding the sermon. In the evening the sermon will be of a revival order.

RIDGEWAY.

Burt Lichols, of Adrian, was in the village Monday.

We are informed that next Sunday will close the present conference year.

Ward Preston has charge of the D. T. & M. depot during Agent A. J. Sutton's absence.

W. R. McCrimmon and Cyrus Palmer began a course at the State Normal at Ypsilanti Monday.

Undertaker S. P. Smith was called to Tecumseh Wednesday to attend the funeral of Mrs. Wm. Pilbeam.

Mrs. R. S. Houseman left for Big Rapids Wednesday for a visit with her sister, Mrs. R. J. Miller and family.

A. J. Sutton and wife went to Lansing Wednesday for a few days' visit with their daughter, Mrs. F. L. Cook and husband.

May Jones, accompanied by her mother, left for Brooklyn, N. Y., Friday night. May will attend the ladies seminary there the coming year.

The president of the Hall Library Association desires to call attention of its members to the fact that their annual dues are past due and as soon as convenient they would be pleased to receipt the amount.

Lewis Priest, who has been working at his trade in Detroit for some time, moved his family and household effects here the first of the week and will live in Mrs. Smith's house and work at his trade. As Mr. Priest formerly lived here and is well known, we will only say that all persons who need their shoes repaired can leave them at his shop, the old postoffice building, where they will receive prompt attention.

Geo. Wilkins, one of Lenawee county's pioneers, died at a little past noon Wednesday of last week in his 87th year. Geo. A. Wilkins was born March 20, 1812, in Orange county, N. Y., and settled in Macon township in 1832, where he lived until the death of his wife in the spring of '97, when he, with an adopted son, moved to the present home. He served in the Toledo war in 1835, and was a highly respected neighbor and citizen.

MACON.

Carpenters are at work on Mills Hatch new house.

Dr. W. F. Morden returned home from Canada last week.

H. D. Niblack and wife, of Clinton, Sundayed with Macon friends.

Rev. J. A. De Spelder, of Holloway, was calling on Macon friends last week.

Mrs. Claribel Pennington has been spending the week with friends at Addison.

Geo. Frost and wife and Mrs. Lavina Jackson, drove to Leslie Saturday and returned Wednesday.

Mrs. Percy Morgan and little daughter have been visiting relatives at St. Johns for the past two weeks.

Misses Mary and Mamie Pratt and Arthur Pratt have all been having a tussle with tonsilitis this week.

Mrs. John Koebbe entertained Mr. and Mrs. Will Catner and Mrs. Briggs from Clinton last week Thursday.

The W. C. T. U. will hold their next tea meeting Saturday afternoon, Sept. 24, at the home of Mrs. Myra Camburn.

Topic for Epworth League meeting Sunday evening Sept. 18, "The Wheat and the Tares," Matt. 13:24-30, 37-43. Leader, Blanch Mills.

Patrick Manning who has been visiting friends here for a number of weeks, returned to his home in Detroit the first of the week.

Will Carter, who has been here during the threshing season, left for his home near Bay City Monday. His father accompanied him.

An Entertainment Course will be given at Macon this winter under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor and Epworth League societies. By the union of the two societies better and more expensive talent has been procured than any one society would care to risk alone. The entertainments are to be furnished by the Central Lyceum Lecture Bureau. The course is to consist of five entertainments; the concert is to be given by the Leon Marx Concert Company. Mr. Marx, the violinist, has recently returned from four years of study in Europe, and again entered the concert field where he had previously won laurels. Another one of the four in the company is well known and popular reader, Miss Ada Greenwood. We feel that it is a high commendation of the Concert Company to know that they are engaged on the entertainment course at Adrian the coming winter, as is also the lecturer, Thomas McClary, on the Tecumseh course. The other entertainments are to be an evening with the Impersonator, Herbert Sprague, and lectures by E. B. Allen and Burritt Hamilton. The whole course of five entertainments is to be furnished at the extremely reasonable rate of one dollar a season ticket. Single tickets for each entertainment, with the possible exception of the concert, 35 cents. We feel sure of the support of all who enjoy a treat in the musical and lecture line, and at the same time wish to show themselves in sympathy with a high standard of entertainment for our town.

A Plain-Spoken Young Man Doubts the Sincerity of Two Chicago Street Preachers.

Two itinerant "preachers" in a wagon, elaborately attired and silk hatted and accompanied by a dozen or more women of assorted ages, caused a partial street blockade at the corner of Madison and Dearborn streets on a recent evening. Attracted by the singing and the powerful voice exhortations of the preachers, a crowd of boys of several hundred soon gathered about the vehicle, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

A prominent feature of the "service" was a collection taken up by half a dozen of the youngest of the women as soon as a considerable number of people had congregated.

Near the close of the meeting a well-dressed and intelligent-looking young man in the crowd created something of a sensation by stepping to the front and requesting permission to ask a question. The "preachers" seemed to have a suspicion that his intentions might not be honorable and sought to ignore him, but he persisted, and, pointing at the portly pair whom he was addressing, inquired in a loud voice

"Say, do you fellows ever try to help anybody except by preaching? Did anybody ever hear of your feeding the hungry or clothing the naked? If I caught either of you doing that once, instead of singing hymns in a white vest, swallow-tailed coat, and plug hat, I for one would feel a lot more like accepting your invitation to be a Christian."

Neither of the persons addressed attempted to make any reply to this eccentric broadside, but took their seats and the wagon quickly departed in search of pastures new.

SUPERSTITION OF SAILORS.

How It Was Manifested by British Tars at the Albion's Launching.

It has been said that, next to the savages and the infidels, sailors are the most superstitious portion of humanity. A few weeks ago, writes a London correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, when the new British warship Albion was launched, the bottle of rosewater—not of champagne, remember—with which the duchess of York was to christen England's proudest vessel, failed at the critical moment to break against the ship's bows. Immediately there was no end of ominous talk among the sailors about this abortive attempt at baptism. Mr. Ivey, the mayor of the place of launching, in commenting upon this fact, observed: "I have been a sailor myself, and I know what sailors are. There are plenty of them who would rather have three months of hard labor than serve on board that ship. If anything happens to her, they are sure to say at once that it was because she was not christened, and, in a way, it is quite true that accidents do follow evil omens. Suppose there is a storm. It is a critical time, and there is a superstitious man at the wheel. He needs all his nerve and coolness, but just at the critical time he remembers the bad omen. 'Ah,' says he to himself, 'that bottle didn't break. Something is sure to happen.' He loses his balance and something does happen. It is in that sort of way that these 'unlucky' incidents do really bring ill-luck."

PAID IN LIKE COIN.

How Pennsylvania Troops Are Evening Up Things with a Practical Joker.

A "practical" joker, well known downtown, is at present taking a good, hard dose of his own medicine. About two weeks ago he packed a dry goods box with old shoes, empty tin cans and other rubbish and sent it off to Tampa, Fla., consigned to one of the companies of the Third regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, with express charges collect. The soldier boys thought it was a box of supplies sent by some kind friends, and gladly paid the charges. Their chagrin in discovering the contents of the box may be imagined, says the Philadelphia Record.

But they have since been turning the tables with a vengeance. They learned the name of the joker, and for some time past nearly every man in the company has been writing a letter of thanks every day to the sender of the box. The letters are mailed with the soldiers' privilege of sending mail without stamps, postage to be collected from the receiver. The "joker" is paying two dollars a day in postage for the letters of thanks he is receiving, and he's wondering how much longer they will continue to come.

Odd Curative Treatment.

A Transvaal doctor is credited with the discovery of a new curative treatment. He asserts that he can cure persons of smallpox, fevers, diphtheria and many other maladies by simply wrapping them in milk sheets. The patient is laid on a mattress covered with blankets, and is packed in a sheet just large enough to envelop the body. The sheet has been saturated in a pint and a half of warm milk, and is applied to the body without wringing. After lying still for an hour thus swathed, the patient is sponged with warm water, or put into a warm bath for a few moments to remove the milk. The treatment is based on the germ-absorbing power of milk, and the idea of it is said to have been suggested by the fact that milk absorbs poisonous germs from a bucket in which it has been standing.

Among the score of stories that will appear in the five weekly issues of The Youth's Companion during September are two serials and two short tales of unusual interest. In "The Story of a Bee Farm" (begun in the issue of September 1) Edith Ames Fairfield tells how two girls fell by chance upon a new and pleasant means of livelihood. Jesse Lynch Williams in "The Freshman," tells how a young Illinois farmer struggled into Princeton, ran away and went back again. W. F. Skerrye's "You, Charles!" is a tale of the sea, describing the life of the common sailor in the forecastle.

Two articles of unusual interest relating to Prince Bismark appear in the September Magazine Number of The Outlook, just issued. One of them, "Bismark in His Home," is from the pen of Mrs. Susan W. Selfridge, who enjoyed unusual opportunities of acquaintance with Bismark. Mrs. Selfridge reports very freely and fully the table talk of Prince Bismark and his keen and sometimes scathing comments on some of his contemporaries. Particularly interesting are Bismarks remarks on the United States and its people. The second of the articles is by the Countess von Krockow, who brings out in a novel and readable way Bismark's character and personal experience of life, as shown by passages in his writings. Many little-known portraits of Bismark and reproductions of fine photographs of his residences add to the interest of the articles. ($3 a year. The Outlook Company, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York.)

Congressman Botkin's Statement
WASHINGTON, D.C., April 1, 1898.
Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, O.
MY DEAR DOCTOR:—It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative qualities of your medicines:

Hon. J. D. BOTKIN, Congressman-at-Large from Kansas.
Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin. I have been afflicted, more or less, for a quarter of a century with catarrh of the stomach and constipation; a residence in Washington has increased these troubles.
A few bottles of your medicines have given me almost complete relief, and I am sure that a continuation of their use will effect a permanent cure.
Pe-ru-na is surely a wonderful remedy for catarrhal affections.
J. D. BOTKIN.

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired, your song or words.
Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.
Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

RAILROAD NEWS.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

Brice has stolen another march on the Vanderbilts. He now has an entrance into Detroit. There is no longer any doubt that the wily railway magnate holds the key to the Lima Northern situation. In addition to the recent movement of Brice's agents in the receivership proceedings, the fact that the new Lima Northern shops are being built at Tecumseh, on the D., T. & M. tracks, is strong evidence. Does any one suppose that the Lima Northern would maintain shops on an independent line? Nobody would suppose that the management of the Lima Northern would be so foolish. Next to the building of the Nickel Plate, the gaining of an entrance into Detroit is the greatest achievement of Brice in railroad construction. For years the Vanderbilts have kept every large railway interest out of Detroit from the south. They have been able to dictate terms to all of the Ohio coal roads. The Pennslyvania made an attempt to gain an entrance into Detroit but the Vanberbilts put up such a fight that the Pennsylvania soon found that the overcoming of this opposition would cost more than it was worth. Brice was too wise to attempt the scheme under his own name. He sublet the project to C. N. Haskell. The movement proved to be a wise one. Mr. Haskell developed into one of the cleverest promoters that has operated this field for some time. He stirred up the people of Detroit in such a manner that he secured valuable terminals at an extremely low price. At the same time, the Vanderbilts thought there was not an interest of sufficient strength to ever give them any trouble. Haskell gave it out at every turn that Mr. Brice did not have anything to do with the Lima Northern. To make it stronger, the Lima Northern engaged in a little sham battle. All of this served to convince the Vanderbilt interest that it was folly to spend money in fighting the Lima Northern. It was thought that the Lima Northern would soon be at the end of its bank account and the property could be bought for less than it cost to build it. But let them or anybody else try to buy the property! They will soon discover that Mr. Brice will ask a good price for it. Mr. Brice has gained an entrance into Detroit, and he knows what it is worth. It will form a basis for him to complete his system of railways.—Toledo Daily Blade.

The next deal in the Brice properties will be the absorption of the Cincinnati Northern by the Lake Erie & Western stockholders have been favorable to the scheme for some time, but there has been positive opposition to the consolidation. It was claimed that this opposition grew out of the fact that the old C. J. & M. was never able to pay its interest, not to speak of dividends. The supporters of the consolidation idea claimed that the Ohio division of the C. J. & M., which is now the Cincinnati Northern, would be a paying investment. It was argued that the Ohio division was impoverished by the Michigan division of the old road. Since the Ohio division has been cut loose from the Michigan division, this argument has proved to be sound. The Cincinnati Northern is now in a very prosperous condition. It has developed that there is sufficient local business on the property to pay the interest on its bonded indebtedness. Furthermore, as the country develops and when the company secures better terminals at Cincinnati, the management has hopes of paying dividends. Of course this is not expected in the near future. The excellent showing of the Cincinnati Northern is making it a more desirable property for the Lake Erie & Western, the former would prove a far more valuable property. It would give the Lake Erie & Western an entrance into Cincinnati. This would form a good line from Cincinnati to Lake Erie, striking the lake at Sandusky, also one from Indianapolis.—Toledo Blade.

It has been given out on Wall street that the Lima Northern receivership is only the result of a quarrel between the contractor and a sub-contractor. The company, it is claimed, has nothing to do with it, and the matter will soon be settled. The disagreement, however, was of such a nature that a receivership was necessary.—Toledo Daily Blade.

When Johnnie comes Marching Home.

John McLeod, a young lad who has made his home with his uncle, M. Smeltzer, for the past few years, returned from Cuba Sunday evening via D. & L. N. from Detroit, after spending two weeks in a hospital at Boston where he was dangerously ill with typhoid malaria. He is a member of Co. L, 34th Mich., who did gallant fighting before Santiago, and is one of two or three, if not the only one, from Lenawee county who knows a Spaniard well by sight as well as the thievish traits of the ignorant class of Cubans with whom and for whom he braved the dangers of war where the hardest fighting was done.

This regiment, together with the 33rd, landed on Cuban soil June 30 and entered into battle on the morning of July 1st, doing their duty until the surrender of Santiago in a manner which did honor to themselves and their country. It is indeed interesting to hear one so fresh from active service as young McLeod relate his feelings upon going into battle. He said their first impulse was to duck and seek shelter from the storm of bullets, but after the first volley all sense of fear was lost, defeat not having been thought of. They operated their Crag Jorgens until they were so hot as to burn their hands, but had a glorious victory. Though not wounded McLeod did not realize how near he came to death until the fighting was over. He saw many of his comrades fall on the field, yet the nearest he came to being struck was when a bullet tore across the top of his shoe. He was too busy to pick up the bullet.

After the trenches and block-houses on San Juan hill were taken, he tore a strip from the shirt of a dead Spaniard as a souvenir, and after the surrender of Santiago, he gave some hard tack to a Spaniard for a curious watch and chain. The watch was afterwards "swiped" from him. He has been offered fabulous prices for the piece of shirting and the chain, but they are not for sale.

He greeted Hobson after being released from prison in Morro Castle and later entered the cell where Hobson was confined, all sides of which were made of stone and it was without a ray of light.

When the Michigan troops were ordered back to the States, McLeod's condition was such as to allow him passage on a hospital ship although his case was not serious at this time. They passed through the channel where the Merrimac was sunk by Hobson and his crew and viewed the wreck of Cevera's fleet, though little could be seen except the masts, smoke-stacks and in some cases the upper works. The voyage from Santiago to Boston took seven days during which time twelve officers and privates died on board from wounds and disease. Their remains were sewed in sacks, heavily weighted and buried at sea with military honors.

In speaking of the hardships connected with the service he states that they are many and hard ones too, but does not claim to be in a position to settle the blame causing so much comment unless it should rest upon the intermediate subordinates, but he does denounce the "yellow journalists." This young hero should be and is proud of his experience which will be of great benefit to him. He has orders at the end of his thirty days' furlough to report at Fort Wayne.

Cheap Excursion to Cleveland and Buffalo.

The Olin family excursion to Cleveland, O., and Buffalo, N. Y., will be run over the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railway, Sept. 29. Train leaves Tecumseh at 7:33. Round trip rate to Cleveland $5.10, to Buffalo $7.35. Tickets good thirty days. Passengers will change to special train at Adrian.

Mrs. Elizabeth Pilbeam.

Elizabeth Hitchings came of pure English ancestry. She was born in Birmingham, Eng., Apr. 16, 1828. At the age of fourteen she emigrated to the United States, coming with her parents direct to the township of Milan. In 1844 she was married to Wm. Doriell. At his death fifteen years after she was left with four children, which she kept together and educated. She was married to Wm Pilbeam in December 1866. To this union four children were also given. Two children only are still living, Joseph Doriell, of Macon, and Mrs. Geo. Smith, of this place. Mrs. Pilbeam has been a member of the Methodist church about fifty-five years. The funeral services were held at her late residence on Wednesday, her pastor, Rev. W. B. Pope officiating.

From Tecumseh to Goehner, Neb.

TO OUR FRIENDS: September 5th we left Tecumseh for the west by way of Toledo, St. Louis and Omaha. The route was new to us and somewhat out of our way, but it was the only one on which we could get the stop-off at the Trans-Mississippi Exposition.

Toledo was full of people and profusely decorated with flags and bunting, it being Labor Day. The mail carriers' convention was in the evening. There was a representation of a naval battle on the river at night, with a perfect fusillade of rockets and Roman candles; immense fire crackers exploded with a noise like heavy artillery. It was a splendid and realistic scene. After the battle there were some beautiful single pieces displayed—one, "Centennial City 1893," plainly an expression of Toledo's ambition for that year.

We left Toledo at 12:30 a. m., consequently seeing nothing of Ohio. The prairies of Indiana and Illinois along this route—the Clover Leaf—are tame; everything small, houses, crops, herds. Any ten miles along the route is a type of the whole. We crossed the great Eads bridge at St. Louis about 6 p. m. and soon entered the extensive sheds of the finest depot in the United States, the great Union depot. It is an immense stone structure of elegant architecture. On the second floor there are marble walls, great columns of a composition mostly made of onyx and floors inlaid with mosaic.

We crossed Missouri in the darkness of night and opened our eyes on the broken country near the Missouri river to greet the full day in the land of promise, Kansas. Verily it is a goodly land to look upon, here in the eastern part of the state, fine buildings, large herds, good crops. The road runs for miles parallel to the Missouri river and the scenery is fine. At South Omaha there are very extensive stock yards and from the car we could see thousands of cattle. Hammond has very extensive packing houses here and visitors are welcome.

Wednesday at 2 p. m. we reached Omaha. There are signs all over the city of "Rooms to Rent." Beds are 25 to 50c, meals from 15 to 25c. For 15 cts. you get tea or coffee, bread and butter, beefsteak, pork chop or sausage, potatoes, tomatoes and sauce. We have seen no poor bread in Nebraska. The enterprising dago is here with great piles of fruit on the street corners, bananas only 5c per dozen.

Saturday at 3 p. m. we left the city and arrived at our destination at 8 p. m. without accident. In my next I will endeavor to tell you something of the great exposition.

County Convention.

The democratic people's union silver convention for nominating county officers, and election of a chairman of the county committee, will be held at the court house, in the city of Adrian, Saturday Oct. 1, 1898, at 11 a. m. The officers to be nominated are sheriff, clerk, treasurer, prosecuting attorney, register of deeds, two circuit court commissioners, and two coroners. Each town and ward has six delegates, except Hudson city has seven, and Seneca and Tecumseh eight each.

J. L. O'MEALEY, Chairman.

Chicago Excursion—Lake Shore Ry.

Will be run over the Lake Shore Ry., Sept. 24. Tickets at $2.75 for round trip good on train leaving Tecumseh at 7:33 a. m. to Adrian thence on special train leaving at 9:30 a. m. Tickets good until Sept. 26 for return.

The War is Over

And now our thoughts are all of peace and home. There are, too often, people to be found who have no home, and it is to them these few words are addressed. If you really want a home you can easily get one, but you should act at once before the relapse from the war puts prices on the advance. In Marinette County, Wisconsin, the very finest farming land is to be had now at a most modest figure. Excellent home markets are at hand to take whatever the farmer raises, and good prices are given. These lands are on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, and full information concerning them will cheerfully be furnished by C. E. Rollins, Immigration Agent, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago.

Boston Excursion.

At half rates over the Lake Shore Ry. Sept 16, 17 and 18. Tickets good until Sept. 30th returning. Best route.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCAS:—The Democratic Peoples' Union Silver party of the township of Tecumseh will meet in caucus at the council building in the village of Tecumseh on Thursday evening, Sept. 22, 1998, at 7 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of electing delegates to the county convention of said party to be held in the city of Adrian, Saturday, Oct. 1, 1898. Dated Sept. 16, 1898.
BY ORDER OF COMMITTEE.

Jackson Patriot, 11: Secretary of War Alger told Chas. E. Townsend at Detroit Saturday that he could not see the way clear to muster out the 31st Michigan regiment. He said he should make every effort to discharge such regiments as seem to most need such action, but the welfare of the country relative to its new porteges should be considered first. Congressman Spalding, who was present, thought the law would permit the increase of the regular army to 75,000 men, which would be sufficient to garrison the conquered countries. Gen. Alger said nothing to Mr. Townsend which seemed to encourage the belief that the Thirty-first would soon be mustered out.

Miss Laila Knapp gave a very pleasant tea party Saturday evening to a number of her friends. As soon as the guests arrived they assembled in the parlor where the young ladies were auctioned off to the young men as partners for supper. After supper the evening was spent in games. HOW TO BE DAINTY.

A Quality Which Makes a Girl Appear More Charming Than Those Around Her.

Daintiness is that indefinable quality in a girl which causes her to appear more charming than those around her; it is an attribute that is seldom inborn, but the result of culture. She is certain of making a good impression where others ignominiously fail to do so, a fact which causes jealousy and makes those who are not dainty look on with envious admiration and wish that they too possessed the subtle charm. Daintiness, however, though not inherited, is the outcome of habit. A girl is dainty because she has been accustomed to give thought and time to being agreeable to others. Thus it comes natural to her. Her wealth of hair, always so glossy and carefully trained, owes its satiny appearance to the fact that she brushes it regularly and frequently, and not solely when she feels in a mood to do so, or when she desires to look extra nice. Her pretty, soft hands, with their shell-like pink nails, are always in an immaculate condition, for it is her habit and pride to keep them spotlessly clean. Her person appears to shed around her a fragrant perfume, delicate, yet quite perceptible. This subtle fragrance comes from her dainty way of putting her dresses into drawers which contain sachets of sweetly-smelling powder, the scent from which seems to be a part of herself. —Chicago Times-Herald.

THE GIRL'S ALLOWANCE.

It Is Her Right and, at the Same Time, Teaches Her the Proper Use of Money.

"Every self-respecting woman, be she maid or wife, has a natural and intense dislike to ask her father or husband for every penny she needs," says Edward Bok, writing in the Ladies' Home Journal, on "Giving Allowances to Girls." "Nor is the feeling lessened by the fact that the money can be had for the asking and is always given ungrudgingly. It is the asking which women dislike. They justly recoil from it, and men ought to understand it better than they do. It should be said that the husband who refuses to give his wife a regular allowance is rapidly becoming the exception. But there are still too many fathers who withhold an allowance from their daughters. If it be true that the average girl has no idea of the value of money, how will she ever gain a better knowledge of its worth unless she is given the opportunity? Our girls must be educated in money matters, and there is no surer method than by giving them money of their own to spend; a regular weekly or monthly allowance given them to cover certain regulated expenses. It is only natural that at the start a girl will spend foolishly. To meet this inevitable experience the amount of the allowance should be accordingly regulated. After awhile, however, when she gets accustomed to the handling of money, she will learn its value better and be more judicious in spending it. To give a girl an allowance is not a privilege, but her right. To withhold it is to do her a serious wrong, and likewise is an injustice to the man whom she will marry and whose money she will be intrusted with to spend wisely. She should have experience before she reaches that point, and that experience can only come to her from her father in an allowance of her own while she is his daughter in his home."

AMERICAN WOMEN IN THE PULPIT.

WOMEN as ministers is the subject of an interesting article in the Chautauquan by Rev. Anna Howard Shaw. Dr. Shaw writes without any feeling in the way of resentment against the churches that exclude women from their ministry. She is merely telling facts.

By the beginning of the twentieth century Dr. Shaw believes there should be at least 2,000 women preaching the Gospel in the United States. It is claimed by the United Brethren that it was their denomination that ordained the first woman in the Christian ministry. She is Rev. Lydia Sexton. Miss Sexton was given holy orders in 1851 and worked in the church as a minister until 1890. But it is generally accepted that the first ordination of a woman was that of Antoinette Brown, who was graduated from the theological school at Oberlin in 1850, but who was refused a license to preach. Of women ordained by the Congregational denomination attention is called to Rev. Annis Ford Eastman, now assistant to Rev. T. R. Beecher in Elmira.

There are but three ordained women in the regular Baptist church—Mary C. Jones, ordained several women, and women are admitted on equal terms as lay delegates to the general conferences. Dr. Shaw herself is a graduate of the theological school of the Boston university, and on being rejected as a minister by the Methodist Episcopal church she was ordained for the Methodist Protestant church in Tarrytown in 1880. The Methodist Episcopal church, although it never ordained women, licensed them until 1880. Even this concession was then repealed. Women, however, have acted and now act as evangelists and missionaries in the Methodist Episcopal church. Conspicuous among these workers is Elizabeth W.. Greenwood, national evangelistic superintendent of the W. C. T. U. Dr. Shaw says that it was the life desire of the late Frances E. Willard to be a minister, but her church would not permit it.

The first Universalist woman minister was Olympia Brown, ordained in 1863. Augusta J. Chapin is the only woman who was ever given the degree of D. D., although many have earned it. She is a graduate of Michigan university, and Lombard university honored her with the degree in 1893. Amanda H. Deyo was ordained in 1886. Phebe A. Hanford was ordained at Hingham, Mass., in 1868. Another Universalist woman minister is Rev. Florence Kollock-Crooker. She was a minister in Chicago for 14 years. She is now at Troy, N. Y.

Among Unitarian women ministers the oldest and best known is Mary A. Safford. Her work has been broadcast in Iowa. Her ablest lieutenant was Elinor Gordon. Caroline Bartlett Crane has made the church at Kalamazoo noted throughout the country. Ida C. Hultin, ordained in 1886, has been for six years preaching to one charge in Moline, Ill. Marion Murdock has had fine success with Unity church in Cleveland. Her associate is Florence Buck, both graduates of Oxford university, England. Eliza Tupper Wilkes has founded churches in several western states. She was ordained in 1871. Emma M. Booth-Tucker is mentioned as one of the ablest women preachers in the country. Dr. Shaw closes her article with a strong appeal for justice to women who feel called on to preach the Gospel.

An Excellent Precedent.

A Berlin civil court in a suit brought by a dressmaker for the payment of an expensive dress, to which the defense was that the dress did not fit, after making the defendant wear the garment in court, decided that she shoud not pay; on the ground that when a dressmaker asks as much as 250 marks ($62) for a dress, the price implies that the fit shall be perfect.

Pretty Table Decoration.

Two pretty ideas in table decoration come to us fresh from abroad, and are well worth copying. One is a delightfully novel decoration, formed by ribbon twisted in and out, forming a link between tiny nosegays laid simply on the cloth. When flowers are plentiful, why not carry out the same idea with chains of flowers?—What-To-Eat.

Nevada Woman Lawyer.

Miss Gertrude G. Grey has been admitted to the bar of the supreme court of Nevada at Carson City. We are informed, says the Legal News, by those who witnessed the examination that Miss Grey's answers to the 30 questions propounded to her were exceptionally good. She is the second woman to be admitted to the Nevada bar.

FARM & GARDEN.

IMPROVED CORN HOUSE.

It Is Inaccessible to Rats and Mice Because There Is No Hiding Places Under It.

I notice that many farmers suffer a great waste from vermin in the corn-crib, and frequently it is very serious. Rats are especially a great enemy in this respect. Unless the cornhouse is so made that there are no hiding places, it is imposible to dislodge the rats from their retreat.

The cornhouse, shown in end of view, is made so it is inaccesible to rats or mice, and there are no hiding places beneath it. It is elevated three feet above the ground on firmly set stone posts, neatly dressed. The cribs may be made from six to eight feet wide and of any desired length. For 4,000 bushels of corn in the ear, the building should be

AN IDEAL CORN HOUSE.

40 feet long with cribs eight feet wide and 12 feet high. In building this, one should use six by eight timber for sills and two by eight joist.

The floor is made of two by three, laid one-half inch apart so as to admit the free circulation of air among the corn. The studding should be two by six, set three feet on centers, with two by four girts notched into the studding. The ends of this building are sided with one-eighth-inch matched drop siding put on horizontally, except the gable, which is put on vertically with the ends notched as shown in cut. The sides are covered with one by three-inch strips set one-half inch apart, and are put on vertically. The space between the cribs is 12 feet wide, and is closed inside from the bottom of the cribs to the ground, forming an inside shed which is not accessible to any farm animals. This inner shed is closed by rolling doors at each end. The cribs are boarded up inside the shed with three-inch strips, placed horizontally, one-half inch apart, to admit air, and by opening the doors free circulation of air can be obtained in fine weather.

Above the shed it is floored over, forming an apartment 12 feet wide by 40 feet long for storage of corn. A trap-door may be made in this floor to hand up corn from below. The shed between the cribs will make a splendid storehouse for implements. As many doors may be made in the cribs as desired.—Charles H. Hickox, in Ohio Farmer.

BUILDING A CISTERN.

Why Cheap Methods of Construction Should in No Circumstances Be Employed.

When making a cistern the same rules as to doing the work in the best possible manner apply as when building a house. If expenditure cannot be afforded to make a large reservoir, without cheapening the work, make it small and perfect. There are, of course, some methods of construction cheaper than others, and the cheaper as good as the more expensive, so far as utility is concerned, the extra outlay being for surface appearance. There may be cases where they have stood well made in this way, but it is risky. Build up good brick walls, well cemented, and use a stone cap and then you have a certainty. When the size for the cistern has been determined upon, take a stick—a strip of board—and bore two holes through it as far apart as half the circumference of the place to be dug, then through these holes drive pins a few inches long, and use this as a sweep for marking the circle upon the surface. Dig down, making the sides as smooth and true as possible. If the cistern is to be jug shaped, begin to draw in when half the desired depth has been reached. A flat stone should be put in the bottom, if convenient to do so, with a basin dug out of the center; then the brick wall, commenced at the margin of the basin. Do not use soft bricks. Sooner or later they will slack down from moisture absorbed from the soil, and make the cement on the water surface unsecure. Use arch brick, at least those that are made from good clay and well baked. One can readily tell by the looks or testing with a hammer whether fit for use in a cistern or not. After laying the bricks in good cement, the wall should be coated with plaster, made as follows: Clear, sharp sand, well screened, two parts, and water, cement, one part.—Western Plowman.

Farmers Are Great Readers.

According to late statistics the American farmer is becoming an omnivorous reader of agricultural literature. Prior to 1894 the total number of farmers' bulletins issued by the department of agriculture was 540,000. In 1894 the number used was 278,500; 1895, 1,567,000; 1896, 1,891,000, and in 1897, 2,387,000. The superintendent of the division of publication says that the demand for literature is steadily increasing, and that this increase seems likely to continue until every one of the 5,500,000 farmers of the United States is provided with literature sent out by the department bearing upon agriculture.

WHEAT AFTER CORN.

Good Rotation Where Proper Pains Are Taken in the Preparation of the Ground.

When a regular system of rotation is carried out with the different crops it may be necessary to have wheat follow corn. This is a very good plan where proper pains are taken in preparation of the soil.

The corn should be cut off as soon as a sufficient maturity has been reached. If the weather is dry and the fodder is put up in reasonably small shocks it can be cut as soon as the grain begins to harden well, or a part of the shock can be cut and put up and allowed to dry, partly at least, before putting up a full shock. One advantage in putting up in small shocks is that the corn will dry out quicker and can be shocked and cribbed earlier than if in large shocks. But when the land is to be sown to wheat, it is generally best to put up the corn in good-sized shocks in order to save room.

With a good corn harvester it is not so much work to put up the corn in good-sized shocks as when it is done by hand. It is always an item to cut the corn reasonably close to the ground, as the corn in the shocks is less liable to be injured. Then the stalk stubs will not interfere so much with the work of preparing the soil as when the stalks are cut off high.

When thorough cultivation has been given the corn during growth, so that the weeds have been kept down and the soil is in good tilth, one of the best ways of preparing the soil for wheat is to go over it carefully with disk harrow, cutting about four inches deep; then fine and level the surface with a good smoothing harrow. In most cases this is all the work necessary and the soil is ready for the drill.

One of the objections to sowing wheat after corn is that the plowing must be done late and the soil is left too loose and mellow, too deep and the wheat plants freeze out badly.

When the drill is used on a loose, loamy soil, in many cases a thorough harrowing that will fine and level the surface, leaving the under soil undisturbed, is all that is necessary to fit the ground for the seed.

In all cases it will pay, however, to harrow, and if necessary roll and drag the ground until three or four inches of the surface is thoroughly prepared.

With wheat as with all other crops, thorough preparation of the soil before seeding is essential to good germination and a good start to grow. By cutting the corn early—as soon as it is sufficiently matured the better—opportunity is given for preparing the land in good tilth and of sowing the seed in good season.—St. Louis Republic.

HANDY FARM GATE.

It Is Strong and Light, Easily Constructed and Not Apt to Get Out of Order.

I present a plan for making a light and handy farm gate. It is made of one by three-inch strips dressed to seven-eighths of an inch in thickness. I use hemlock. The gate post (A) is three by five inches. I mortise the three long boards, the middle one being marked B, and run strap to the hinge through mortise on top board and fasten with a one-fourth-inch bolt. D is square, and goes through the post with burr on end. The reason for having it square is so that it will not turn in the post. The short post which sits level with top of ground wants a hole bored and a piece of gas pipe inserted for the lower hinge, which is made on strap and bolted to A for a stay.

I used galvanized twisted wire, using two strands and twisting after putting on. This makes the gate strong, light and durable.

F is a wire running through gate. I use for a fastener a slide with a slot; it works on a bolt running through at G, so when the gate is closed it will drop into the slot and cannot get away. I also use a cap on the gate.—Ohio Farmer.

ALL AROUND THE FARM.

It should not be necessary to state that feed imparts flavor to meats. Good meat cannot be made from bad feed.

Confine the pruning of gooseberries principally to thinning out main branches and cutting out weak and exhausted parts.

Plants will starve in any soil, however fertile, unless water is present to dissolve the food elements and prepare them for the plant's use.

We almost murder our lands by pasturing them too closely. How many pastures there are that are about as smooth and as even as a skating rink floor.

The first business of every young farmer should be to secure a spot upon which he can stand and proclaim to the world that these acres more or less broad are his.

As much care should be taken to keep water away from a well-constructed road as is taken to keep it out of the cellars of houses or from leaking through the roof.

The present system of paying highway taxes, figuratively designated as "working them out," is admittedly bad and can be easily remedied, but an attempt to make a change in this direction would undoubtedly meet with opposition.—Western Plowman.

To the Rescue.

If BattleAx PLUG was in danger there would be an army of men (who chew it) ready to rescue it:—large enough to shovel Spain off the map of Europe. No other chewing tobacco in the world has ever had so many friends.

JUDGE COOLEY IS DEAD.

Jurist Whose Fame Was World-Wide Expires at His Home in Ann Arbor.

HE SUCCUMBS TO ATTACK OF PARESIS.

A Noted Authority on Constitutional Law and Writer of Many Legal Works—A Member of the Supreme Court of Michigan for Twenty-One Years.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sep. 13.—Judge Thomas M. Cooley, the noted jurist and constitutional lawyer, died early Monday at his home. Three months ago he returned from a private sanitarium at Flint, Mich., where he had been treated chiefly for mental weakness. He was then so much improved in mental health that he was able to recognize acquaintances. He realized his weak physical condition and his failing mental abilities, and often expressed a wish that death would come. Several weeks ago he relapsed into a comatose condition. During the ensuing interval the only intelligible utterance he made was once when he inquired for his oldest son.

Life of Judge Cooley.

[Thomas McIntyre Cooley had had a distinguished career in jurisprudence, mounting step by step to an exalted rank among legal writers and gaining the highest appointments on the bench of the state of Michigan.

The eminent jurist was born in Attica, N. Y., January 6, 1824. He removed to Michigan in the year of his majority, and two years later was admitted to the bar.

The first tribute to his genius came in 1857, when at the age of 35 he was appointed to compile and publish the laws of the state, and in 1858 he was made reporter of the decisions of the supreme court. He held this position for several years, during which time he published eight volumes of reports, followed by a digest of all the decisions of the state. The University of Michigan organized its law department in 1859 and the young lawyer was chosen one of its professors. Later he became dean of the faculty and held the position until 1885, after which he was for three years professor of constitutional history in the same university. He was also a lecturer for three years on governmental subjects at Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore.

During these years of pedagogy he was holding distinguished judiciary positions. In 1864 he was appointed to fill a vacancy on the bench of the supreme court of the state and retained the position for 21 years, being part of the time chief justice.

The United States circuit court at Chicago made him receiver for the Wabash Railway company in 1887. He took the management of the road upon himself, but resigned it after a few months' service to accept an appointment on the interstate commerce commission for the regulation of railroads. He took his commission at the earnest solicitation of President Cleveland and was made chairman of his associates, holding the office for four years.

Among the works published by Judge Cooley are "The Constitutional Limitations Which Rest Upon the Legislative Power of the States of the American Union," in 1868, and which has gone through several editions; an edition of Blackstone's "Commentaries," in 1870; and of Story's "Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States, with Additional Chapters on the New Amendments," in 1873; "Law of Taxation," in 1876; "Law of Torts," in 1879; "General Principles of Constitutional Law in the United States," in 1880, and "Michigan, a History of Governments," in 1885.]

LOTS OF WHEAT.

Reports of Thrashers Show the Yield in Michigan to Be Larger Than Ever.

Lansing, Sept. 10.—Reports of 7,317 jobs of thrashing, aggregating 115,827 acres, indicates an average yield of 19.64 bushels of wheat an acre. The area of wheat in the state last May was 1,725,448 acres, making Michigan's yield this year 34,162,563 bushels. This is more than ever before reported. Thrashers 'returns indicate that oats will yield 32 bushels and barley 24 bushels an acre. This is seven and five bushels, respectively, above last year's estimate. Beans will yield 69 and potatoes 72 per cent. of an average crop. Corn, beans, potatoes and pastures have been injured by dry weather. Apples promise six-tenths and peaches three-quarters of an average crop.

SMALL CHANGE SCARCE.

Shortage of Quarters and Halves in Grand Rapids Due to the Peach Trade.

Grand Rapids, Sept. 10.—The local banks report a great shortage upon silver quarters and half dollars. Merchants who sent to the banks for change were informed that none could be had, and the Chicago banks will have to be drawn upon. If they cannot respond immediately the subtreasury will be applied to. The shortage is said to be due to the great peach trade in the last few days, the farmers carrying the money off into the country.

BLOODY DEEDS.

Jesse Badgerow Kills Wife, Her Sister and Self—Ezekiel Lazette Commits Murder and Suicide.

Grand Rapids, Sept. 12.—Jesse Badgerow completed a triple tragedy Saturday night by stabbing himself to the heart. He was a young farmer of Georgetown, Ottawa county, about ten miles from here. His relations with his wife, whom he married six years ago, were unpleasant. A week ago she returned to the home of her father, John Alesworth, and took her two-year-old son with her. Saturday, accompanied by her sister, Lucy Alesworth, aged 17, and her baby, she came back to get her share of the household effects. There was a dispute over the division. Badgerow attacked his wife with a long double-edged hunting-knife and killed her. Then he attacked her sister and inflicted wounds from which she died Sunday. Officers traced the murderer to his brother's barn, and when they entered he drove the knife into his own breast.

Wyandotte, Sept. 12.—While in a fit of drunken jealous rage Sunday Ezekiel Lazette, aged 45, shot and instantly killed his wife and then turned the revolver on himself, inflicting a wound from which he died in an hour. Lazette had for some time been jealous of his wife, and a few days ago assaulted her in their home. Mrs. Lazette had him arrested for this, but he secured bonds and was released from jail. Saturday night he was drinking and came to the house where his wife was living and demanded entrance. He was driven away by neighbors. Sunday morning he came back again, broke in the back door and committed the crime. His two sons, who were asleep upstairs at the time, heard the shots, jumped from the window of their room and ran for help. When the house was reentered Mrs. Lazette was found dead and Lazette was lying on the floor, dying, with the revolver on his breast.

NEW OPERA HOUSE OPENED.

Detroit People Display Their Appreciation of Secretary Alger and Gen. Duffield.

Detroit, Sept. 13.—The handsome new Detroit opera house contained its first audience Monday night. It was a representative gathering of the wealth and intelligence of the city, and the debut was made the more notable by the presence of Secretary of War Alger and Brig. Gen. Duffield, both of whom were obliged to address the audience. De Koven and Smith's "The Highwayman," sung by the Broadway theater opera company, of New York, had the honor of giving the first performance. When Gen. Alger, with Mrs. Alger and his son, entered their box there was a storm of applause. After the first act the general, responding to repeated calls, thanked his friends for their hearty welcome, and said that while he would rather have avoided speechmaking he had never retired under fire. The audience continued cheering, and Gen. Alger, pointing across the theater, said: "There's a hero of Santiago over in that box." Calls for Duffield brought the general to his feet with a modest speech. The new opera house is built upon the site of the one which burned a year ago. Its interior decorations are reproductions of the style of Francis I., the most elaborate renaissance known, and the walls, ceilings and supports are masses of sharply contrasting but generally harmonious effects, brilliant reds and blues predominating.

OLD METHOD UPSET.

Appointees to Fill Vacancies in Michigan Can Only Serve Until the General Election.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 14.—Attorney-General Maynard in an opinion rendered Tuesday night decides that appointments made by the governor to fill unexpired terms of elective officers cannot hold beyond the next ensuing general election, and thus upsets both the theory and practice that has been in vogue in Michigan for years. E. Finley Johnson, of Ann Arbor, a member of the state board of education, and two regents of the university, George A. Farr, of Grand Haven, and Col. H. S. Dean, of Ann Arbor, according to this opinion cannot hold their offices after the November election unless reelected. This will make three more state officers to be voted for at the next election. Gov. Pingree has ordered the secretary of state to place the names of candidates for these offices on the official ballot.

MICHIGAN'S OLDEST MAN.

Henry Banks, a Colored Resident of Bangor, Celebrates His One Hundred and Fifth Birthday.

Niles, Sept. 12.—Henry Banks, of Bangor, celebrated his one hundred and fifth birthday Sunday. The old man, who is colored, is the oldest person in Michigan. He was born in Louisiana, and in his younger days was a slave. When a babe in Louisiana he was sold for $150 and when grown up large enough to ride his master's horse was sold for $1,000. Banks' owner and a neighbor slave-holder had a quarrel, and to this he owes his freedom. The latter, in revenge, assisted Banks to escape by the underground railway route to Canada. The old man was an eye-witness of the battle of New Orleans.

Holding Their Wool.

Lansing, Sept. 10.—Over half a million pounds of wool are stored in southwestern Michigan; the Sterns, of Kalamazoo, with their branches at Marcellus and Allegan, having over 400,000 pounds, and Mark Oppenheimer, a Dowagiac buyer, has 100,000 pounds. It is being held for better prices, although it could be sold now and pay a handsome profit.

ALGER AT HOME.

McKinley's Secretary of War Arrives in Detroit, Mich.—He Is Enthusiastically Received.

Detroit, Sept. 12.—A public reception and parade were tendered Secretary Alger by the citizens of Detroit and Michigan generally in this city late Saturday afternoon. The line of march embraced many of the downtown streets, and the parade was witnessed by a vast number of people.

While the reception accorded to Gen. Alger in the streets was a notable one, the demonstration in the Light Guard armory transcended it. The armory was filled with G. A. R. men, a detachment from company M, Thirty-third Michigan volunteers, lately returned from Cuba, representatives of various other military organizations and private citizens. The gallery was filled with women. Congratulatory speeches were delivered by Gov. Pingree and others. All of the speakers declared that Gen. Alger's conduct of the war department was deserving of the greatest credit, not only from the people of Michigan, but all over the United States, and they denounced the general's maligners. Gen. Alger, amid tremendous applause and cheering, delivered an eloquent address, in which he defended the work done by the war department during the late war with Spain, paid a high compliment to Gov. Pingree and eulogized the volunteer soldier.

A Notable Visitor.

Kalamazoo, Sept. 10.—The dedication of the Nazareth academy in this city will occur September 22, and on that occasion Kalamazoo will entertain a distinguished visitor in the person of Apostolic Delegate Archbishop Martinelli, of the legation at Washington, who will officiate. This will be his first visit to Michigan. Bishop Foley, of Detroit, will also be present, as well as other notables of the Catholic clergy. Nazareth academy was erected in this city nearly a year ago at a cost of nearly $50,000, and is situated two miles east of the city on a beautiful elevation.

Will Make Sugar October 3.

Bay City, Sept. 10.—The Michigan Sugar company states that its new beet sugar factory will begin the manufacture of granulated sugar on Monday, October 3. The factory has a capacity for turning out from 70,000 to 80,000 pounds of sugar per day. It will be kept in operation until all of the sugar beet crop is exhausted. This will be the first time in the history of this state that sugar has been made within its borders.

CHIPMUNKS IN A CEMETERY.

They Are Increasing So Rapidly in Brooklyn's Greenwood That a Trapper May Be Called In.

Greenwood cemetery is suffering for the second time in its history from a too great increase in its colony of chipmunks. Eighteen years ago they became such a nuisance that a trapper was employed, and 28,000 small, striped pelts were the results of his first year's work, says the New York Sun.

This year it was noticed that an unusual number were about, even in the early spring, when the chipmunks first appear after a winter's sleep. Now it is estimated that there are at least 20,000 chipmunks in the cemetery, and a great deal of damage has been done. Through their burrowing habits they have undermined the gravestones, and even in many cases caused graves to sink in, when rainwater has helped to hollow out their burrows.

The chief enemies of the chipmunks are the florists, for the animals nip growing plants at the roots to reach the sap. One Brooklyn florist says that since Decoration day he has had to put in 250 new plants to keep up an original plat of 150. Florists with contracts to keep graves in condition have entered strong protests, but outside florists, who work by the piece, have been making money.

The eight special policemen on the grounds have been furnished with poisoned nuts to scatter about. No diminution has yet appeared in the chipmunk army, as they reproduce three or four times a year and increase fourfold in a season if not checked. But if poison fails another trapper may be called in.

TAUGHT HIM A TRICK.

A Tricky Dealer in Fruit Pays Dearly for a Lesson in Sorting His Berries.

"Fairest side to Boston," suggested a young man who stood watching the proprietor of a downtown fruit stand who was engaged in repacking a case of strawberries, placing the small and decayed ones in the bottom of the boxes, the large and luscious ones on top, says the Chicago Chronicle.

"We have to do that, young fellow," was the reply. "Everybody expects to be cheated a little and I hate to disappoint them."

"Come, now," said the loiterer, as he approached the stand. "I worked last season in a South Water street store and can show you a trick that will double your profits."

"I don't see how it can be done, for I'm a pretty close figurer myself. What do you want for the pointer?"

"I'll take a box of berries. The secret is this: You want to grade your fruit." The young man emptied six boxes upon the stand and rapidly filled one of them, selecting the larger berries. "Out of a 24-box case you can get four boxes that you can sell for ten cents each. See?"

"And how will I dispose of the other 20 boxes?"

"You'll have to consult a peddler on that point; it's out of my line. I'll take these," and the dispenser of South Water street secrets seized the box of selected fruit and hurried around the corner.

A LITTLE HASTY.

That's What the Lieutenant Thought About Burying the Dead, But It Didn't Prove So.

One night Chaplain Jones, of the Texas, heard volley firing on the Cuban coast, which was being guarded by the blockading squadron, and was told that marines were being landed from the Marblehead. The next morning, says the Buffalo Express, Capt. McCalla came alongside of the Texas in his launch and announced that four of his men had been killed and that there was still fighting. Chaplain Jones then approached Capt. Philip and said that he would like to go ashore and look after the wounded and read the services for the dead. Capt. Philip gave instant permission, and the chaplain prepared to go ashore with a boatload of marines that was in charge of a young lieutenant. As the worthy chaplain clambered over the side of the Texas the lieutenant looked up from the boat and called out:

"Where are you going?"

"Lieutenant," replied the chaplain, "I am going to bury the dead."

"For goodness sake give us a chance to get killed first," rejoined the officer.

"Lieutenant, I am going to bury the dead that have already fallen," responded the chaplain, whereupon the lieutenant quickly replied:

"I beg your pardon, chaplain, I was too hasty."

Dickens' Pilgrimage.

One of the latest ideas in London is a Dickens pilgrimage. An admirer of the novelist intends personally conducting a party of all who care to join him in a perambulating pilgrimage to the spots in London hallowed by their association with the writer. The programme makes a start from Devonshire terrace (where Dickens lived from 1839 to 1856), and passing Harley street, Wigmore street, Wimpole street, Welbeck street and Gower street, arrives at Tavistock square. Thence the route continues to Great Ormond street, the Foundling, Doughty street, Gray's Inn, Kingsgate street, Lincoln Inn Fields and Furnival Inn. Several of the places lived in or referred to by Dickens will be viewed, some for the last time before demolition.

Kioto, Japan, formerly regarded as the sacred city of the mikado, is being thoroughly westernized, having adopted the overhead trolley and electric lighting.

LOVE MAKING.

In These Days If Done in the Open, Without Any 'Arry and 'Arriet Business.

Billing and cooing are as much a part of summer time diversions as eating ice cream or drinking soda water, but billing and cooing "in evidence" are confined to social strata in which the fashionable maid and man have not the slightest concern, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

In fact, ultra-smart romancers romance so elegantly that unsympathetic daws find little chance to peck at their hearts.

Climb as high as you may the heights of common sense and you will fail to discover wandering in the dale of amatory foolishness a single couple belonging to really good society willing to afford the slightest chance to the curious for funmaking.

Sentimentalists gaze in amazement at the latest victims of love's dream. There is a blissful maid, an enamored lover. The pair eschew shadowy corners. They court electric lights. They are the center of the gayest midsummer groups.

Why? Because shying away from friends and relatives, watching feverishly for a chance to look into each other's eyes, hold each other's hands and whisper silly nothings into each other's ears has too much of 'Arriet and 'Arry mannerisms to suit these modish young people.

This late century love-making is delightful to those who must fill the unenviable position of onlookers. There is no greater misery than being obliged to put up with the selfishness of a spoony pair blind or indifferent to their duties to polite society.

The new order of affairs may well cause interested people to rejoice. A reserve so excessive that a match may be made and the wedding arrangements completed without anybody being the wiser brings a distinct blessing to all parties concerned.

THE LATE-STAYING CALLER.

He Absolutely Forces Host and Hostess to Utter Falsehoods and Things Uncomplimentary.

Friend Staylate makes a call in the evening. Conversation blithe and joyous, and repeated requests for him to remain yet a little while, lead him, not at all unwilling, to prolong his visit, writes Robert J. Burdette, in Ladies' Home Journal. He looks at his watch with a gasp of genuine dismay, and hurries away slowly at last with profuse apologies for keeping us up until such an hour. "Oh, indeed, no!" choruses the entire family. "This is early for us! We never think of going to our rooms until an hour later than this." Friend Staylate loiters a moment after he gets outside the gate. Slam goes the door; bang! wang! slam! go the shutters, calling harshly to each other: "Thought that fellow never would go!" Bang! "Why didn't he stay all night?" Slam! And the rattle of the chain cries: "Gone at last!" The darkness of the dungeon settles down on the house; the family has gone to bed, having relieved its mind by doors and shutters that are ready to tell the truth any time they are given a chance.

Cold Tea for Soldiers.

Now that alcohol has been tabooed in the army and navy of some of the leading nations of the world, the question has arisen what is the best drink with which the soldier can quench his thirst? Many distinguished Indian commanders have testified in favor of tea as a thirst-allayer when on a long march in equatorial lands. The men under the leadership of Sir Herbert Kitchener during the recent campaign in the Soudan, who were allowed no alcoholic stimulants whatever, performed their long journey through the desert on cold tea, and fought splendidly at the end of it. Tiger hunters in India, who are often subjected to intense heat in the thick jungles, invariably use cold tea as a drink. It is now proposed that our army in Cuba should be allowed to follow the example of their British brethren in arms in India and Egypt, and fill their canteens with tea instead of water.

THE RETURN OF OUR SOLDIER BOYS.

A Scene Which Is Now Being Witnessed Daily in Scores of Western Towns.

ELECTRIC LOVE ALARM.

How a Suspicious English Father Detected the Flirtations of His Daughter.

The ingenious father of an estimable young lady in Sheffield recently rigged up a clever contrivance by which he discouraged a certain young man who had been accustomed to make love to his daughter, says Pearson's Weekly.

The old gentleman recently caught the young man and the girl sitting rather close together on the sofa. He read the girl a lecture and made her promise not to let the young man sit beside her on the sofa again.

He was a bit suspicious, and decided not to trust the girl's promise, so he called in an electrician to carry out a little scheme of his. A contact plate was fitted just under the cushion of the sofa and another to the bottom of the frame in such a way that when the weight of two persons bore down upon the top plate it would touch the other and close the circuit.

Wires were run from the plate to the old man's bedroom, where, as soon as the circuit was closed, a small bell would ring. All this was done without the knowledge of the girl.

The next night the young man called again, and everything was as it should be until the old folks retired, about ten o'clock. About half an hour later the bell upstairs rang furiously. The old man sneaked downstairs and caught the lovers snuggling very close together on the sofa.

The young man escaped with his life, fortunately, but the poor girl is locked up on a diet of bread and water.

It's easier for us to see the faults of others than it is for others to see our virtues.

After a woman has passed a certain age she is willing to get married on Friday.

HAS INFINITE PATIENCE.

A Jersey City Railroad Man Who Obligingly Answers 10,000 Questions a Day.

Some men are great in silence, some are grand in talk. The Pennsylvania Railroad company has a man in charge of its bureau of information in Jersey City who answers on an average 10,000 questions a day, and the person does not live who has seen his feathers rumpled. Remarkable man! The traveling public can ask more fool questions than any other public on earth; but to interrogate stupidly, foolishly, idiotically or otherwise R. B. Caldwell is to discover a reversal of the Biblical injunction to answer a quick wit according to asininity. Over 300 trains go and come daily at the Pennsylvania station, and all these Caldwell must have at his tongue's end, as well as a complete map of the universe, says the New York Press.

Caldwell is everyone's main dependence. I have heard people inquire after lost parcels. I have heard others ask: "Have you seen a man around here looking as if he expected to see some one?" "Did a long, thin chap with eyeglasses leave a message here for me?" "Did a young woman with a child tell you she expected her husband to arrive on the Chicago limited? I'm the man." Caldwell knows at sight every politician that travels, every prominent man in public life, every regular and nearly every irregular patron of his road. Being a man of varied knowledge he is in demand among his fellows when arguments wax hot. In political forecasts he has an unbroken record.

A good head prevents a wise man and a pin from going too far.

BACK FROM CUBA.

Herbert Smith writes several letters, some from Manzanillo, the last from Portsmouth, N. H.

Off Manzanillo, Cuba, Aug. 13, 1898.

We left Guantanamo on the 9th and I guess I will write this letter as a journal. After leaving Guantanamo at about five o'clock in the afternoon, we steamed along without mishap until we reached Santiago at about ten in the evening.

We lay at anchor all night and on the morning of the tenth we steamed in a southwesterly direction until we reached Cape Cruz. We were convoyed by the Newark. At Cape Cruz we met the lighthouse tender Suance, the tug Osceola and the converted yacht, Hist with a small despatch boat captured at Guantanamo. All were well armed and we made quite a respectable fleet. We lay at anchor off Cape Cruz all day and the next night. At five in the morning of the 11th we raised the mud hook and started for somewhere, where we did not know at the time.

Our course was southwesterly all day and at night we anchored among the islands off Manzanillo. On Friday morning the 12th we started carefully up the channel leading to the city harbor. After much heaving of the lead we finally came to anchor about a mile out from the town, or rather, city for it contains some ten thousand people, and is one of the most important cities in the province. The Newark moved close in to the shore, under a flag of truce and opened negotiations with the commander of the Spanish forces for the surrender of the city. The result was that they refused to surrender the city on any terms. We gave them until three o'clock to consider, and at that hour the flag of truce came fluttering to the deck and the Newark opened fire at a small gunboat lying close in shore. We shelled from our position off shore with our six pounders, of which we had four. We kept at it for about an hour, first at one part of the town and then at another, then at the block house just above the town. The enemy fired from the block house but with such markmanship that the shells fell as near them as they did us. Some cavalry and light artillery came over the hills to the town, and opened on us with a trifle better success, but no shots fell dangerously near until we moved up in front and returned their fire, when they turned tail and scampered wildly over the hills, out of sight. At last the block house, the barracks, and several other buildings ran up white flags, and the Osceola, the Hist and Suanee moved to see what they meant. As soon as they were within easy range of the shore, the Spaniards, with their usual treachery, opened on them, from some masked batteries on the hill to the right of the town. The boats stayed right there and systematically pounded everything within reach. The shells from Spanish guns fell on every side of the ships but none were struck, another example of their marksmanship. We could have done better with our field pieces. Finally our boats drew off and we lay by till this morning when a Spanish boat came off flying a white flag. All of their boats have white flags up. There are all sorts of rumors afloat, some say, peace is declared. I do not know anything for sure, but something has happened because all day there has been a cessation of hostilities. I will continue to-morrow.

Saturday, August 13, we hoisted anchor and started back for Guantanamo. This morning we are now lying off Manzanillo among the islands waiting to be piloted through.

August 15: We left the islands about ten o'clock last night and steamed full speed all night, for Santiago and arrived there at three o'clock this afternoon. Stopped long enough to examine the battered hulks of what was once the Spanish navy. They lie, high and dry on the beach and do not appear to be badly broken up, with the exception of the Colon, which seems a total wreck. We stayed in Santiago about an hour and then proceeded to Guantanamo Bay arriving about sundown.

We are moving the stores in the hold making room for three hundred more men, whom the officers say we are to take aboard and then proceed to New York. I sincerely hope it is true, for I could go a civilized meal all right now.

August 16: We are coaling ship now and making all preparations to get to sea as soon as possible. I may be in New York as soon as this letter. I believe it is to go on the dynamite cruiser, Vesuvius, and will arrive a little ahead of us, even if we go to-day. I guess I will have to quit to get it in the mail.

Yours,

HERBERT.

Off Long Island, Aug. 23, 1898.

We arrived here this a. m. We are to let the army fellows off here, and, then where we do not know. Probally New York. The army fellows had a rough row to hoe. They were camped in back of Santiago where it rained every day. Some of them are wasted away until they are mere walking skeletons. I thought that our crowd was rather a dilapidated looking one but we are all in good health though ragged and dirty to the last degree. I do not know how much quarantine we may have to do, but I hope not much. I expect to go back to headquarters at Washington, although I may not. A good many of the fellows are putting in their discharges and getting them, because of the crowded condition of the service. I am in a good deal of a hurry to get back where I can get some civilized grub and where I can get fatted up a little. I am feeling in perfect health. I grew about a half a head down there and in consequence am rather lanky. The first thing I am going to do when I get to New York is to go scouting for a square meal of good grub and you can undoubtedly imagine you see the finish of that meal. I will send you some Guantanamo marine buttons to replace the army hat pin you lost. I do not know when I will have another chance to send mail but I will leave this letter open and add some before I mail it.

Yours for this time, H.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 27.

We arrived at Montauk Point four days ago and reached Portsmouth day before yesterday. The people here are treating us great. We are camped in a fine place at the edge of a grove of pines. The people act about crazy. I suppose that it is patriotism, but it is rather a violent form. They came out to the ship before we landed with loads of fruit and the like for us. The Spanish prisoners are next to us in a stockade. From the time that we left Brooklyn last April up to the time that we left the ship here, we have had rough feed. I would not offer to Patter some of the stuff we are expected to eat. I would not say anything until we commenced to get letter. Now we are feeding well a steak or chops every meal. Some of the people of Portsmouth are going to give us a supper to-morrow night. Though some of the experiences were rather rough I would not swap them for a good deal, and if I had not gone I would want to go. We have a good camp here and are going to enjoy ourselves to the best of our ability.

Yours,

HERBERT.

A bad shot while pleasant shooting has cost the Hon. John Tufton, eldest son of Lord Rothfield, $6,500. He fired the charge into the face of one of his beaters, rendering the man totally blind.—Blissfield Advance.

While Edward Werner, one of the boys who delivers the Evening Times, was looking through a drawer, he picked up a revolver which had not been touched for three years. It went off and a ball passed through his left hand.—Ann Arbor Argus.

Edward Sortor, an employe of the Page fence company, was struck in the right eye by a piece of wire Monday afternoon. The sight is destroyed and Dr. Morden does not know whether it can be restored. Some time ago Mr. Sortor's left eye was injured.—Adrian Daily Times.

Humphrey Eagan, who lives on the south shore of Wampler's lake, met with a painful accident Sunday night. When driving home from Tecumseh it is said he was running horses when the tongue came down throwing him out. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and it is feared that he will not recover.

Jackson Patriot: Miss Cora Clark, who went to Chickamauga Park on the opening of the Leiter hospital in July to serve as a nurse, reached home Saturday night and is now very ill with what the doctors think would have been typhoid fever had she remained in the south. She, however, seems to be improving gradually.

Billy Bell and Bones Cherry were discovered in an attitude of belligerency last evening down on the flats near the College avenue bridge. One had a pitchfork and the other a "razzor." No great damage was done, but both made application to the city marshal for protection and they got it in the shape of a good talk.—Adrian Daily Telegram.

Two boys at Sand Lake, Hillsdale county, captured a badger a few days ago. They chased him to a bank, into which he tried to dig. Then they pounded him with a stick which he grabbed with his teeth and refused to let go of. The boys formed a noose from their suspenders, and putting it around his neck, dragged him home.—Hudson Post.

Albert Liscomb, a well-to-do farmer, walked into D. M. Scriver's hardware store at Goodrich and asked to see some revolvers and cartridges. When two bullets were put in place Liscomb said that would do, took the revolver from the merchant's hand, placed it against his left temple and sent the bullet through his brain. He fell instantly and was dead before anyone reached his side.—Manchester Enterprise.

A special from Constantine, Mich., under date of September 3, informs the public that the denizens of that thriving little city are much elated over the fact that Maj. Gen. Shafter, the hero of Santiago, will be there on September 21 and 22 insts., unless something of a serious nature happens, to reune with his old regiment, the Nineteenth Michigan volunteer infantry. The citizens are sparing no pains to make the reunion a success. Col. Frank D. Baldwin, of the United States regular army, Indian governor of Oklahoma, is president of the reunion association, and will also be present.—Adrian Daily Telegram.

John Jennings, of Cambridge [illegible] Onsted, is under arrest for beating his wife. He was brought here Saturday by Under Sheriff Shepherd. Jennings says its all a mistake; his wife fell out of bed. Just the same he will [illegible] hearing before Justice Vandenburg.—Adrian Telegram.

Last Friday forenoon a hobo [illegible] his name as Frank Howard stole a watch, chain, charm and shirt from a caboose of the Wabash local freight going west, the chattles being the property of Conductor James Hunt and Brakeman Frank M. Nicolon. He was captured and brought face to face with Judge Marble, before whom he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to sixty days in the county jail at Monroe.—Monroe Leader.

A year ago the son of Walter S. Westerman found a handsome setter dog on the streets of Adrian in a half starved condition and took it home. The animal proved to be an intelligent one, full of tricks and had evidently been well trained. An owner was inserted for but to no avail. The other day the family drove to Tecumseh, taking the dog along with them, and while there it was discovered he belonged to Harry [illegible] and was one that had been stolen from Toledo parties two years ago. Mr. [illegible] was delighted to recover his property as much as Mr. Westerman was to find the real owner.—Adrian Telegram.

Mrs. Emma Foster brought in a [illegible] beetle a few weeks ago, which measured 1 1-2 inches long. Prof. Spangler sent it up to the Agricultural College for a name for it. The reply was as follows: "The beetle you sent is not a common one here, but is more common farther south. I know no common name for it. Its scientific name is Polyphylla 10 lineata. The last part of the name refers to the ten lines on the wing covers. It is not an insect to be feared in any way." This is the finest beetle we ever saw that would not bite when touched.—Longmont Ledger.

Thieves broke into Wm. Henne's melon patch Monday night and robbed him of about six dollars' worth of melons. He is a poor old man who has a pretty hard row to hoe, and any one who, for sport or meanness, would rob him, is too low down in the scale of cussedness to be allowed to exist outside of prison walls. Mr. Henne was a slave in antebellum days, and is now a gray-haired, crippled old man, poor but honest, and endeavoring to raise a few vegetables and garden truck to help out on his munificent (?) salary of carrying the U. S. mail between the office and Stony Creek. He needs help.—Milan Leader.

MUST ACCEPT OR REFUSE.

Spain Will Have No Chance to Argue the Demands Made by the United States.

THE TERMS OF PEACE ARE MADE PLAIN.

Commissioners Given Explicit Instructions by the President — The Whole Situation Carefully Considered—State Department Gives Out Official Statement.

Washington, Sept. 16.—The policy of the United States regarding the Philippines is made up. The president had a conference with four of the peace commissioners yesterday. There were present Commissioners Day, Davis, Frye and Reid, and for two hours they were closeted with the president in the cabinet room. The whole situation was carefully gone over and the president impressed upon them his policy regarding the Philippines.

Instructions Are Explicit.

There is authority for the statement that the instructions are positive and explicit. Every question relating to Cuba's future which is to come under the purview of the peace commission is dealt with in plain terms. Every question of importance touching the disposition of the Philippines is set forth at length. No proposition is susceptible of ambiguity. The president has outlined the policy of this nation in terms of plain English. There will be no consideration of counter propositions. The Spaniards must accept or refuse our demands as they stand.

Flag Will Not Retreat.

No well-informed official in Washington who has kept in touch with the progress of events and has thoughtfully considered their significance from time to time entertains a doubt that the United States is prepared to maintain the flag where it has been planted on the island of Luzon. What other portions of the Philippine archipelago are to be enveloped in the folds of the emblem of liberty will be determined hereafter.

An Official Statement.

In the evening the president gave a dinner to the commissioners and members of the cabinet, and also Assistant Secretaries Moore and Adee, of the state department. It was purely social, and not official for deliberation. At the conclusion of the dinner Secretary Day handed the following official statement to the newspapers:

"The members of the peace commission, with the exception of Senator Gray, whose absence was due to his inability to withdraw as counsel in a case in which he was engaged some time before his appointment as one of the peace commissioners, have spent the greater part of Wednesday and Thursday in a free discussion of the duties with the discharge of which they have been intrusted by the president. Senator Gray is expected during the evening, and before sailing will have a full conference with the president and his associates. While for obvious reasons it was determined that the nature of the instructions as to the negotiations about to be entered upon should for the present be kept secret and made known only after definite results shall have been reached, it is possible to state authoritatively that the commission goes to Paris fully prepared to follow a course of action mapped out for it as the result of the consultations of the last two days.

No Modification of Our Demands.

"At the very outset it will be made clear to the Spanish commissioners that, as in the case of the preliminary protocol, there can be no deviation from or modification of the demands made by the United States.

"The decision arrived at by the president after a full consultation with the members of the commission subsequently received the cordial and unanimous approval of the cabinet at a meeting held Thursday afternoon.

Our Commissioners Sail.

New York, Sept. 19.—The United States commissioners to conclude the terms of peace with Spain sailed on board the Cunard line steamer Campania, en route to Paris. The commission consists of Former Secretary of State William R. Day, United States Senators William P. Frye, Cushman K. Davis and George Gray and Whitelaw Reid. Each commissioner is accompanied on the trip by his wife or other members of the family.

BLOW AT FUSION.

Decision by Wisconsin Supreme Court Sounds Its Death Knell in That State.

Milwaukee, Sept. 21.—An important decision was handed down in the supreme court at Madison Tuesday which upholds the law forbidding the printing of a candidate's name in two columns on the official ballot. The decision was in the case of Carl Runge against City Clerk W. E. Anderson, who held that position in this city up to the time of the spring election. Runge is a populist but was nominated by the democratic city convention for city attorney. City Clerk Anderson refused to place Runge's name in both columns and suit was brought to compel him to do it. The supreme court's decree will practically knock out fusion in the future in this state.

Exposition Building Burned.

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 21.—The exposition building, the largest structure of its kind in the northwest, was completely destroyed by fire Tuesday afternoon. Loss, $100,000.

POISONED BY PRESSED BEEF.

Fifty-five Persons Made Seriously Ill at a Church Supper at Plainwell—Some May Die.

Niles, Sept. 20. — A Presbyterian church supper, held at Plainwell last Friday evening, has resulted in the illness of 55 persons, both young and old, and of the number 20 are dangerously ill, and the following are expected to die: Mrs. Ethel Clancy, Mrs. J. M. Travis, Mrs. John Bishop and L. W. Souls. The illness is due to partaking freely of canned pressed beef, which was on the bill of fare. About 100 persons were present at the social, and all ate heartily of the supper. Saturday morning the first symptoms of poisoning were noticed, when several citizens were taken sick. During the day and Sunday the cases multiplied so rapidly that the few doctors in the town were compelled to summon outside medical assistance. It was thought at first about a dozen persons would succumb to the poison, but all are recovering but the above mentioned four, whom the doctors have given up. The canned beef was bought from a local dealer and a rigid investigation will be made, for it is believed it was stale. Arrests may be made.

HOME AGAIN.

Thirty-Second Infantry Arrives at the State Camp Ground at Island Lake.

Island Lake, Sept. 19.—After four months' service in camps at Tampa and Fernandina, Fla., and Huntsville, Ala., the Thirty-second Michigan infantry reached the state camp ground late Sunday night. The train was in four sections. It was expected to arrive early in the afternoon, but there was several hours' delay Saturday night at Louisville, caused by orders given by railroad officers to merge the four sections into three, which Col. McGurrin opposed. It was nearly ten o'clock when the first section arrived here and the men remained in the sleeping cars all night. The regiment rostered 1,328 men when it left here and brought back 1,039. Twenty officers and men had been left in charge of the division hospital at Fernandina. Of the remainder a few are dead, many are on furloughs, and a few were left in hospitals. Cars containing 17 sick men were transferred to Detroit. None of the men are seriously sick and most of them are in good health.

THE BLAIR STATUE.

Arrangements for the Unveiling at Lansing October 12 Are Completed.

Grand Rapids, Sept. 20.—The statue of former Gov. Austin Blair, erected by the state, will be unveiled in Lansing October 12, and it is expected there will be a large attendance of old soldiers, of the soldiers of the Spanish-American war and of citizens from all parts of the state, and that it will be a state event. The exercises will begin at one o'clock with a parade, and at two o'clock the unveiling will take place, with an address by John Patton, of this city, the formal presentation of the statue to the state by Gen. Alger, president of the commission, and its acceptance by Gov. Pingree. A grandson of Austin Blair, George T. Blair, a cadet at Annapolis, will, it is expected, draw the veil from the statue. Gen. Shafter telegraphed John Patton accepting an invitation to attend, and advices have been received from Washington that President McKinley will be present if he can so arrange his western trip.

Printers Win.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 20.—The board or arbitrators, to whom was submitted differences between Robert Smith Printing company, state printers, and striking employes, who struck for a nine-hour day and increase in wages for binding under a contract recently awarded for two years, gave their decision Monday afternoon. The employes are given a nine and a half hour work day with nine hours Saturday and increase in wages asked for. The strikers were out only one week, an agreement having been reached to return to work while the case was being arbitrated.

The Tobacco Trust.

Detroit, Sept. 21. — It is reported here that the immense tobacco plant of Daniel Scotten & Co. has been consolidated with the Continental Tobacco company and the American Tobacco company, which respectively control the plug tobacco and cigarette trade. Oren Scotten, manager of the company, is out of the city and verification is impossible. The Scotten company is a large producer of chewing tobacco, and lately added to its plant a cigarette branch.

Mortgage Leads to Suicide.

Ann Arbor, Sept. 17.—A sensational suicide was that of Prof. W. B. Stickney. Eighteen years ago he built a $6,500 house, giving a $1,000 mortgage on it. A few days ago it was sold to satisfy the same mortgage, grown to $5,000. Prof. Stickney was in ill health and gave up the fight, firing a revolver point-blank into his head.

THE AMERICAN SCHOOLS.

Commissioner of Education Makes His Annual Report to Secretary Bliss.

THE DOCUMENT IS FULL OF INTEREST.

The Total Enrollment of Students Reaches the Enormous Aggregate of 16,225,093—Increasing Demand for Higher Education an Occasion for Congratulation.

Washington, Sept. 20.—The annual statement of the commissioner of education has been submitted to Secretary Bliss. The report shows satisfactory results for the work of the year ending June 30, 1898. A synopsis follows:

"One cause of congratulation on the part of those who hold the doctrine that popular education is the safeguard of our American institutions," says the report, "is the continued prosperity of the elementary schools. The increase during the year 1896-97 amounted to 257,896 pupils over the previous year. The total enrolled in elementary schools amounted to 15,452,426 pupils. Adding to it those in colleges, universities, high schools and academies, the total number reached 16,255,093."

The total amount of schooling received per individual, on an average for the whole United States at the rate of school attendance for 1897, is nearly five years of 200 days each, and reached quite seven years in a few of the states that are the most lavish in their expenditures for education. A little more than one-fifth of the entire population attended school at some time during the year.

A still greater occasion for congratulation, it is stated, is the increase of students in colleges and universities. This increase has gone on steadily for 25 years, and in 1872 only 590 persons in the million were enrolled in those institutions. In 1897 the number had risen to 1,276 in the million, being more than double the number. During the same period there has been an important change in regard to conditions of admission to college. The standards have been raised to such an extent as to require an average of a year's work more in preparation for the freshman class. Considering the elevated standard, it is safe to estimate the number in higher education measured by the standard of 1872 as three times as large in 1897 as 25 years before. This increase was more remarkable in those students taking what are called post-graduate studies and engaged in the work of original investigation. The professional students in the schools of law, medicine and theology increased during the same period. During the same period scientific and technical schools multiplied.

In view of the continually increasing demand for higher education, says the statement, the increase of professional education and especially the rapid growth of that class of students that make special expert studies in post-graduate work, is in the highest degree reassuring.

A large portion of the report is devoted to statistics of education in the United States. During the year there were maintained in Alaska 18 day schools, with 1,216 pupils.

The reindeer herds there appear to be giving satisfaction. Mention is made of the expeditions sent to the relief of whalers and miners during the year.

AN AWFUL FATE.

Ten Persons Lose Their Lives in a Fire That Destroys an Elevator at Toledo, O.

Toledo, O., Sept. 21.—Ten persons cremated, eight more fatally burned and eight seriously injured is the record of the most disastrous fire that ever occurred in Toledo. The spontaneous combustion of dust in the grain elevator owned by Paddock, Hodge & Co., Tuesday night caused this terrible destruction of life, and none of those who were taken out after the fire started was far enough from death's door to tell any of the horrible details.

Mr. Paddock, a member of the firm owning the plant, said that there was between 500,000 and 600,000 bushels of grain in storage at the time, most of it being winter wheat. The property and the grain is an entire loss and will reach $450,000. The insurance is $135,000 on the building, and the grain is covered with $258,000.

AGUINALDO'S CONGRESS.

National Assembly of Filipinos Helps Clear the Air of Misunderstanding with Americans.

New York, Sept. 21.—A dispatch to the Herald from Manila says:

As the result of the meetings of the national assembly of Filipinos, thus far held in Malolos, there is now entire confidence in the American government on the part of the insurgent leaders.

All the members of the assembly exhibit an earnest desire that the future relations of the Filipinos with the Americans may be of the most friendly character.

Murder and Suicide.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—Michael Schwarz, a musician, shot and killed his wife Anna, from whom he had been divorced two months, and then killed himself. The shooting was the result of an argument over past differences. Their 12-year-old daughter witnessed the tragedy.

Favor Free Silver.

Denver, Col., Sept. 21.—The prohibitionists met in this city yesterday and nominated Rev. C. B. Spencer for governor. The platform, besides the usual prohibition plank, declares in favor of the free coinage of silver.

A MATTER OF FAITH.

Many of the Clergy in Michigan Endorse the little conqueror.

Our religious opinions are, as a whole, a matter of faith. Whatever denomination or seal we follow we pin our faith on the words and teachings of our Pastor. His sincerity is never doubted; that he thoroughly believes his adopted creed is unquestioned. The opinions of the Clergy on any subject carry well deserved weight with all classes of people. Many reverend gentlemen in Michigan are testifying for the little conqueror, their praise is not given lightly and only after personal experience. Gratitude and a desire to promote the welfare of the public brings forth such testimony as follows:

The Rev. F. A. Smith, of 829 First street, Kalamazoo, Mich., says: "When I procured Doan's Kidney Pills I was, at the time, and had been considerably troubled with my kidneys. Backache was quite pronounced, being especially severe when I sat or stood in a stooped position for any length of time. Other symptoms usually attending disordered kidneys plainly indicated what caused the difficulty. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected the annoyance in a very short time and I have not noticed, up to date, any indication of a recurrence. As I took no other medicine there can be no doubt but Doan's Kidney Pills were the direct means of curing me. I am most favorably impressed with them."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

When a child asks questions we recognize the folly of ever thinking we are old enough to know anything.

The Ladies.

The pleasant effect and perfect safety with which ladies may use Syrup of Figs, under all conditions, makes it their favorite remedy. To get the true and genuine article, look for the name of the California Fig Syrup Co. printed near the bottom of the package. For sale by all druggists.

The October number of Harper's Round Table will open with a story entitled The Capture of the Rita, by Harold Martin, war correspondent in the West Indies. Another story of timely interest, the scene being laid in Cuba, is called The Dynamite Pack-Train. It tells of the courage of a young insurgent officer who had command of a mule-train that was attacked by a Spanish column. Other short stories of the October number are Runner-up, '98, by F. H. Spearman, a golf story; A Very Little Fellow, by Capt. C. D. Rhodes, U. S. A., is an incident of life at an army post in the West; and Jack Forsyth's Brave Feat, by A. J. Kenealy, tells how a plucky lad saved a ship from wrecking during a simoon in the roadstead of Madras.

Dr. Miles' Nervine

A REMEDY FOR THE Effects of Tobacco.

THE excessive use of tobacco, especially by young men is always injurious and undoubtedly shortens life materially. Mr. Ed. C. Ebsen, compositor on the Contra-Costa News, Martinez, Cal., writes; "I have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and received much benefit from it. I was troubled with nervousness, dizzy spells and sleeplessness, caused by the use of tobacco and stimulants. I took Dr. Miles' Nervine with marvelously good results, allaying the dizziness, quieting the nerves, and enabling me to sleep and rest, proving in my case a very beneficial remedy." Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is especially adapted to restoring the nervous system to its normal condition under such circumstances. It soothes, heals and strengthens.

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on diseases of the heart and nerves free. Address,

DORA'S EYES.

When Dora's eyes with teardrops fill,
What beauty 'yond compare
Does maiden sympathy distill,
And pour in triumph there.
The gold-set diamond in her hair,
Scarce seen, unheeded lies,
For though a gem both rich and rare,
'Tis naught to those in Dora's eyes.

If she should frown, an aching chill
Benumbs me with despair;
If she should smile, a heavenly thrill
Runs o'er me; yet beware;
'Tis but the bait of Cupid's snare,
A tender hope that lives and dies.
In varying moments she takes care,
For that's the charm of Dora's eyes.

If she could hate, their glance might kill
If they but pleading were,
The barriers of reason's will
Would vanish into air:
For they can lay the soul's depths bare
Of proud or humble, brave or wise.
A man's well pleased if he can tear
One tender glance from Dora's eyes.

ENVOY.

Ah! little tyrant, 'tis not fair
Poor mankind thus to tantalize,
Then give to me the right to wear
The sole reflection of those eyes.
—London Madame.

THE SEA

By J. A. FLYNN.

MR PACE—Paris! Don't talk to me about Paris. For a good, healthy holiday give me the sea. There's nothing like it, say what you will. Last week Jolliboy and Smiles and Gayling and I went down to Sandbeach. We did have a time. You ought to have been with us, old chap! We lunched at the Royal, and had a little billiard match afterwards. Splendid tables, both of them, and the landlord a capital sort. You just look in and mention my name, if you're ever down there! After lunch Gayling took us off in a trap to call on a fellow named Smith he used to know; but he wasn't sure about the address, so we couldn't find him. But we had ten or twelve games of skittles at a little country inn called the Maypole. Not a bad game skittles; but it makes you rather stiff next day.

We went back to the Royal for dinner. Couldn't have desired a better spread. Afterwards we had a pool, and the landlord nearly cleared us out—took four pools out of five, and shared in the other! Going home we tipped the guard and had a carriage to ourselves. Penny nap; I cleared 13s. 10d. Not so bad, eh? Couldn't have had a better trip. Any boating? N-o. There wasn't time, you see. Bathing? Not exactly. One can always have a bath at home, you know. Tide up? 'Pon my word I don't remember. But it's a fine bracing place. You must come with us next time!

Mrs. Quiverful (on the beach with Thomas and Walter and Henry and George and Mary and Annie and Kate and Cecilia and baby)—Good morning, Mrs. Jones. Enjoying ourselves? Having a nice rest? Ye-s. Of course. Tommy, come away from the boat. Can't you see it's just been tarred? Where's Quiverful? Why he's—Henry, if you put any more jellyfishes down your sister's back I shall send you home—he's taking the older ones for a walk. Walter, come away from the edge; the water's quite deep there. Now stop fighting with the spades, Kate and George. Annie, you must not give baby sand to eat. I shall be very cross if you do it again. (Persuades baby to disgorge sand, etc.) Now take off your shoes and stockings, and paddle like good children, and don't quarrel any more.

How are you enjoying yourself? Oh there's Walter fallen half in! You naughty boy! (Wrings him out.) Now don't do it again. It's a good job that salt water doesn't give colds! What I like about the seaside is the nice rest one gets. Henry, you are not to splash. It's so quiet, and—. (The children set up a roar.) Whatever is the matter now? Crab bit Cecilia's toe? Nonsense. Mary, you must look after her. I never saw such tiresome children, except baby, who's never the least—oh, she's choking! (Shakes a handful of stones out of baby's mouth.) There, there! Don't you think the seaside would be better if there wasn't any beach or any sea?

William Longshore—This 'ere sea's a wonderful thing? Aye, you're right, sir. An' if you'd seen the sights wot hive seen—! Been a sailor? Lor' bless you, yes! A matter of 40 year! Furrin' parts? Well, I've been to India, wot is a 'ot an' dirty place, an' the people as black as coal, an' don't wear nothing; an' China, where they eats dogs; an' America, wot is a fine big place; an'—. Wot strikes me most about it? The sea, you mean? Why, 'ow awful thirsty it makes them wot 'as to do with it. The salt gits right into your system, you see, when you've been as much on the hocean as I 'ave. Just now I feel that terrible dry I could—. 'Ave a drink with you? Thank'ee, sir, I don't mind if I do. (Interval for refreshments.)

Now, if you'll excuse me for sayin' so, sir, you won't never understand the sea without one thing. Wot's that? Why, a telescope—a good 'un, like this 'ere, not one of them rubbishy things they sell you in shops, only made for landsmen. Just look at that 'ere boat over there with it. No, shut the hother heye.' There you are. See 'ow plain it is? Well, you'd see twice as well with a little practice.

Where can you git a good telescope? Ah! (shakes his head.) There's tricks in the trade, unless you're in the line. Even then you 'ave to be very careful, or they'll do you. But they don't 'ave me. Could I buy one for you? Well—I don't know but what I might. (Considers.) Even then it wouldn't be a seasoned one. That's wot you want. Can you get one? (Scratches his head.) Well—look 'ere! I've got two more at 'ome—legacies they was, an' I couldn't part with them. But I wouldn't mind lettin' you 'ave this 'ere for two pound—no, I'll say 35 shillin'. I don't want to make no profit. Is it a good 'un? Well, you can read the name on the lightship when you're used to it—a matter of four mile. I can't say no more. (Hands over the telescope.) Can't read it. Oh, you soon would with a little practice. (Takes the telescope and points it to the Nore lightship.) Why, it's as plain as anything! N—O—A—R—E! (Wonders why the stranger departs so abruptly!)

Mr. Ampstead (donkey proprietor)—Wot do I think about the sea? Well, if I tell yer strite, guv'nor, I think it's a bloomin' nuisance, an' I wish there wasn't none. People seem to think they must go messin' abart all day on the bloomin' sand, or makin' themselves sick in them bloomin' boats, when they're darn 'ere. 'Ere's 14 hanimals—just look at 'em!—all saddled an' ready, an' standin' hidle. Wot for? Because of the bloomin' sea. If I was on the bloomin' 'eath, where there wasn't no bloomin' water, all them 'ere bloomin' people wot's wastin' their bloomin' time over the bloomin' sea would be ridin' my bloomin' donkeys, an' puttin' 'a few bloomin' coppers in my bloomin' pockets!

Why do I come 'ere? Well, a bloke must go somewhere; an' the 'eath's that crowded there ain't 'arf a chanse. An' the missus likes the seaside. All women is contrary! An' there's 'arf a chanse when it's low tide. Donkey, miss? Right yer are!

Mr. Flighty—The sea's all right, when you understand it. I don't. It served me a nasty trick last week—me and the Larkin girls. Tell you about it? Well, on the Q. T., you know? It was like this. Flo, and Mollie Larkin—I dare say you know them? No! I'll take you over and introduce you to-morrow. Well, they came over from Layham one afternoon, and wanted me to take them out in a boat. I wanted to take half of them—one at a time—but they wouldn't; so I took them both, in a little boat that I hired from old Salt, with a little brown sail. I don't know much about sailing, but it looked simple enough. You put up the sail, don't you know, and the wind blows you along. It blew us along for about three hours; and when we had eaten all there was to eat, and got right out in the channel, and were seasick, we thought we'd go back. So I put the rudder over, but the confounded boat wouldn't go the reverse way. They tell me it depends upon the direction of the wind, or something! Anyhow, the wretched boat would sail in any direction but home, when she wasn't standing still, with the sails flapping in the wind.

The girls said we'd better row; so I put down the sail, and rowed. Then they had a turn. Then I had another turn. Then they had one more. Then they said they had had enough, and I must do the rest. Five hours the rest was! Rowing a sailing boat isn't like pulling an outrigger, let me tell you. About 11 o'clock, we got near the land, opposite the Royal Oak, about five miles from the town. I couldn't pull another stroke, so we resolved to land. It was low water, and we ran on the mud flats, about a couple of hundred yards fr the beach, and I said I'd carry the girls ashore. First, I took Mollie. It was very dark, and as soon as we got a little way from the boat, Flo got frightened, and commenced to cry aloud—very loud! She kept it up all the time I was gone, which was about 20 minutes, because I was walking ankle deep in slippery mud, and had to go slowly. When I left Mollie on the beach, she cried very loud also. There might be robbers, or cows, or black beetles along the beach and cliffs, she said. I won't tell you what I said. It wasn't half so bad as what I thought and didn't say!

Well, I got back to the boat, pretty well done up, and took Flo on my back. She's tall and stout—about 13 stone! I staggered along with her somehow till we had gone about half-way. Then I slipped on some muddy seaweed and down we both went. You couldn't see us for mud. She said some very nasty things. I won't repeat them, because she wrote and apologized next day, and said I had been very kind indeed. But if I had said what I felt—well, I shouldn't have been friendly with the Larkin girls any more!

We got to the town about one in the morning. Of course, they couldn't go home till the morning. The last train leaves at nine. So I had to take them to my place. The mater has barely spoken to me since. Their father came over next morning, and said I ought to marry them. But they couldn't agree which. I was glad there were two. All's well that ends well! Is it! I don't know what you call ending well, but I know the boat went out to sea next tide, and was never found again. Five pounds ten I had to pay for my trip on the sea. Know better next time? Umph! There'll be no next time for me!—St. Paul's.

One Architect's Pay.

The archbishop of Canterbury, when he was bishop of London, was dissatisfied with certain arrangements in his palace at Fulham, and called in an eminent architect to advise as to alterations. The architect took time to consider, and when he finally brought in his plans and estimates the figures were so great that the bishop relinquished his project. "And now," said the bishop, "I shall be glad if you will tell me how much I shall pay you for your trouble in the matter." "I thank your lordship," was the answer. "One hundred pounds." The amount was disconcerting. "Why, sir," said the bishop, "many of my curates do not receive so much for a whole year's service." "That may be true, my lord; but you will remember that I happen to be a bishop in my profession." There was nothing more to be said, and the check was drawn.—Newcastle Chronicle.

THE FARMER'S STORY.

How a Newspaper Reporter Interviewed Him and Obtained an Interesting Article of News.

From the Press, Milroy, Ind.

Wesley Holmes, of Milroy, Ind., was in the depot waiting for his train, when a newspaper reporter addressed him. "O! you have come to inquire about that little experience of mine," said he, in a pleasant manner. "Well, I guess it was no little or insignificant thing after all. Yes, I'll tell you the complete story; but I did not suppose it would interest the public.

I have been a farmer all my life, and would do nothing else now, although a few years ago I would have preferred an easier job.

"I had good health all along, until this pestilent grip came. In January of '92 I was attacked with it and had a serious time. At first I was merely confined to the house for four or five days, with a severe cold, but I ached all over, and my limbs pained me when I went about. None of them were severe—just dull achings, but I was not very comfortable. The doctor came, examined me and said I had the grip. He gave me some medicine which I used and in a few days I was able to be out.

"But a day or two after I was caught in a rain, and the next morning I felt the same as before, only the pains were worse. The doctor gave me more of the same medicine, and attended me for six weeks before I was a dismissed patient. This time my trouble took on a new form, there being a cold on my lungs. I was finally able to get outside the house, but became worse again, and could not do any more work the remainder of the winter, being confined to the house most of the time.

"When spring opened up and good weather came I was better, but I always afterward had those peculiar pains all over me, and the next winter I went through with almost the same experience. 'Having the grip again,' the doctor said, "but the fact was I had never entirely recovered, and each winter I had a relapse just about as soon as the bad weather commenced. I kept getting worse with each attack, and the spells would last longer. The third winter the trouble took on the more serious form of muscular rheumatism, together with the trouble with my lungs. I was not able to do any work from the 10th of December to the first of May, and half the time all summer I was indisposed from my labors. I tried another doctor, but he did me very little good, and when the bad weather began in November I was worse than ever.

"A neighbor who had suffered from the after effects of the grip as I had, advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I did not feel that they would do me any good, but my wife urged me to try them, which I finally did. I remember I took the first dose on Christmas day, 1895. I kept taking the medicine until I had used six boxes. By this time I had noticed a change and would have quit discouraged had it not been for my wife. She bought more of the pills and I continued using them. And I am glad to-day that I did, for when I had finished the next box I was much better, and three more boxes cured me. I took six boxes, altogether, and the last about the first of February, and never had to take any more medicine, and I am sure Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People cured me of my trouble, and I can fully recommend them to others."

The power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in the vast number of diseases due to impure or poisoned blood, has been demonstrated in thousands of instances as remarkable as the one related above. These pills build up the blood by supplying its life-giving elements which means the various organs, stimulating them to activity in the performance of their functions and thus drive disease from the system. Those who is suffering can rightfully neglect this way to restore health.

Pokagon Visits Niles.

Niles, Sept. 20.—Chief Simon Pokagon, of the Pottawatomie Indians, was in the city Monday, where he was summoned by Congressman Hamilton, who had information for him in regard to the claim of the Indians to 130 acres of Chicago land. Pokagon says the secretary of the interior has decided that the red nation has a title to the valuable tract of land in dispute. The only point against the Indians is that they have not had possession for many years. The chief expects to be able to effect a compromise with the present owners.

Michigan Farmers' Clubs.

Lansing, Sept. 19.—The board of directors of the State Association of Farmers' Clubs, which organization has 300 clubs, with a membership of 30,000, met here. The annual meeting will be held here the first Tuesday in December. At this meeting a policy will be presented to concentrate the efforts of the association to secure the abolition of the fee system, and to secure the enactment of a law providing for the payment of salaries to all county officers in lieu of fees. The railroad taxation question was not considered.

Given Equal Rights.

Lansing, Sept. 20.—With but nine dissenting votes in a total of 208 the Michigan M. E. conference Monday declared for giving laymen equal representation with preachers in the general conference. The anticipated debate on this question did not materialize. There are now 48,464 members of the church in this conference, a decrease of 597 from last year.

Victory for Wholesalers.

Detroit, Sept. 17.—Judge Frazer in the circuit court granted the application of a number of Detroit wholesalers, made through the attorney-general, for a writ of mandamus to compel the American Express company to pay for the war revenue stamps which the law requires to be attached to receipts for express matter.

Bishop Merrill Gets a Cane.

Lansing, Sept. 17.—A pleasing feature of Friday's session of the Michigan conference was the presentation to Bishop Merrill of a gold-headed cane, this being his seventy-third birthday anniversary. The presentation was made by Dr. J. H. Potts, of Detroit, on behalf of the conference.

Promoting a German Colony.

Standish, Sept. 19.—A German preacher is buying a large quantity of land near Alger to colonize a number of German farmers on. He pays three to five dollars per acre and sells to them at a little advance, after perfecting title, etc.

Ten Millon Wheelmen.

It is stated by competent authority that there are ten million people in America who are bicycle riders. Probably each one gets an average of one hurt in a season, and that is just why Henry & Johnson's Arnica & Oil Liniment gets in its good work. No liniment has ever been made that will heal a bruise, cut or sprain so quickly. It will remove pimples, sunburn, tan, or freckles. Clean and nice to use. Take it with you. Costs 25 cents per bottle. Three times as much in a 50 cent bottle. We sell it and guarantee it to give satisfaction or money refunded.

PE-RU-NA VICTOR

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, O.

DEAR SIR:—I like a new remedy since using Pe-ru-na. Your medicine has helped me so much that I can do my work and feel tired out. When I first began using your medicine I couldn't sweep a room, run the sewing machine or do anything, not even a chair. I could not walk or walk any distance. Now I can do all this, and I believe I can and never feel the effects of it. I am so proud of the way it has helped me out that I tell it far and near. I can heartily recommend your medicine to any woman suffering from female disease. I know from experience that your medicine will do just what you say it will. I thank you, Doctor, a thousand times for your treatment. I shall recommend your medicine wherever I go. I know what it has done for me and I know it will do the same for others. I feel that there are thousands of other women who would, after using your treatment, as I did, be thankful. I am so glad I got your treatment. This month is the first time in my life that I can remember of having the menses without pain. Why, I can do anything but recommend Pe-ru-na. Yours truly, Miss Emma L. Bodien, Wilberforce, O.

The Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O., will mail Dr. Hartman's special book for women, free on application. Pe-ru-na for women only. All druggists sell Pe-ru-na.

ROOFING AN ORCHARD.

It Is Being Done in California to Protect the Orange Crop from Frequent Frosts.

Frost is a frequent feature of orange growing in California and many devices for keeping it from harming the orchards have been tried from time to time with only partial success.

During the day the earth and trees become warm, but as the night cools the atmosphere the process of radiation sets in and the heat from the earth and the trees is carried off, the cold, frosty atmosphere taking its place. This warm air must not be allowed to escape. The fact was evident that the trees must be covered.

A fog would do this effectually, but fogs cannot be manufactured to order. The idea was conceived by a Mr. Everest of covering the orchard with canvas, which could be rolled up in the morning and let out at night. One acre was covered in this way and it was found to be expensive and unstable, as the canvas would get wet and decay. Then Mr. Everest thought of a covering of leather, and it was tried, was a success and to-day is an accomplished fact.

A visit to this ranch would remove any doubts one might have regarding the feasibility of the new plan. A dial set in the ceiling of the house at the head of the stairs indicates the direction of the wind at any time of the night or day. At another place can be seen a system of electric bells. These ring when the thermometer has fallen to a dangerous temperature. The men are then called up and a process of firing up is commenced. And yet with all these precautions the frost has often been too quick.

Now the trees are roofed in with canvas and laths. Although this shelter has been used over but 15 acres, the entire ranch will be covered as soon as the work can be done. Last spring the fruit which was covered matured perfectly, while that uncovered was more or less injured.

The operation is perhaps considered an expensive one, but when the value of a crop is considered it is infinitesimal. The cost is about $400 to the acre. It has been demonstrated that the temperature is some five degrees higher under cover than outside, with no fire at all, while with a small fire the temperature can be brought up eight degrees higher. With this cover the rancher is absolutely sure of a crop from any citrus orchard.—San Francisco Call.

GIRDLING THE GRAPE.

A Process by Which Even Late Varieties May Be Ripened with Absolute Certainty.

In northern sections frosts come so early that even the Concord often fails to ripen and there is need of a process by which even later varieties of high quality may be ripened with certainty. Such a process has been found and is known as girdling or ringing. It consists in taking a ring of bark out of the growing cane just below the fruit, as portrayed herewith. Girdling should be done about four weeks in advance of the usual time of ripening. The effect is to cause a rapid increase in the size of the fruit and hasten its maturity from ten to fifteen days.

In a series of experiments made at the Massachusetts agricultural college it was found that the quality of fruit was not injured by the girdling nor could any perceptible injury be discovered to the vine. The ring of bark may be removed rapidly with a knife made for the purpose. The use of strings or wires twisted tightly around the canes will probably answer the same purpose as the removal of the ring of bark. Only those canes that are to be cut away entirely at the end of the season should be girdled. The cane is girdled at A and after fruiting is cut back to E, leaving two canes (C and D) for the continuation of the treatment. The cane (B) is to be cut back to one or two buds at the fall or winter pruning.—Farm and Home.

Spraying Strengthens Trees.

A writer in the Practical Farmer says his spraying experiments lead him to believe that a tree kept healthy and vigorous by spraying for several years in succession becomes more robust and better able to resist attacks of disease. The idea is a reasonable one if it has not been exactly proven true. There are many things which we are reasonably sure of, but which it would be difficult to prove by positive evidence. Circumstantial evidence, well corroborated by many witnesses, must be our guide in such cases.

Controlling Cabbage Worms.

About the only method of holding these troublesome pests in check is to spray with hot water at a temperature of 130 degrees or apply pyrethrum powder. If the water is placed in the spray can while boiling hot it will be about the right temperature by the time it reaches the cabbage. The pyrethrum powder may be diluted with six to eight times its bulk of flower and dusted on with a powder gun or bellows. While the plants are young kerosene emulsion can be used.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of CHARLES BURRIDGE, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition duly verified of Mary C. McKee alleging that Walter C. Burridge was heretofore duly appointed administrator of the estate of said Charles Burridge but has since been deposed from his trust by order of the court and that the petitioner is a creditor of said estate and praying that Charles Bidwell or some other suitable person may be appointed as administrator de bonus non upon said estate.

It is ordered that Monday, the 26th day of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition.

And it is further ordered that a copy of this order be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

(A true copy.) RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

A. E. BARAGAR, Probate Register.

The GRAPHOPHONE

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired, your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

ALL ABOUT

The County Fair and What You See When Over There.

The display of fruits and vegetables at the Adrian fair this week is the best in several years. Beside the usual exhibits in this line the Farmers' Clubs and Granges have booths where special exhibits are made. Hudson, Fruit Ridge, Cadmus and Adrian Granges are very attractive. Fruit Ridge shows a well filled booth with sides and ceiling in wild immortelles brightened up with wild asters and golden rod, and on a pedestal in the center an immense plow made of flowers. At the Hudson booth we find a full sized figure of Pomona, made entirely of grains, flowers and hops. She carries a sickle and wears a "Maud Muller" hat, and is looking with interest at two squashes at her feet, which have the word "Sampson" grown into the rind in huge raised letters.

The art department is pronounced unusually good by the superintendents. There is a fine display of china, that of Miss Charles, of Hudson, deserving especial mention from the fact that the designs are original. Mr. Eldridge shows some water color heads and a game piece in oil that are beauties, also a flower piece of three chrysanthemums in a bowl which is wonderful in coloring. Mrs. Maynard, of Hudson, exhibits a scene from nature in water color which is decorated with a blue premium card and seems a perfect gem. Mrs. Howland has a vegetable piece in oil and a Sand lake scene similarly decorated, and some artist whose name could not be learned a screen ornamented with Cupids floating about in clouds of wonderful softness. There are several good figure pieces in water color and many fine specimens of pyrography which altogether make the art department a feature of the main building of which we need not be ashamed.

The "art gift" that Ruskin tells us so much about seems to have extended to the needlework department, for there is a noticeable increase of beautifully embroidered table napery, lunch cloths and handkerchiefs and an absence of the blue woolen dogs and impossible birds and animals that one often notices in our animal exhibits of needlework.

The long rows of stalls for stock are well filled. Among Tecumseh exhibitors in this division are Chas. Ives, who displayed a fine large herd, and Miles Baldwin, who is happy over a grade cow with a first premium card on her horns.

In the poultry building there are 937 entries and 380 coops, of these Mrs. Jas. Cook has taken about twenty premiums. Miles Baldwin also is exhibiting brown Leghorns.

But the out-door attractions for all too old to ride in merry-go-rounds is the log cabin, which is to be a sort of permanent museum owned by the Pioneer Society. Here one may find, beside the pioneers who crowd around Judge Geddes to register their names and pay their fifty cents initiation fee, a great collection of ancient relics. On the shelf under the stick chimney and over the fire place are tin lanterns, foot stoves and candlesticks, also a powder-horn made in 1801 and burned into the horn the inscription "N Perkins his horn 1801." In anotner corner of the room was the ladder which gave access to the upper room. A fine looking old lady is spinning some blue rolls into yarn and a pleasant faced pioneer striking fire with flint and steel and a handful of punk for the wonderment of a younger generation who were born in the day of brimstone matches before electricity was dreamed of. But more wonderful and interesting than all these ancient specimens of a past civilization is a band of musicians outside playing bass and snare drum and fife with skill that the Tipton band can not beat. The drummer who seems most to keep the sympathy of the crowds is Darius Cross from Fairfield, aged ninety-two. There is no discount on the way he handles the sticks and when the last car left the gates he was still playing "The Girl I Left Behind Me."

The attendance during the fair has been good. Wednesday the grounds were filled with people and yesterday, despite the rain, the crowd was fair.

The War is Over

And now our thoughts are all of peace and home. There are, too often, people to be found who have no home, and it is to them these few words are addressed. If you really want a home you can easily get one, but you should act at once before the relapse from the war puts prices on the advance. In Marinette County, Wisconsin, the very finest farming land is to be had now at a most modest figure. Excellent home markets are at hand to take whatever the farmer raises, and good prices are given. These lands are on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, and full information concerning them will cheerfully be furnished by C. E. Rollins, Immigration Agent, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

Judge Hammond this morning heard a motion to appoint a co-receiver for the Lima Northern, and after listening to the arguments of council on the matter, laid it over till Saturday morning in order to give some of the attorneys an opportunity to produce testimony to show the co-receivership necessary.

The application was made by the plaintiff in the case, with the consent of the other parties to the suit. Alex Smith, representing a number of claims, objected to the appointment of a co-receiver, and asked that the hearing be adjourned until he had an opportunity to show that Receiver Townsend was satisfactory to his clients. The court appointed Judge Doyle as a temporary counsel for the receiver, and directed an order to be made, adjourning the hearing. Julius Bates will be appointed co-receiver unless the attorneys can show good reason why the appointment should not be made. The court ordered a joint bond of $100,000 to be given in case the appointment is made. Another order was made by Judge Hammond in the case in reference to the certificates issued to the receiver when the application is filed. These certificates were countersigned by the clerk and delivered to the receiver. The court ordered that they be returned to the clerk and held by him until the further orders of the court.

The Detroit, Toledo and Milwaukee railway filed a claim against the Lima Northern in United States court this morning for the purpose of intervening in the distribution of any money derived from the road. It is alleged in the petition filed that the Lima Northern company, at the time of the receiver's appointment, was indebted to the D. T. & M. to the amount of $12,307.24 for the use of its tracks between Dundee and Tecumseh; $2,167.52 for ties furnished and $3,284.89 for rails. The company states that these amounts are long past due, and unless they are paid it is unwilling to allow the Lima Northern the use of its tracks for the purpose of operating its trains.—Toledo Blade.

Railroad men all say that the latest information is that Cal S. Brice has broken into Detroit, which is the thing he has been endeavoring to do for years. He has now shops at Tecumseh on the D. T. & M. tracks, which, they say, shows he has vital interests in the Detroit & Lima Northern road, which uses the new shops.—Michigan Messenger.

At 7:30 Wednesday night the C. H. & D. freight ran off the track while crossing the Lima Northern at Leipsic. The engine and ten cars were piled up in the wreck. The engineer and brakeman were killed outright and the fireman is mortally wounded. It delayed the Lima Northern three or four hours.

The Rough Riders ball team, puffed up on account of their success in defeating the Never Sleep ball team, have challenged the Small Potato, Hard to Peel ball team. The game comes off in the near future. Look out for it 'twill be a rattler.

Home-Seekers Excursions.

On the first and third Tuesdays in July, August, September and October, 1898 the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway will sell round-trip excursion tickets (good 21 days) from Chicago, Milwaukee and other points on its line, to a great many points in South and North Dakota and other western and southwestern states at about one fare. Take a trip west and see the wonderful crops and what an amount of good land can be purchased for a little money. Further information as to rates, routes, prices of farm lands, etc., may be obtained on application to any coupon ticket agent or by addressing the following named persons: W. E. Powell, Gen'l Immigration Agent, 410 Old Colony Bldg., Chicago; H. F. Hunter, Immigration Agt. for South Dakota, 291 Dearborn St., Chicago, or Geo. H. Heafford, General Passenger Agent, Chicago, Illinois.

PRESIDENT NEWMAN.

How He Treats His Subordinates On the Lake Shore.

The halo of frigidity and exclusiveness that has been thrown around railroad presidents by railroad men is not always merited by the former. In fact, the heads of many of the big transportation companies are plain, every-day men, open and companionable to all except bores, says a Chicago paper.

W. H. Newman, of the Lake Shore, is a glaring exception to the rule of pompous presidents. The former presidents of the Lake Shore have been very popular among the rigidly exclusive executive officers. In fact, the road has been weighted down by presidents who, while they are able men from a railroad standpoint, were the soul of unbending discipline. Few men on this system were ever on terms of familiarity with their presidents. It was a road among roads in this respect.

When Mr. Newman took hold, his democratic manners and methods caused the old-timers on the road—men who had been schooled and drilled in the ultra conservatism—to shiver with surprise and ask each other what was going to happen. Mr. Newman is a western man and has been accustomed to treating men as men and not as inferiors simply because they occupied positions subordinate to his own. His theory is that all the employes cannot be president, but that they are human, the same as himself.

When Mr. Newman first took hold of the Lake Shore a few months ago, he strolled back to Chicago, his former home, to look over the local end of his road. It seems that no man in the Chicago offices of the company know him. In his search for an acquaintance he wandered into the office of Assistant General Passenger Agent Byron, which is on the third floor of the VanBuren street station. Mr. Byron's chief clerk, Mr. Knapp, was the only man who happened to be in the office at the time, and he was busy talking to one of the employes when President Newman entered.

Little attention was given to the new comer, who seated himself to await Mr. Knapp's pleasure. When the latter had finished with the employe, he turned to the stranger.

"What can I do for you?" he asked the rotund visitor.

"My name is Newman—President Newman—I have come to get acquainted," answered the supposed customer, to the almost paralyzing astonishment of the chief clerk. When he recovered he apologized for having kept the president waiting.

"Oh, that's all right," broke in the chief executive of the road. "I just came up to shake hands with the boys. Where is Clark's office—Clark, our freight man? I wish you would take me down and introduce me to him."

Mr. Knapp lost no time in starting his guest for the lower floor, on which Mr. Clark's office is. While on the way down President Newman noticed the paymaster's sign on one of the doors.

"Is that our paymaster?" asked the matter-of-fact president of Mr. Knapp. The latter said it was the Lake Shore's paymaster.

"Well, take me in and introduce me to him; he's a pretty good man to know," said the president.

After Mr. Knapp had made the rounds of the office, he returned to his desk and for some time was lost in thought over the incident. He was comparing Newman with the former presidents of the road, and wondering at the metamorphosis of the old Lake Shore under such a man.—Toledo Daily Blade.

Tobe Schnell is the owner of one of the most peculiar freaks on earth. It is a young pig with six legs (walking on all of them), and will be exhibited at the county fair next week.—Telegrm.

At a meeting of the members of the Eighteenth Street Baptist church, held last night for the purpose of discussing the matter of securing a new pastor, a unamimous call was extended to Rev. B. S. Hudson, of Tecumseh, Mich. Rev. Hudson is a promising young man, 30 years of age, a graduate of Newton Theological Seminary and Chicago University, having taken a post-graduate course at the latter institution in 1896. He has had seven years experience in the ministry, three years of which have been spent in his present pastorate at Tecumseh. The new pastor will move his family, consisting of wife and one child, to Detroit immediately, and will occupy the pulpit of the Eighteenth street church the first Sunday in October. When informed of the calling of Mr. Hudson last night by a representative of The Free Press, Rev. D. D. MacLaurin, of the Woodward Avenue Baptist church, expressed himself as follows: "I am glad that the Eighteenth street church has called Mr. Hudson, for I believe that he is just the man for the place. I know him very well and believe him to be a young man of much more than ordinary ability."—Detroit Free Press.

At the Democratic Peoples' Union Silver caucus last evening the following named delagates were elected: For the county convention at Adrian, Oct. 1, J. R. Hialey, Friend A. McNiel, Alfred James, Don H. C. Bowen, Wm. Gaston, John Mahaney, Chas. D. Keyes and Horatio Keyser. For the legislative convention at this place Oct. 3, Andrew Wilson, M. Eckert, B. F. Snyder, H. H. Keyser, Jos. Hanford, Jerome Snow, Jas. Aten and John C. Schreder.

The New Croswell at Adrian offers tonight (Friday) the world-renowned and greatest living magician, Kellar. It is his first appearance in Adrian. His route this year includes only two other Michigan cities, Ann Arbor and Detroit. He carries a carload of effects and gives one of the most delightful evening's entertainment that can possibly be imagined. On Saturday night, Sept. 24, the famous E. E. Rice's company of forty people will present the great New York success, "The Girl from Paris." The organization is a strictly metropolitan one and complete in every respect. It has magnificent scenery, beautiful costumes and a very large chorus. The organization goes from Adrian directly to the new Detroit opera house. Kellar goes direct to McVicker's Theater, Chicago. Tecumsehites who enjoy thoroughly good bills should not miss these fair week attractions at the Croswell.

Good Hustling.

E. W. Howard came to Tecumseh last summer and started a wall paper and paint store. From the first week he enjoyed a good business which has increased to such an extent that now he has been obliged to seek a larger store and has rented the newly repaired building belonging to Fred Kolkloesch on West Chicago street. A peculiarity of Mr. Howard's business is that he seems to be able to work when people desire it, do it cheaply and in the best workmanlike manner. Anyone intending to re-decorate their homes or do new work will do well to secure his prices before contracting.

Seriously Burned.

Wednesday morning, Thomas Elliott received a message from Toledo stating that his son Ernest had been seriously burned in the Union elevator fire on Tuesday evening. He left on the first train, Mrs. Elliott following in the afternoon. The following from the Toledo Blade partially explain the situation:

Ernest Elliott, a young married man, who lives at 216 Segur avenue, is among those whose chances for life are indeed small. He was blinded and partially stunned by the first shock, but started to run, when he was struck down by Fred Pargellis, who, in his efforts to escape from the flames, leaped directly upon Elliott's back, bearing him down and injuring his back seriously. Getting to his feet again, he stumbled along, now running, now falling, until, when found, he had run into the river a short distance. Here he was rescued and taken to a drug store near by, and, as soon as a conveyance could be secured, was taken to his home on Segur avenue, where loving hands are doing everything possible to soothe his terrible pain and nurse him back to health. Dr. Madden is in charge, and is using his best efforts with this terribly afflicted patient.

In many regards the above article is exaggarated. No one jumped on Elliott's back as it is in no way injured. His face and right hand are badly burned and the doctors state there will be no danger of scars except on the right hand which is in the worst condition. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott are still in Toledo. The young man has many friends in Tecumseh who greatly regret this misfortune and hope for his full and speedy recovery.

Special to the TECUMSEH HERALD.

Toledo, O., Sept. 23, 11:50 a. m.

Ernest was very uneasy all night, but rested better this forenoon. Doctor has just dressed wounds and finds him very badly burned both hands, elbow and face. Eyes are all right and face will not be disfigured, but it may be necessary to amputate some of the fingers on left hand. He cannot be moved under two weeks. THOMAS ELLIOTT.

OUR OYSTER SUPPLY.

What Science Is Doing to Keep It from Petering Out.

Experts at Washington Are Constantly at Work to Stimulate the Artificial Development of the Bivalves.

[Special Washington Letter.]

ARE you good at figures? Can you calculate sums in hundreds, thousands, millions and billions?

Unless you can do so you will not be able to understand how oysters are supplied by nature, and how they are multiplied by science.

At the fish commission this afternoon one of the employes gave some very interesting information about the luscious bivalves. He was attending to his regular routine duties, and in response to many questions, he said:

"One large oyster will yield one hundred millions of eggs. A bushel of good oysters would yield about a billion of eggs. The hundred billions of fry from my hundred bushels of oysters, I propose to have pass back and forth through my canal, and besides I have a few spawners in each one of the receptacles. I will make use of methods of fertilization which are essentially my own. I depend, however, more largely upon the natural brood, using artificial fertilization as an auxiliary, getting spat from fry produced naturally."

"What advantage does this proposed system possess over other systems?"

"This system greatly increases the chances, by taking advantage of the full spatting capacity of the volume of water. Oyster embryos, under ordinary conditions, in open water diffuse and affix themselves throughout the three dimensions of such a body of water. The methods which have been used provided for collectors only at the bottom or on the surface. This system contemplates that the collectors shall occupy the three dimensions of the water, and provides a cheap and feasible method of spat culture, of almost unlimited productiveness."

Referring to another scientist of eminence, engaged in the same worthy enterprise, he said:

"A good many people will accuse me of pilfering from Brooks, but my methods are radically different from Brooks'. Brooks' methods of using floats provide only for the fry that comes on the surface; mine not only takes the fry on the surface, but that which sinks to the bottom as well. My system simply spreads the spatting surface through the whole depth of the water.

"Among the advantages of the system," he went on, "are the convenience and accessibility of the arrangement. The cultch can easily be overhauled if necessary. Every three bushels of cultch is completely independent of the rest, and can be removed and examined at any stage. A great advantage is that the water rushing through keeps off the sediment, which has been found to be very destructive to the spat. Under this system, too, a person will have control of his plant. The laws of Virginia and Maryland will not give to one man unlimited control of the territory under water. The lawmakers of these states must be educuated up to a better understanding of the questions affecting oyster culture. For this reason this method is especially applicable to the Chesapeake region, with its low, marshy shores, offering natural advantages for the construction of such ponds. A plant covering a tenth of an acre will yield 1,000 bushels of spat, or adult oysters, which will cover at least four acres. I would not think of planting more than 250 bushels to an acre."

GEORGE M. BOWERS.
(United States Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries.)

"Have you yet practically demonstrated the advantage of the system?"

"My method was devised too late to put in operation this year, but it has been demonstrated by the different experiments made, by my own experiments in 1882, by Mather's experiments this year at Cold Springs, where water was pumped through the shells or cultch, and by the results of Brooks' work. Brooks suspended his collectors on the surface and got shells thickly covered with spat. In my own experiments in 1882, in conjunction with McDonald, in apparatus not more than a square yard, in 24 hours, we obtained 100,000 spat. My present conclusions are based on observations I made at different places. The observations, on which my conclusions as to three dimensions are mainly based, were made upon the work in the Chesapeake region, where I found that, on the brush used as collectors, the spat would catch from a point about the middle clear to the top of the twigs. I am hopeful now of having a chance to try it at several points. The government will make experiments, I think, at St. Jerome's creek and Woods Holl, and then it is likely I can get a private concern to attempt experiments."

Noting at once the scientific ability of this student of oyster-ology, the correspondent asked his name, and he replied: "My name is Reiter; but that has nothing to do with the case. If you are interested in oyster culture just look at the subject, and don't pay any attention to me. I am not an oyster. Look at these little fellows who are growing in their little ways, solely to become food for the big animal, Man, who rules the world. We are developing oysters according to a scientific system."

"Yes, but what is your system doing to produce results?"

"We are spatting. Do you understand that? We are spatting."

That naturally evoked the question: "What do you mean by spatting?" and he said:

"This system is purely a system of spat culture, to rear oysters for planting, or seed oysters as they are called. By the time the spawning season is over, or at the end of 90 days, the spats are ready to be taken out with the shells to which they are attached and transferred to the bed, where they will be allowed to stay until ready for the market. The spawning season is over in 90 days. The oyster will double its bulk every year, and in four years be ready for the table.

"In France and other countries oyster cultivation has been carried on for a long time, and, in fact, there is reason to believe that in the days of the Caesars attention was given to this matter. The French government in 1851 made experiments in spat culture by strewing shells on the bottom.

"Oyster culture by this method is now carried on in Long Island sound, where a Mr. Rowe has 15,000 acres under cultivation.

"The term fry, as used by me, means free swimming embryo. The existence of the embryo is divided up into three stages. First, there is the egg, which when fertilized passes through its early stage from three to ten hours, and then becomes fry. The next stage is when the fry settles and fastens itself to some object, makes its home for life, and then it becomes spat. The fry swims until it finally meets some object to which it can attach itself. Once fixed, its wandering existence is at an end.

"You see these shells," said the scientist, taking up a number of small oyster shells. "These I took from buoy poles at Cohasset. There you see these little specks," he continued, pointing out tiny little dots on the shells—so small as hardly to be visible. "They are little oysters, or spats. I will show them to you under the microscope."

One of the shells was adjusted under the glass and the specks at once appeared to the eye as mollusks of quite respectable size.

"You could range 500 of the eggs or fry in the space of an inch," said the scientist. The oyster lives 24 hours as a free swimming embryo. Then it begins to form its valves, and, if it has not attached itself, sinks to the bottom and perishes there."

"Is not the loss or waste of the fry, when left to nature's processes, very large?" asked the reporter.

"The losses prior to fixation are very great. By enroomously increasing the cultch or spatting surface, however, we can reduce the loss to the minimum. Prof. Moebius made a calculation as to the oysters of Europe, that only one egg out of 1,400,000 ever comes to maturity. As the American oyster is fully four times as prolific, the losses, under natural conditions, are relatively much greater. The oyster has a great many enemies, such as the drills and star fishes. Then they are often so crowded that thousands are killed."

"Has observation shown that there is need of recourse to artificial culture to keep up the supply?"

"The results of last year's investigations by the Fish Hawk showed that. We found that nearly all the oysters were undersized. The beds were by no means exhausted, but they were so closely fished that they were not given time to recuperate. We examined oysters at over 90 different points in the Chesapeake."

The next time you eat an oyster stew, think of the amount of scientific work which is required to keep our tables supplied with this popular food product.

SMITH D. FRY.

He Asked One Question.

The lecturer had been defending his theory that the food one eats determines the character of the eater. When he announced his willingness to answer questions on the subject one of his auditors said:

"Horse flesh is consumed in Paris, is it not?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, are the French people particularly noted for horse sense?"—Judge.

AT AN AUCTION SALE.

A Scene in Which Every Bargain-Loving Woman Will Find Something Interesting.

The vase was about 18 inches high, and of varying diameter. It was of some sort of crockery or china ware, and it was as ornate as a Lonesomehurst cottage. On one side was a Watteau young woman, clad in a truly rural pink satin puffy skirt, mostly all plaits, and an apple-green bodice, also satin, and a "shepherdess" hat that must have cost at least $24.80, and white silk stockings that ended in pink satin slippers (high heeled), apparently No. 12 children's size. The young woman was engaged in holding on to the kind of shepherdess' crook the shepherdesses used always to carry in the old days—gilded and with vari-hued silk ribbons tied all over it. She was also industriously engaged in gazing into the branches of a sapphire blue cherry tree, wherein a very red and very spankable Cupid was doing the usual act with a bow and arrow. On the other side a young man with more or less of the same make-up, without the skirt, was climbing a gilt ladder into a gilt balcony shaded by Tyrian purple vines.

The auctioneer held it up.

"What am I offered for this real thing?" he inquired, insinuatingly. "Ladies and gentlemen, the age of this vawze is beyond my humble computations. Moreover, I do not like to go beyond facts that I know. I do know that this vawze adorned the home of the Russian minister—Cacky—Cackyowsky—something like that—to this country 72 years ago. It passed from his unwilling keeping when he was recalled to the household establishment of the czar. The many vicissitudes through which this vawze has passed in finally reaching my humble but reverent hands, ladies and gentlemen, were too pathetic to relate. It suffices to say that it is a gem fit to have adorned Versailles—as, indeed, who shall say that it never did adorn Versailles? Ladies and gentlemen, I ask you to make me an offering for this vawze, keeping in mind—"

"Two dollars," said a coarse, brutal man at the far end of the room.

The auctioneer looked grieved.

"Surely," said he, "you jest. Surely, you must be unaware of the merits of the cherished school of ceramic art to which this—"

"Two 'n' a half," put in another low churl, with a businesslike eye, up near the auctioneer's stand.

"I perceive," said the auctioneer, sadly, "that a spirit of merriment pervades the room this morning. It is a sorry enough reflection that a gem, a prize of this character, ladies and gentlemen, that a generation ago would have been grabbed at by—"

"Well, call it three," said the first man to make a bid.

"My friend," said the auctioneer, shaking his head mournfully, "are you aware that it is among the possibilities—indeed, among the probabilities—that this vawze for which you now offer me such paltry sums may at one time have embellished the boudoirs of queens?—that the fated Marie Antoinette herself—"

"Three-fifty," said another man with a low forehead, but a bright, alert eye.

It was at this point that the determined-looking elderly woman, with the poppy-covered bonnet and the fat-old-fashioned purse, walked in. The love of tradition shone in her eyes, and she flashed a look of contempt at the bidders.

"Five dollars," said she, pushing through the crowd close to the auctioneer's stand.

"Ah, madam," said the auctioneer, "you have arrived in season. It is readily to be determined that you know a good thing when you—that you have a cultivated eye, that is to say, for such perfect products of a sadly deteriorated art as this. Yet I fear you, too, strike too low a note. Five I am offered—who, then, is to make it ten?—who makes it ten?—ah, ten I am offered—"

Nobody in the room had spoken. The determined-looking elderly woman looked around defiantly and adjusted her spectacles defiantly.

"—ten I am offered—who makes it fifteen?—"

"Fifteen dollars," said the determined looking woman, and all of the rest of the room's assemblage looked on with a very great silence.

"Fifteen I am offered—it is dreary enough to reflect upon it—but fifteen I am offered—fifteen—fifteen—now, who is to display the acumen and make me—ah, twenty—"

Nobody in the room had spoken.

"Twenty-five dollars," said the determined-looking woman, and she didn't notice the grins of the canaille about her.

"And sold to this lady with the cultivated voice for twenty-five dollors," stid the auctioneer, snappingly.

"Oh, yes," said the auctioneer, in an easy whisper to a friend, "when you can get 'em to bid against themselves you're all right." Then he sold another vase of the same sort for $2.50.—Washington Star.

AUTUMN STRING TIES.

Models by Which You Can Construct All the Neck Furnishings You May Need.

String ties enjoy as much popularity as any other neck finishings this year, and the secret of their ultra fashionableness lies in the fact that they are inexpensive as well as comfortable.

The autumn ascots and four-in-hands are narrow. All kinds of fancy goods are made into these ties, though stripes and dots are generally preferred. The wearer of a plain silk tie is fashionable; the person who appears in a satin tie is more up-to-date, but he or she who ties around the collar a tie of the same material as the shirt or shirt waist is observing the very acme of fashion.

Queen Victoria's Pantries.

The pantries at Windsor castle contain gold and silver plate valued at $7,500,000.

DAINTY FANCY DRESS FOR THE BABY.

Expensive materials are never very highly recommended for use in children's clothes, for, even with a maid to restrain it, a child cannot resist the temptation to sit in the dirt.

One very nice dress can be put aside for special occasions, when even the youngest member of the family is expected to appear to best advantage. A very pretty dress for a two-year-old to have for such purposes is made of China silk of some very delicate color.

In this case the little gown is of baby blue. The skirt is made very plain and the only trimming upon it is four rows of heavy stitching of a shade of blue just a little darker than the dress material.

The waist is made quite plain also and on either side of the front are lapels which have been slashed in the middle. The rows of heavy stitching trim the lapels, and at the end of each is a large rosette of baby ribbon of the same shade as the dress. The sleeves are large and very full.

A little navy blue silk cap is worn with this dress and on the top sets a little ball of blue silk fringe. Stitching is now the popular trimming upon children's dresses and the heavy embroidery silk is used instead of the ordinary spool silk.

Satisfies that dry taste in the mouth.

THE WOODLAND STREAM.

The woodland stream comes rippling down the hill,
Widening and deepening as it steals along,
In nature's calm placidity of will,
And everlasting harmony of song.

The changing seasons have no power to hush
Its living minstrelsy, or stay its course;
All day and night its strains of music gush,
Still moving onward with a gentle force.

Spring comes with rich variety of flowers
To deck the borders of the woodland stream,
And the wild song-birds, in their summer bowers,
Hold concert there in happiness supreme.

Still the stream flows, and sparkles in the light
Of summer radiancy, still flowing on,
Down to the valley, from its upland height,
For ever passing by—but never gone.

In autumn—mantled in o'er-arching fern,
Or bending willows, beautifully lithe;
When storm-clouds gather, boisterous and stern,
The woodland stream is jubilant and blithe,

When woods are leafless, and the wintry snows
Cover the streamlets, still its mellow voice,
In melting undulations, sings and flows,
In joy harmonious, bidding us rejoice.
—Benjamin Gough, in Golden Days.

The Little Bugler's Alarm

By ERNEST GLANVILLE.

"HULLOA, Bassie! I thought this fine morning would bring you over. The sap's running strong, and the quail are gathering thick in the young wheat. Hear to them whistling! Where's your gun?"

"I did not come to shoot."

"Soh! You're not in love, are you?"

"I have been writing poetry," I said, with an air of unconcern, "and I want to take your opinion of it."

"Fire away," said Abe, fetching up a judicial expression; and with that I proceeded to give the old man some samples of my very best style of verse.

"It's kind o' buttery," said Abe, slowly, when I had finished, "but I don't see no sense in it."

"Sonny, is there any music in the croak of a frog—is there? In course not! Now, there's music, sonny, in the veld and the bush, and in the night cries of the wild animals and birds, in the sighing of the trees, the drone of the surf and the crash of the thunder; but I yeard onct a sound I shall never forget, and there was in it a whole book of poetry. It were in the Boma pass, time of the Kaffir war, and the ole 94 were halted in the jaws of the pass, waitin' for the cool of the afternoon before they marched. I recomember it well—the dark woods in the narrow pass rising up till they 'most shut out the sky; the redcoats down by the water; the smoke rising in tall columns from the cooking fires; the horses standing in a bunch switching the flies offen 'em; the oxen knee-deep in the water; and a silence born of the hot sun over all. It were as quiet as Sunday down in the mouth of the pass, with the sun running up and down the bayonets like fire, and no red to stain them, for there was no news of Kaffirs within a day's march.

"I yeard a honey-bird call outer the black of the wood, and I jes' moved off with nothin' nier'n a pipe and a clasp-knife.

"'Where you going, Abe?' sed a little bugler chap, lookin' up from the shade of a bush.

"'Bee huntin', sonny.'

"'I'll come along o' you,' he sed.

"He were a little chap, with his lips all cracked by the sun, and a little nose that you couldn't see for the freckles, and brown eyes like you see in a bird or a buck—clear and bright. Always he were on the move, like a willey-wagtail, and him and me were chums. Ah, yes; many a story I tole him by the campfire, him a-sitting with his chin in his hands staring at me with his big round eyes, and they called him 'Abe's kid,' 'cos I downed a fellow for boosting him with a leather belt. I tole you how a little dream-lad had come to me one night outer the sea; that were he, my son—that were my little boy.

"Did he die?" I said, looking anxiously at the old man as his voice faltered.

"He went away, sonny, but he sed he'd wait for me, and he'll keep his word." There was a wistful look in the old man's face as he looked toward the sea for some time in silence. "Yes; we slipped inter the wood, the honey-bird calling led us on deeper and deeper into the heart of the Boma pass, till I pulled up to take bearings.

"'I'm thinkin' we're gettin' too far from the lines,' I sed to him.

"'You're afraid,' he sed, 'that's what.'

"'Come on,' I said, like a fool; and I went on, going mighty quick, and him panting after me.

"'Garn!' he sed, wrinkling up his little nose. There was a holler tree standin' up in a little clearin' no bigger'n a room, and the hum of bees came to us.

"'I see 'em,' he says; 'look at 'em streamin' in! What a lark! Cut a hole with your knife, an' I'll carry some honey back in this bugle,' and he laughed.

"I were looking across at the dark wood, and I sed to him, quietly: 'Get behind the tree,' fer I'd seed a Kaffir standing on a rock.

"'What's the row?' he says, looking a little scared. Maybe 'cos I looked the same.

"'Take off that coat,' I sed; for the red showed up plain.

"'Take off the queen's coat?' he sed, going red and white; 'not me!'

"'My lad,' I said to him, quiet, 'there are Kaffirs in the bush. And if you keep your coat on they'll see you.'

"'Let 'em,' he said, swallerin his throat.

"'Take it off,' I sed.

"'Not me.'

"'Then I leave you.' And with that I slipped away, but turned on my tracks and came back softly to peer at him. He were still standing behin' the tree, looking away off at the soldiers, but his coat were buttoned up tight to his throat. I went up to him tiptoe and touched him on the shoulder, and he gave a low cry and jumped aside with his fists up. When he seed who it were the tears came into his eyes.

"'Abe Pike,' he sed, tremblin', 'that's a mean trick to play on a boy—a mean, dirty trick. I didn't think it o' you.'

"'Come on,' I sed, 'foller me; stop when I stop, run when I run, and keep quiet.'

"So we sot off tenderly through the bush, and we hadn't gone more'n 50 paces when I smelt the Kaffirs. I sank down; he did, too, and I peered through the shadders. A sound came to us—the sound of naked feet, of moving branches—and I knew the pass were full of men.

"He touched me on the arm as the bugle call to 'fall in' rang along into the still pass, ekering as it went from side to side.

"I put my mouth to his ear to tell him the Kaffirs were swarming, and that we could not go on, but must go up the ridge and work round to the troops.

"'What are the Kaffirs doing?' he sed.

"'They are making an ambush.'

"'And the general doesn't know?'

"'No, sonny, he doesn't.'

"'And they'll march in and be stabbed,' he whispered, with his eyes round and staring.

"'Oh, they'll fight their way out,' I sed. 'Come on after me.'

"'Good-by,' he sed, sitting down. 'You go on—I'm tired.'

"'I'll carry you, little chap,' says I, and I picked him up, but he was heavy for his size, and the bush was thick, and, more than that, he kicked.

"So I sot him down, and I yeard a Kaffir calling out to his friends to know what the noise was. I motioned to him to come, but he sot there, with his face white, and shook his head; then he altered his mind. 'Go on,' he said; 'I'll foller—go quick!'

"So I sot off up the ridge, through the wood, slipping from tree to tree, thinking he were coming, when all of a sudden outer the wood, ringing out clear and loud, a bugle sounded the alarm—a reg'lar alarm.

"I looked round and the boy were not there. I ran back, and saw him with the bugle to his lips, and his cheeks swelling as he blew another blast. I can hear it now—the call of that little chap, with the muttered cries of the Kaffirs and the sound of their naked feet running as they came up.

"'You little devil,' I yelled; 'they'll kill you! Run!'

"He gave me one look over his shoulder, and he put his life into that last blow. As the last note went swinging away there came an answering note from the regiment—to form square.

"'That'll be Jimmy,' he sed. And the next minnit an assegai struck him on the neck and he fell into my arms."

Abe stopped and looked away.

"What then?" I said, touching him on the shoulder.

"I don't know, sonny, what happened, till I laid him down afore the general."

"You carried him out?"

"I s'pose so—I s'pose so—seeing as we were both there; and my clothes were in rags from the thorns, and my head cut open with a kerrie. Yes, I laid him afore the general.

"'What's this?' he says.

"'General,' I sed, 'this boy has saved the regiment; he could 'a' run—but he didn't.'

"'Who sounded the alarm?' he sed.

"'It was him, and the pass is full of Kaffirs—jes' chock full of 'em.'

"The general stooped down and looked into the little feller's face.

"'Hang you, man,' he sed, turning on me; 'why did you take him into the wood?'

"The little chap opened his eyes, and they were fixed, all glazed, on the general, and the officers stood around, looking, and the soldiers in the square.

"The general brought his hand to his cap, then he wheeled round: 'Ninety-fourth—present—arms!'

"The ranks came to a salute, and the officers brought their steels together and their swords up.

"The little chap let his eyes scan the lines.

"'They are saluting you, my brave boy,' said the general.

"I felt him move in my arms, and I lifted his hand to his head to salute. Then he sighed, then he smiled, and his eyes closed. 'I'll wait for you, Abe,' he said, and he was dead before I could answer him.

"'Ninety-fourth,' sed the general, 'the enemy's hidden in the pass. Advance!'

"They came by in columns, and as they passed they looked at the little chap and saluted, and they went on in silence with their mouths shut.

"They clean frightened the Kaffirs that time; and next day—they buried the little chap—the band playing—and all the regiment in full dress. My little chap—my little chap!" said Abe in a whisper—"'I'll wait for you, Abe,' he sed. And when he sounds the bugle, ole Abe'll go. Yes, I sit and listen for it." He sat still, looking toward the sea, and I went quietly away.—Saturday Evening Post.

SECTIONAL LADDERS.

Their Advantage in Picking Fruit Can Be Readily Seen by Any Observing Man.

This ladder is so made that the various sections are interchangeable, so that by the use of four lengths, 8 feet each, numerous combinations may be made. Four sections of the ladder weigh 60 pounds, and occupy a space 8 feet long, 28 inches wide, and 12 inches deep. Fig. 1 represents a section of the ladder 8 feet in length. Fig. 2 shows two sections each of the length mentioned, placed together so as to form a stepladder or truss, either side or both of which can be used at the same time. By the use of two of the combinations with a board extending from one to the other, a perfect scaffold is formed with a ladder at each end to reach it.

Fig. 3 shows four sections put together for the purpose of forming a double stepladder twice the height of No. 2. Fig. 4 represents the lower end of the ladder, while Fig. 5 represents the end of a section. The two are joined together by pushing No. 4 down outside of No. 5 until the rounds engage in the slots. The advantage of this sectional ladder in picking fruit can be readily seen.—C. H. Hickox, in Ohio Farmer.

AMERICAN APPLE JELLY.

It Is Used as the Base of Nearly All the Various Jellies Put on the Market.

Apple jelly is used as the base of nearly all the various jellies manufactured. American apple jelly is exported to every known part of the world. In all ordinary jellies, sugar plays the principal part, but in apple jelly sugar is an unknown ingredient. Apples as the raw material are not used, but apple juice or cider is, and it must be treated immediately after it comes from the press. A moderate temperature is necessary for success, for if the juice should begin to ferment, as it will very rapidly in warm weather, the keeping quality of the jelly is very materially injured, unless it be mixed with a considerable quantity of sugar. A temperature of 41 degrees Fahr. is the most suitable; if it rises above 66 degrees the manufacture will at once stop.

In manufacture, the juice runs from the press to the boiler, beneath which a strong, steady fire is kept so as to keep the juice at a boil. With the boiling commences the clarification, and the acid it contains is neutralized by the addition of a dram of elutriated chalk (a deposit of a mixture of water and chalk from which the liquid has been decanted) to each gallon of juice. The chalk is mixed with the juice, and soon makes its appearance on the surface in the form of thick scum, which must be carefully removed.

The juice is now boiled to the consistency of 30 to 32 degrees Beaume, which upon cooling will be found to be the proper point for a perfect jelly. Each bushel of fruit will produce from four to five pounds of jelly. Late fruit is the most productive. Crab apples produce the finest jelly, while sour, ordinary fruit produces the best-looking article. A mixture of all varieties renders the most satisfactory results as to flavor and quality.—American Gardening.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Vigorous, thrifty, but low, stout trees are preferable to tall, slender ones for transplanting.

The time of planting is not so important as to have the right varieties properly transplanted.

Examine newly-set trees and see that the lands left on them are not so tight as to injure the trees.

In the fall is a good time to set out rhubarb and asparagus plants. Every garden should have a good bed.

Pears to do their best must be fed and the soil well drained, strong and retentive. Locality should determine the variety.

Peach stocks, which continue to grow freely may be budded as long as the bark peels freely for the insertion of the buds.

A good mulch keeps down weeds and renders the soil loose and moist at all times, and lessens the labor of cultivation.

While old trees are often made more fruitful by severe pruning, young, thrifty trees are often injured by the same treatment.

Now is a good time to cut out all old canes and all weak new growth among raspberries and blackberries, leaving only strong, vigorous plants or canes.

In sending fruit of good quality to market sort carefully and put it up in neat, attractive packages and in such shape that it will arrive in a good condition.

BANK DOORS ARE CLOSED

Oldest Financial Institution in Burr Oak Is Forced to Suspend Business.

EVENT CAUSES THE GREATEST SURPRISE

Private Bank of D. F. Parsons Unable to Stand Drain Caused by Unfortunate Investments—Liabilities of $88,000, with Assets of But $12,000.

Sturgis, Sept 16.—The village of Burr Oak, situated six miles east of Sturgis, is all torn up and some of its citizens are heartbroken because the private bank here of Daniel F. Parsons has suspended. Parsons' was one of the oldest banks in this part of the state and enjoyed the greatest confidence of its patrons. Mr. Parsons was supposed to be immensely wealthy by everyone and able to withstand any commercial storm. Mr. Parson's capital is estimated at $100,000. Besides property in Burr Oak and vicinity and in Detroit, he has 16 flat buildings in Chicago and property in Salt Lake City, Utah. Tuesday the bank received deposits all day and no sign of suspension was hinted. Wednesday morning notices of suspension were posted on the bank. The assignee says that George S. Sheffield, a wealthy manufacturer of Burr Oak, is the largest individual depositor, his deposits reaching more than $10,000. The next largest is the Sheffield Manufacturing company, of Burr Oak, whose deposits are $8,000. There are numerous small depositors of from $1,000 to $5,000. Mr. Parsons stated to-day that the prime cause of his failure was error of judgment in making investments in Chicago, where he was induced to make heavy investments.

Assignee Heimbaugh, of the Parsons bank in Burr Oak, made a statement that the creditors of the bank would in all probability receive ten cents on the dollar. A party of women went to Parsons' residence and said if they could get hold of him they would hang him. Parsons is still in bed and they were kept out of the house. The cash in the vaults was counted and it was found that there was $250 on hand, although from $12,000 to $15,000 had been deposited in the last few days. Parsons' son kept the books of the bank and was cashier, but Parsons kept his own private books himself. These private books have not been posted for six months and it is impossible to tell anything about them.

Sturgis, Sept. 19.—The inventory of the defunct private banking house of Daniel F. Parson in Burr Oak has been completed by Assignee Himebaugh and the experts. The liabilities were found to be $88,000 and the assets $12,000. The books show over $80,000 due depositors, who will receive practically nothing.

Favor Prohibition.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 20.—The Michigan M. E. conference had a lively contest Monday afternoon over the question of adoption of resolutions pledging the brethren to prohibition. Some of the delegates bitterly opposed the resolutions, on the ground that it was a blow at a man's individual rights. The prohibitionists had a majority of the votes, however, and the resolutions were adopted. They severely censure ministers who have voted any other than the prohibition ticket in the past, and instruct them implicitly not to do so in the future.

Fruit Train Wrecked.

Benton Harbor, Sept. 20.—A fruit train on the Chicago & West Michigan railroad, bound for Chicago, was wrecked here Monday night by collision with a local freight train which was standing in the yards. An engine and ten cars were completely demolished. Thousands of bushels of fruit were crushed in the telescoped cars. The engineer and fireman of the incoming train narrowly escaped death by jumping. The loss will aggregate $40,000.

City Will Assist.

Owosso, Sept. 19.—A stock company capitalized at $100,000 will be organized in this city to resume the business of the Woodward furniture works, recently destroyed by fire. L. E. Woodward, William E. McKenzie, D. C. Clapp and several other wealthy men of the city will take most of the stock. A bonus of $20,000 will be given by the city.

Wants $10,000 Damages.

Corunna, Sept. 19.—Margaret Sherwood has commenced suit against the Michigan Central railroad for $10,000 damages for injuries received in Owosso August 23. She stepped off a car and before she was firmly on her feet was severely jostled, resulting in a sprained ankle and spine.

Found Dead in Bed.

Owosso, Sept. 18.—Sidney Gayer, aged 40 years, was found dead in bed at the residence of James Conley, in Hazleton township. A coroner's jury rendered a verdict of death from heart disease.

Fell Off a Dock.

Marquette, Sept. 17.—Will Lacomb, 14 years of age, fell off the dock while watching the whaleback Columbus bring in an excursion, and was drowned. His body was recovered.

School Census of Pontiac.

Pontiac, Sept. 19.—The school census of this city shows that there are 1,670 children of school age which is an increase of 100 over last year.

Renominated.

Saginaw, Sept. 17.—The Eighth district democrats nominated Hon. Ferdinand Brucker for congress by acclamation.

DEATH OF WINNIE DAVIS.

After a Long Sickness the "Daughter of the Confederacy" Passes Away in Rhode Island.

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Sept. 19.—Miss Winnie Davis, daughter of Mrs. Jefferson Davis, died at noon Sunday at the Rockingham hotel, to which place she came as a guest in the early part of the Pier's social season. She had been ill for several weeks and a fortnight ago her ailment was diagnosed as malarial gastritis.

[Miss Winnie Davis, the "Daughter of the Confederacy," was born in the confederate executive mansion at Richmond, Va., in 1863. She was educated principally at home, owing to the trouble surrounding her father and the publicity which attended all movements of the Davis family. Miss Davis attained her maturity at Beauvoir, Miss. Here she assisted her mother in various ways, and took her place in the many social functions of the place. She was her father's constant companion. She assisted him in all his work, and much of the information which was required by Mr. Davis in his writings was secured for him by his daughter. Her strong character was marked from youth. She was engaged to Mr. Wilkerson, of Syracuse, N. Y., but shortly after her father's death, the engagement was broken off. While no public explanation of the rupture was given, it is well known that it was for the purpose of maintaining her father's name. She received the name "Daughter of the Confederacy" in 1886, when her father made his famous trip through the south. Mr. Davis being unable to appear, Miss Winnie was brought before the thousands at the different points along the route and introduced as the daughter of the confederacy.]

THE ODD-FELLOWS.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order in Annual Session in Boston.

Boston, Sept. 20.—The sovereign grand lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows met in annual session in this city yesterday, and were given a welcome by Mayor Quincy. The lodge then proceeded to business.

Grand Secretary J. Frank Grant presented a voluminous report covering a vast amount of detail of interest solely to the members of the order. The following statistics show the standing of the order December 31, 1897:

The odd fellows sent a message to President McKinley bearing greetings to him and to the soldiers and sailors of our army and navy, with congratulations upon the glorious victory which their valor has achieved in the war with Spain, and to the sick and wounded heartfelt sympathy, with hope for their speedy recovery and restoration to home and family.

Boston, Sept. 21.—Alfred S. Pinkerton, of Worcester, Mass., was unanimously elected grand sire of the sovereign grand lodge I. O. O. F. yesterday and it was voted to hold the next annual session in Detroit, Mich.

OLD GLORY FLOATS.

The Stars and Stripes Once More Flung to the Breeze in the City of Havana.

Havana, Sept. 21.—At ten o'clock Tuesday morning the first American flag in Havana, since the emblem was lowered by Consul General Lee, was hoisted on the flagstaff of the Trocha hotel, the headquarters of the United States evacuation commission. A guard of marines was posted at the entrance to the grounds. Col. Clous and Capt. Payne stood on the roof of the hotel at either side of the flagstaff. At ten o'clock sharp a quartermaster of the steamer Resolute hoisted the flag, which unfurled and fluttered proudly in the breeze. All the members of the commission raised their hats and cheered the stars and stripes. The approaches to the grounds at either end of the street were patrolled by squads of the Guardia Civile in order that the commissioners might not be molested.

Fatal Storm in Spain.

Madrid, Sept. 20.—A destructive hurricane swept over southern Spain, doing great damage in the provinces of Seville and Granada. Six persons were killed and many injured and a number of buildings were destroyed at Seville and 85 houses were demolished and many persons fell victims to the storm at Guadix, in the province of Granada.

Well-Known Educator Dies.

Washburn, Wis., Sept. 19.—Prof. G. G. Williams, former president of the State Teachers' association and of late years teacher of science in the high school at West Superior, Wis., died Sunday at Ashland of typhoid fever.

A Triple Crime.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Revenge for fancied wrongs prompted Fred Benfield, in a fit of drunken rage, to fatally shoot Mrs. Emma Jungenberg and her baby son, Emil, in this city, and then commit suicide.

Death of Capt. Capron.

Fort Meyer, Va., Sept. 19.—Capt. Allyn Capron, First artillery, died at his home near here yesterday. Capt. Capron was one of the best-known officers in the regular army. When Gen. Shafter's corps went to Santiago Capt. Capron accompanied it, and his battery did notable work in the battle of Santiago. During the first day's fight before the city Capt. Capron's son, Capt. Allyn K. Capron, of the rough riders, was killed.

Tragedy in West Virginia.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 20.—News was received here from Lewis county of a double murder and suicide not far from Churchville, that county. The murderer, Wardy Wolfe, was insane and was believed to be harmless. Impelled by a sudden hallucination he shot Pullian Wolfe, his brother, and Wardy Wolfe, Sr., his father, killing both, then turned the pistol on himself with fatal effect.

Found No Gold.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 20.—The steam schooner Excelsior arrived Monday afternoon from Copper river, Alaska, with 200 prospectors who failed to find gold. They report that the gunboat Wheeling will bring down 150 destitute men from Copper river.

Disgusted Gold-Seeker.

Calumet, Sept. 19.—Will Marston has returned from a trip to Alaska, disgusted with the country and the prospect of getting rich there. His party explored on the Copper river and out of the 4,800 who were there Marston says not one washed an ounce of gold.

Large Shingle Mill Burned.

Standish, Sept. 18.—The big shingle mill belonging to Mr. Jackman, of West Branch, was burned at Edwards, near Alger. Loss, $3,000. A large number of bolts, logs, etc., were burned also.

Bay City dealers in lumber are jubilant over a healthy demand for their goods. Shippers and inspectors are busy, many buyers have been and are now in the market, and the fall trade opens better than for several years.

The Michigan Salt association is beginning to feel the scarcity of cars which usually comes on about this time of the year, when the fall shipments of grain commence. The association at Bay City is over 200 cars behind its orders, and for two months the famine will increase instead of diminish.

FOR LOVE OF HER.

The long, long day had saddened into night
And summer's thousand voices all were dumb,
My heart despairing with the waning light,
Because she did not come.

The troubled sea had sobbed itself to sleep,
Like some sad child who missed its mother's care;
The trees bowed low as if they, too, would weep
Because she was not there.

A tender cloud hid the moon's sorrowing.
Earth's sluggish pulse with longing was astir;
I wondered if the birds would wake and sing
While yet they wanted her.

The moon burst forth from out its hiding place,
Across the sky the glad stars traced her name,
A drowsy lily upward turned its face,
And then—she came! She came!

Last Tuesday Chas. Elliott, of Adrian, tried to jump on a moving train, but missed his footing and was thrown under the train, the wheels cutting off both legs. His injuries caused his death which occurred Thursday afternoon.

One of the most beautiful sights in the free stree fair is when a young man purchases a hunk of taffy, then passes it to his best girl, and each in turn takes a bite till it is all gone. Verily in harmony there is sweetness.—Hudson Post.

While excavating in a cellar beneath one of Dr. Eaton's tenement houses on Lane street, workmen ran upon a great quantity of perfectly-formed human bones. They were undoubtedly parts of the frame work of some aboriginal race, who used to drink Zauber Wasser and run street fairs years ago.—Hudson Gazette.

Tecumseh is enjoying a building boom. Sixteen new houses, a grain elevator and a building for the telephone exchange are now in course of construction.—Hudson Gazette.

This is news to the Tecumseh people but we are glad to hear that the telephone exchange are putting up a building of their own.

There was a bicycle collision last Thursday about two miles out of Hudson, which had force enough to stop an Adrian street car. John Gray, who lives in Hudson township, was returning home on his wheel, and Will Richard was coming home to the city. In the dark they failed to see each other and the result was a broken jaw for Richard.

Prof. Tom Rinehart was suspected of stealing his own wheel last night. He started from town and a policeman, not knowing who he was, yelled at him to stop. The professor did not heed the injunction, whereupon the copper fired his pistol into the air. Tom is now thinking of organizing a wild west show.—Adrian Daily Times.

Little Harvey Andrus was recently arrested for stealing a watch of Ed. Gosmer of Bridgewater, where he was stopping. He sold the watch to someone on German day, but could not tell to whom. We learn that he owned up to the theft, but when taken before Judge Duffy at Ann Arbor he denied the whole business, and his trial takes place on the 23rd inst.—Manchester Enterprise.

The late war started the kissing habit again, and now at almost any hour of the night you can hear loud reports from various parts of the city which sound just like a horse pulling its foot out of the mud. If kiss they must they should be more sedate and tranquil so that the osculation will act like music from heaven, and have the effect to soothe and pacify the wild and roaring winds.—Blissfield Advance.

The season at Bay View is about over, and men who wear diamonds are beginning to hustle homeward. A servant girl employed by a man named Charloise stole a diamond ring from the house a few days since and the owner declares it worth $225, but the girl got $20 and a spoon for it, and the buyer sold it to some one else for $35. Charloise has caused the arrest of the jeweler, who bought of the thieving servant girl. We never wear our diamonds when we go to Bay View.—Adrian Press.

Last Friday night, W. L. Woodard, the evangelist, delivered a sermon on "The Infallibility of the Bible," complying with a written request from Peter B. Reasoner. Mr. Reasoner took exception to several things said by Mr. Woodard, and the two entered into a very spirited controversy, in which Reasoner called the evangelist a liar, thereby arousing the anger of the congregation, which sided with Mr. Woodard. An exciting time was experienced for a short time, the feeling against Mr. Reasoner being very bitter.—Adrian Press.

A close call to both a fatality and a destructive fire occurred at Klemm's meat market last Friday forenoon. I. N. Starr, of Hillsdale, was cleaning the gasoline burners to the boiler, and in some way spilled the gasoline while trying the burners and in a flash he was completely enveloped in flames. The presence of mind of Harry Cowan in throwing a blanket over the burning man probably saved his life, although he was badly burned about the hands and neck. The fire in the market was quickly extinguished and did little or no damage—Telephone News.

Burglars in Blissfield last Monday night replenished their treasury by robbing several citizens. They had a stick with a hook on it, and raising a window, hooked the breeches of H. B. Hathaway, and drew them out. Mr. H. awoke just in time to see his pants go through the window, but he was not quick enough to save them. They also visited the Methodist minister and two or three other parties, but the only haul which amounted to anything was the breeches of Mr. Hathaway, from which they extracted $30 and then left the garment where the owner could find it.—Hudson Post.

Cheap Excursion to Cleveland and Buffalo.

The Olin family excursion to Cleveland, O., and Buffalo, N. Y., will be run over the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railway, Sept. 29. Train leaves Tecumseh at 7:33. Round trip rate to Cleveland $5.10, to Buffalo $7.35. Tickets good thirty days. Passengers will change to special train at Adrian.

Housework as a Means of Physical Culture.

Housework is excellent for the development of certain parts of the body, though we often see persons who have long done a great deal of housework and are yet stiff and awkward and unhealthy. Sometimes they have worked too hard; but this is not as often the case as it is that they have worked improperly, and have not supplemented the indoor work by any regular exercise in the fresh air. If one slouches around over her work in crooked shoes and ill-arranged dress, walks heavily and flat-footed, and lets her body fall almost double when she sits down, she may be stronger than if she had taken no exercise at all, but she cannot expect to find much exhilaration in it. But if one secures for herself that sense of comfort which comes from wearing a neat, trim dress and well-fitting shoes, steps about lightly and briskly, with her weight mainly on the ball of her foot, she will naturally do everything with more or less ease and grace, and can find many worse kinds of exercise than making beds, or sweeping, or even washing dishes.—From "Exercise for Women," in Demorest's Magazine for September.

Chicago Excursion—Lake Shore Ry.

Will be run over the Lake Shore Ry., Sept. 24. Tickets at $2.75 for round trip good on train leaving Tecumseh at 7:33 a. m. to Adrian thence on special train leaving at 9:30 a. m. Tickets good until Sept. 26 for return.

Low Rate to Chicago from Adrian via Wabash Railroad.

The Wabash railroad will sell tickets to Chicago, good going on any train, Sept. 24th a. m., returning on any train leaving there Sept. 26th at a fare of $2.50 for the round trip. Remember this gives you three days and two nights in Chicago by taking advantage of the running of trains.

Commission to Probe the Conduct of the War Department Is Now in Session.

ALGER ASKED FOR AN INVESTIGATION.

President McKinley Puts No Limit Upon the Scope of the Inquiry and Will Render All the Assistance Possible—Says If There Are Wrong-Doers They Must Be Punished.

Washington, Sept. 26.—The commission to investigate the conduct of the war department during the recent conflict with Spain held its initial meeting in the office of President McKinley. The members are:

Maj. Gen. Granville M. Dodge, of Iowa; Col. J. A. Sexton, of Illinois; Capt. E. P. Howell, of Georgia; Maj. Gen. J. M. Wilson, chief of engineers of the United States army; Hon. Charles Denby, of Indiana, late minister to China; ex-Gov. Urban A. Woodbury, of Vermont; ex-Gov. James A. Beaver, of Pennsylvania; Maj. Gen. H. McD. Cook, of the army (retired), and Dr. Phineas S. Conner, of Cincinnati, a prominent physic

The President Speaks.

President McKinley told the members that the organization of the commission had been undertaken at the request of Secretary Alger, and read a letter from the secretary, in which he made the request. In addressing the commission the president said:

"Gentlemen: Before suggesting the matters which shall come before you for investigation I desire to express my appreciation to each of you for your willingness to accept the patriotic service to which you have been invited. You are to perform one of the highest public duties that can fall to a citizen, and your unselfishness in undertaking it makes me profoundly grateful.

"There has been in many quarters severe criticism of the conduct of the war with Spain. Charges of criminal neglect of the soldiers in camp and field and hospital and in transports have been so persistent that, whether true or false, they have made a deep impression upon the country. It is my earnest desire that you shall thoroughly investigate these charges and make the fullest examination of the administration of the war department in all of its branches, with the view to establishing the truth or falsity of these accusations. I put upon you no limit to the scope of your investigation. Of all departments connected with the army I invite the closest scrutiny and examination, and shall afford every facility for the most searching inquiry. The records of the war department and the assistance of its officers shall be subject to your call.

"I cannot impress upon you too strongly my wish that your investigation shall be so thorough and complete that your report when made will fix the responsibility for any failure or fault by reason of neglect, incompetency or maladministration upon the officers and bureaus responsible therefor—if it be found that the evils complained of have existed.

"The people of the country are entitled to know whether or not the citizens who so promptly responded to the call of duty have been neglected or misused or maltreated by the government to which they so willingly gave their services. If there have been wrongs committed, the wrong-doers must not escape conviction and punishment."

A Policy Outlined.

Washington, Sept. 27.—The commission selected by the president to investigate the conduct of the war department held its first formal session Monday with all the members present.

The meeting was strictly secret, no newspaper representatives or others not connected with the board being admitted.

The session was confined to a meeting of two hours' duration in the forenoon, after which an adjournment was taken until ten o'clock Tuesday. The proceedings were limited to the outlining of a general policy and the formulation of letters of inquiry.

The commission decided to hold two sessions daily, one in the forenoon from 10 to 12:30, and the other in the afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock.

Applications for Pensions.

Washington, Sept. 24.—About 500 applications for pensions arising out of the war with Spain have been filed at the pension office. They embrace all classes, including widows, claims for injuries, etc. It is the purpose of Commissioner Evans to create a new division for the adjudication of these cases when they will be taken up and disposed of as rapidly as possible.

Dawson's Death Rate.

Port Townsend, Wash., Sept. 28. — All arrivals from Dawson during the past month have reported the health conditions in Dawson as something most deplorable and a death rate ranging from five to seventeen per day.

The Plan Indorsed.

Washington, Sept. 23.—The plan to have the school children of America present a monument of La Fayette to the French republic at the Paris exposition has been indorsed by President McKinley.

New York, Sept. 27.—The New England Loan and Trust company has gone into the hands of a receiver with heavy liabilities. The home office is in Des Moines, Ia.

Had Many Wives.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 24.—Charles W. Woodruff, under arrest here for bigamy, is said to have married more than 50 women since 1885.

Resignation Accepted.

Washington, Sept. 27.—The resignation of Gen. Stewart L. Woodford as minister to Spain has been accepted by the president.

The national conference in Oakland, Neb., of the Swedish Baptist church petitioned President McKinley to keep the entire Philippine islands.

Through a Trestle.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 27.—A train went through a trestle near here and 20 persons were injured and Judge G. W. Davis, of Oak Cliff, was killed.

ROOSEVELT IS THE CHOICE

The Colonel of the "Rough Riders" Nominated for Governor by the New York Republicans.

OTHER STATE OFFICERS ARE SELECTED.

Resolutions Congratulate the Country on Conclusion of War with Spain, Say Philippines Must Be Retained, Commend Annexation of Hawaii and Favor Gold Standard.

Convention Hall, Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 28.—The republican convention nominated the following ticket Tuesday: For governor, Theodore Roosevelt, of Oyster Bay; lieutenant governor, Timothy L. Woodruff, of Kings; comptroller, William J. Morgan, of Erie; secretary of state, John T. McDonough, of Albany; state treasurer, John B. Jaeckel, of Cayuga; state engineer, Edward A. Bond, of Jefferson; attorney-general, John C. Davies, of Oneida.

The Platform.

The resolutions congratulate the country upon the conclusion of the war with Spain—a war not undertaken for conquest, but for the sacred cause of humanity, and for the just protection of American interests. The patriotic wisdom, patient courage and the broad humanity which distinguished the conduct of President McKinley during the critical periods of diplomatic negotiations and battle, and which now guide him in the restoration of peace are eulogized. The army and navy are congratulated upon their splendid victories, and a welcome home is extended our brave soldiers and sailors, who, by their courage and sacrifices, have added a new dignity to American citizenship and given new power and meaning to our flag.

Must Retain Philippines.

The platform continues: "We have abiding confidence that the president will conclude this peace upon terms that will satisfy the conscience, the judgment and the high purpose of the American people. We realize that when the necessities of war compelled our nation to destroy Spanish authority in the Antilles and in the Philippines, we assumed solemn duties and obligations, alike to the people of the islands we conquered and to the civilized world. We cannot turn these islands back to Spain. We cannot leave them, unarmed for defense and untried in state craft, to the horrors of domestic strife, or to partition among European powers. We have assumed the responsibilities of victory, and wherever our flag has gone there the liberty, the humanity and the civilization which that flag embodies and represents must remain and abide forever. The republican party has been the party of brave conservatism, of wise progress and of triumphant faith in the nationality of this people, and we know that the president and statesmen and voters of the republican party will meet these issues of the future as bravely and triumphantly as we have met the issues of the past."

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The annexation of Hawaii is commended, allegiance to the doctrines of the St. Louis platform is renewed, and the declaration is made that the election of republican members of congress and of a republican state legislature will mean that New York shall stand for the maintenance of the gold standard and for such a revision of the currency laws as will guarantee to the labor of the country that every paper promise to pay a dollar, issued under the authority of the United States, shall be of absolute and equal value with a gold dollar always and everywhere.

In the interests of American labor and commerce, the platform declares that American products should be carried in American ships and favors the upbuilding of American merchant marine, which will give us our share in the carrying trade of the world in time of peace, and constitute an effective naval militia in time of war. The platform commends the administration of Gov. Black, the work of the legislature, and then deals with purely state issues.

Arrested in London.

London, Sept. 28.—It has been reported that the woman known as Dr. Nancy Guilford, of Bridgeport, Conn., has been arrested here charged with being concerned in the murder of Emma Gill, of Southington, Conn., whose body, cut into several pieces, was found some time ago in the Yellow Mill pond, near Bridgeport, Conn.

Will Not Accept.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Sept. 27.—Rev. Thomas E. Green has declined the election to be bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Iowa, because of the veiled charges that have been insinuated against him by some of those who refused to make unanimous his election at the recent special convention.

Wants to Be a State.

Washington, Sept. 26.—The annual report of C. M. Barnes, governor of the territory of Oklahoma, shows a rapidly increasing immigration and a prosperous condition of all the industrial interests of the territory, and says statehood is earnestly desired.

DIVERSIFIED FARMING.

Old Saying About Keeping All the Eggs in One Basket Is as True as Ever It Was.

This is a subject which cannot be too often brought to the attention of farmers everywhere, because it is the most rational as well as the most profitable system that has ever been devised.

To raise corn alone or wheat alone or cotton alone is not the part of wisdom. Thousands of acres of Kentucky land is barren because it has been devoted to tobacco exclusively and multiplied thousands are barren in other states because cotton, wheat or corn has been grown year after year, until the plant food for the particular favorite crop is exhausted.

There is hardly a place in the United States where the farmer is confined to a single crop as his main dependence. H can rotate corn, oats and grass or clover; corn, wheat and clover, or corn, oats, wheat and clover in the corn belt, cotton and almost any other crop or series of crops in most of the cotton belt and even the great wheat fields of the northwest may be given over to a rotation of at least three years' duration to the benefit of the land.

When one crop fails from stress of weather another is usually the better for it. This year the corn prospect is very bad, while in the same sections, wheat, oats and meadows are looking better than usual, and the man who has diversified crops is able to face the situation with calmness.

Our southern brother who devotes his whole time to cotton and buys everything he needs in the way of food, might profitably devote a few acres to growing food supplies with great profit, and if to these he would add live stock he would find a profitable market for his stock and secure the best fertilizer for his cotton at the same time.—Farmers' Voice.

GOOD THING TO HAVE.

Some Reasons Why a Reliable Scale Should Be Found on Every Up-to-Date Farm.

Comparatively few farm conveniences equal those of a good farm scale in conducting farm operations on a business basis. It is very unfortunate for a man to be placed in such a position that he is obliged to accept the weights and measures of a buyer in disposing of his produce, though we are glad to say misuse of this advantage is comparatively rare among buyers of farm produce. But in addition to the economy of knowing the weights of produce to be sold, the scale is of immense advantage in keeping track of the growth of live stock during feeding operations and in testing the feeding qualities of the animals produced on the farm, as may be done by frequent weighing. The scale is also an element of interest when boys are growing up on the farm. They have a natural instinct for keeping track of those things that may be found out by weighing and measuring, and the scale thus becomes an educating influence that has great value attached.—Prairie Farmer.

"Saved Her Life."

MRS. JOHN WALLET, of Jefferson, Wis., than whom none is more highly esteemed or widely known, writes. "In 1890 I had a severe attack of LaGrippe and at the end of four months, in spite of all physicians, friends and good nursing could do, my lungs heart and nervous system were so completely wrecked, my life was despaired of, my friends giving me up. I could only sleep by the use of opiates. My lungs and heart pained me terribly and my cough was most aggravating. I could not lie in one position but a short time and not on my left side at all. My husband brought me Dr. Miles' Nervine and Heart Cure and I began taking them. When I had taken a half bottle of each I was much better and continuing persistently I took about a dozen bottles and was completely restored to health to the surprise of all."

Fatal Collision with Cyclist.

Niles, Sept. 27.—Justin Hill, an old resident of Van Buren county and member of a prominent family, was run down Tuesday by William Sherman, a bicyclist, and killed. Sherman is under arrest.

WILL FIX TAX LEVY.

Michigan Property Owners to Pay $2,158,770.57—Slight Decrease Over Last Year.

Lansing, Sept. 27.—The state tax to be levied in Michigan this year will amount to a trifle more than 9.5 mills on the equalized valuation of the state. The state board of equalization meets every five years and equalizes the value of each county. It last met in August, 1896, when the value of all the real and personal property in the state was equalized at $1,105,100,000. On this basis, therefore, the state tax to be paid in December will amount to $2,158,770.57, a decrease of $221,136.56 from the levy of last year.

This decrease would be greater were it not for the fact that at the special session of the legislature last spring a war loan of $500,000 was authorized, and bonds for that amount have been sold. This law provided for creating a sinking fund from which these bonds are to be paid when due. They are ten-year bonds, but the state reserved the right to pay them any time after five years, and the indications are that they will be paid promptly at the end of the five-year period, as the sinking fund will then contain more than enough to pay all of them. The law authorizing the loan provided that a levy of one-eighth of a mill per dollar on the taxable property of the state should be made this year and each succeeding year until the fund contained a sufficient fund to pay these bonds. This year's levy at the rate mentioned will yield $138,137.50.

The total state tax levy is made up of the following items:

For the university, $187,183.33; state normal college, $61,150; branch normal school, $12,000; agricultural college, $16,500; mining college, $40,000; industrial school for boys, $60,500; industrial home for girls, $40,000; asylum for insane at Kalamazoo, $11,700; asylum for insane at Newberry, $28,063; home for epileptics, $42,788; soldiers' home, $88,000; state school for dependent children, $31,000; school for the deaf and dumb, $70,000; school for the blind, $23,000; state fish commission, $15,000; Michigan national guard, $89,665.64; state naval brigade, $11,208; state library, $4,000; state horticultural society, $1,000; state board of health, $4,500; state weather bureau, $1,000; dairy and food commission, $18,000; beet sugar bounty, $5,000; Michigan war loan of 1898, $138,137.50; general purposes of the state government, $1,154,375; total, $2,158,770.67.

Out of the sum listed under the head of "general purposes of the state government" there will be paid the cost of maintaining the insane, which is estimated at $525,000 for the year. There will also be paid the salaries and expenses of all state officers, including the judiciary, and the salaries of the clerks in the various state departments, the costs of suits, care of juvenile offenders, the current expenses of the penal institutions, expenses of the legislature and the awards of the board of state auditors. This board audits bills aggregating about $200,000 per year, having the adjustment of all claims not specifically provided for in the various laws, special and general.

Provision is also made in the general levy for what is known as "continuing annual appropriations" made by various legislatures, this item including the salaries of asylum officials, cost of factory inspection, expenses of labor bureau, etc., the whole amounting to $94,400.

It is estimated that the state will receive from department fees, etc., during the year $173,975.

SHOT BY THIEVES.

Samuel Rothfuss Attacked by Robbers at Blissfield—May Die of His Wounds.

Blissfield, Sept. 26.—Samuel Rothfuss, clerk in the Blissfield state bank here, was shot by robbers at one o'clock Sunday morning as he was passing the post office and fatally wounded. Rothfuss heard a noise at the post office and started to investigate. He was immediately ordered to hold up his hands. He fired two shots from his revolver without effect. The burglar returned the fire, two bullets entering Rothfuss' body, one in the abdomen. The robbers stole a team of horses and fled toward Detroit. Citizens organized a posse and gave chase and the sheriff is also after the robbers. The safe in the post office was blown open, but nothing is missing.

Must Make Good Its Reserve.

Lansing, Sept. 27.—Insurance Commissioner Campbell has ordered the American Benevolent association, of Detroit, at once to make good its reserve, which has fallen below the legal limit, or to cease doing business. The commissioner has recently made an examination of the affairs of the Western Mutual Life Insurance company, of Chicago, and discovered some things which he will criticise in a report soon to be made.

Wrecked by an Explosion.

Owosso, Sept. 23.—The home of County Drain Commissioner Parmer, on Fletcher street, was completely wrecked by an explosion. Loss, $2,000. The explosion is believed to have been the work of outsiders. Luckily no one was hurt, although the family was asleep at the time.

Michigan Soldier Dies.

Held on Suspicion of Murder.

Houghton, Sept. 27. — Nicholas Thompson is in jail here under suspicion of having murdered his wife at Portage Entry last Tuesday night. No trace of the woman can be found.

For Congress.

Manistee, Mich., Sept. 28.—R. P. Bishop was unanimously renominated for congress by the Ninth district republican convention Tuesday.

THE FARMER'S STORY.

How a Newspaper Reporter Interviewed Him and Obtained an Interesting Article of News.

From the Press, Milroy, Ind.

Wesley Holmes, of Milroy, Ind., was in the depot waiting for his train, when a newspaper reporter addressed him. "O! you have come to inquire about that little experience of mine," said he, in a pleasant manner, "Well, I guess it was no little or insignificant thing after all. Yes, I'll tell you the complete story; but I did not suppose it would interest the public.

I have been a farmer all my life, and would do nothing else now, although a few years ago I would have preferred an easier job.

"I had good health all along, until this pestilent grip came. In January of '92 I was attacked with it and had a serious time. At first I was merely confined to the house for four or five days, with a severe cold, but I ached all over, and my limbs pained me when I went about. None of them were severe—just dull achings, but I was not very comfortable. The doctor came, examined me and said I had the grip. He gave me some medicine which I used and in a few days I was able to be out.

"But a day or two after I was caught in a rain, and the next morning I felt the same as before, only the pains were worse. The doctor gave me more of the same medicine, and attended me for six weeks before I was a dismissed patient. This time my trouble took on a new form, there being a cold on my lungs. I was finally able to get outside the house, but became worse again, and could not do any more work the remainder of the winter, being confined to the house most of the time.

"When spring opened up and good weather came I was better, but I always afterward had those peculiar pains all over me, and the next winter I went through with almost the same experience. 'Having the grip again,' the doctor said, "but the fact was I had never entirely recovered, and each winter I had a relapse just about as soon as the bad weather commenced. I kept getting worse with each attack, and the spells would last longer. The third winter the trouble took on the more serious form of muscular rheumatism, together with the trouble with my lungs. I was not able to do any work from the 10th of December to the first of May, and half the time all summer I was indisposed from my labors. I tried another doctor, but he did me very little good, and when the bad weather began in November I was worse than ever.

"A neighbor who had suffered from the after effects of the grip as I had, advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I did not feel that they would do me any good, but my wife urged me to try them, which I finally did. I remember I took the first dose on Christmas day, 1895. I kept taking the medicine until I had used two boxes. By this time I had noticed no change and would have quit discouraged had it not been for my wife. She bought more of the pills and I continued taking them. And I am glad to-day that I did for when I had finished the next box I was much better, and three more boxes cured me. I took six boxes, altogether, taking the last about the first of February, '96. I never had to take any more medicine, and I am sure Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People cured me of my trouble, and I cheerfully recommend them to others."

The power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in the vast number of diseases due to impure or poisoned blood, has been demonstrated in thousands of instances as remarkable as the one related above. These pills build up the blood by supplying its life-giving elements which nourish the various organs, stimulating them to activity in the performance of their functions and thus drive disease from the system. No one who is suffering can rightfully neglect this way to restore health.

HANDY CORN-MARKER.

four-row marker, but has hinges on it so it will mark on rolling or uneven ground as well as on level ground. The wings can be turned up so as to go through a narrow gate or around obstructions in a field. I used four six-inch T hinges and a common buggy tongue. My runners are three and one-half feet long, six inches wide and two inches thick. Have a wide board on the center so as to ride if you mark by stakes.—G. A. Baldwin, in Ohio Farmer.

The Plant and the Soil.

Each plant has its own requirements of water and heat. Wheat, oats and tame grasses require a soil that will retain 20 to 25 per cent. of its own weight of water and a medium temperature for their best development. This means a fine-textured soil, well settled below the surface. Corn and the sorghums do best on a moisture content of 16 to 20 per cent. and a high temperature. Corn roots prefer a thoroughly pulverized soil, not too compact. We always find the fibrous roots or food gatherers most abundant where the soil was well stirred. Potatoes will thrive on less moisture than corn, but as a rule good corn soil is good potato soil. —Western Plowman.

Corn Plant Possibilities.

The possibilities of the corn plant as a source of food for man and beast, aside from its other almost innumerable uses, are somewhat astounding when the figures are looked into. Mr. Gibbs, of Philadelphia, speaking on the subject before the New York farmers, among other things said that there is no question that the American cornstalk, the hard, woody, fibrous portion of the stalk, will furnish all the rations that are used for feeding horses by all the continental armies. Nothing else is required. They can be sent to the field in a bag or as pressed cake, ready for use, with all the nitrogenous substance required. No hay or other feed is necessary.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 9, 1898.
Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

GENTLEMEN:—Your Pe-ru-na, as a tonic, is certainly unexcelled, and in a number of cases that have come under my observation where it has been used for catarrh, or any disease which has its origin in that malady, it has been of great benefit. Pe-ru-na has my hearty recommendation, both as a tonic and catarrh remedy.

W. A. MacCORKLE.

Pe-ru-na is a permanent and scientific cure for catarrh. It is purely vegetable and works in harmony with nature. All druggists sell it.

Rev. C. I. Deyo will preach on the following subjects next Sunday. Morning, "The Power of an Endless Life;" evening, "Martyrs of Our Modern Civilization." Fellowship meeting Saturday at 2:30 p. m. A large attendance is urged as business of importance will come before the church.

Mesdames A. Underwood and Wm. E. Nivison were among the number who started for the Adrian Fair last Thurs day, but who did not get any farther than the city, finding it fairer visiting their friends inside of a comfortable dwelling than on the disagreeable fair grounds. It was all the same a trip from home and they enjoyed it.

On Sunday morning, Miss China Ellis drove her father's horse to Britton and left him in charge of Frank Brown, while she went to Onsted to attend the funeral of a relative. Sunday evening about 7 o'clock the horse was stolen from the barn. Miss Ellis, on her return, was obliged to borrow a horse to drive home. Monday afternoon the stolen horse was found in Mrs. Cheever's barn and returned to Frank Brown. It is evident that the thieves calculated to run the horse off Monday night. There is a detective working on the case and its expected that early developments will be a surprise to some Britton people.

Ten Million Wheelmen.

It is stated by competent authority that there are ten million people in America who are bicycle riders. Probably each one gets an average of one hurt in a season, and that is just when Henry & Johnson's Arnica & Oil Liniment gets in its good work. Nothing has ever been made that will cure a bruise, cut or sprain so quickly. Also remove pimples, sunburn, tan, or freckles. Clean and nice to use. Take it with you. Costs 25 cents per bottle. Three times as much in a 50 cent bottle. We sell it and guarantee it to give satisfaction or money refunded.

Entered at the postoffice at Tecumseh, Michigan as second class matter.

In the Adrian Telegram one day last week appeared an ante-mortum letter from Hollis Taylor, stating, amongst other things, that Capt. Kyle, of Co. C, was just recovering from a two days' drunk and that he was in no way responsible for obtaining for him (Taylor) the release from camp and the care received at the hands of the K. of P. of Knoxville. "Tom" Kyle and I were schoolmates, he has lived all his life in Tecumseh and has worn out more shoe-leather chasing the streets with subscription papers and doing deeds of kindness for other people than he ever did for himself. I knew at the time this letter was written that Taylor lied or was out of his head or that he never wrote the letter, and proceeded at once to find out what was the matter. As a matter of fact had it not been for Capt. Kyle, Taylor could never have left camp to receive care from the K. of P. people. Kyle was not drunk nor never has been in such a condition so far as anyone can find out. The boys in Co. C all like him and he stands in good favor with all his fellow officers. To sum it all up, he is the same good natured, big hearted, successful "Tom" Kyle in camp that he always has been in Tecumseh. 'Tis hard for me to say anything against a dead man, but the wrongs of the living must be vindicated. Anyone who will take pains to read what follows will discover a complete vindication of Capt. Kyle and I am more than pleased to print it. GEO. N. STACY.

Camp Poland, Tenn.,

We, the undersigned, members of Company C, 31st Michigan Volunteer Infantry, deem it our duty to let the people of Tecumseh and the friends and family of Capt. T. R. Kyle know that he has been shamefully and wrongly accused of conduct of which he was not guilty.

We wish to let it be known that had it not been for the efforts of Capt. Kyle, our deceased comrade, Hollis Taylor, could not have been taken from the camp and given the good treatment, which he received during his last illness.

Col. Fred Shubel will bear us out in this statement, and as for being drunk, Capt. Kyle has been sick for three weeks with the fever and is still unfit for duty.

EDITOR TECUMSEH HERALD:—

In writing this letter I fully realize the delicacy and difficulty of the task, which I have undertaken. Indeed were it not for the parents and friends at home whose right it is to know how their dear ones in camp are faring, I should not attempt to answer the letter, which appeared in a recent issue of the Adrian Telegram.

I wish to say at the outset that I am writing to the living and for their benefit alone. God forbid that I should say one disparaging or unkind word of our brother, whom He hath called from our midst.

While Capt. Kyle is by no means a perfect company commander, yet I indignantly protest against any statement that the sick of Co. C have ever suffered because of his neglect. I want to say that in the matter of medicine and medical treatment, the company officers have nothing whatever to say as this responsibility rests with regimental surgeons and if there has been neglect along this line, why shouldn't those to blame for it bear the censure, rather than one who has nothing to do with it.

In regard to food, the company officers do have something to say for in their hands is the company fund, which has been regularly drawn upon to furnish additions to the regular fare. The regular fare consists of pork, fresh beef, (which we have every day) rice, potatoes, beans, onions, coffee with sugar and bread, not hardtack but the best of bread, both white and graham. In addition to this the company fund has furnished us cabbage and some other vegetables, tea with milk, spices and other things used in cooking and oatmeal, which we have regularly for breakfast. We have had oysters twice lately and rice pudding is often served. For dinner yesterday we had mashed potatoes, steak with brown gravy, bread and tea. To-day we had potatoes, steak and gravy, tomatoes, bread and tea. Now while this is far from the fare we are used to at home yet it is by no means sowbelly, beans, bread and coffee. Furthermore the company fund is regularly drawn upon to furnish extras and delicacies for any sick men who ask it.

Now as to the condition of our quarters. The city of Knoxville very kindly furnished us lumber for tent floors and bunks and the regimental quartermaster issues straw to every company so that every one who wishes may have a straw bed in his tent. And those sick, who are willing to go to the regimental hospital, are put on cots, so I can see no reason why any one whether well or sick, should have to sleep on the hard boards.

Let none of my readers think that a captain in his mighty power can grant a furlough to whomsoever he sees fit by no means. An application for furlough is drawn up by the company clerks recommended by the captain, then taken to regimental headquarters for the colonel's indorsement, thence it goes to brigade headquarters, finally it reaches the Assistant Adjutant General's office at Division headquarters where it must await its turn for approval of that officer, thus one can see that this process must take time even when every influence is used to hasten the application through. In the case of Hollis Taylor's leave of absence from camp, Capt. Kyle took upon himself the responsibility of allowing him a leave without permission. And during Taylors's sickness at Mr. Pollock's, no day passed without Capt. Kyle calling on him, although during all this time the Captain was sick, unable to even take the company out for dress parade but he was suffering from camp diarrhoea not from a swelled head as was stated in the letter in the Telegram.

Now, Mr. Editor, I have tried to show to the friends at home the true condition of things here, just as I should do for my own parents, and for the benefit of the friends in and about Tecumseh I should like to have you publish this letter in the HERALD.

Very Respectfully,
G. L. BOND,

Signed, FRANK A. NAY, 1st sergeant.
Will O. OSBORN, sergeant.

Having recently visited Camp Poland, Knoxville, Tenn., to see my brother, who is a member of Co C, 31st Michigan Infantry, in view of the criticisms concerning Capt. Thos. R. Kyle, which have recently by word of mouth and through the press been going around, I feel it but just to Capt. Kyle that I now state in a public manner what I know of him as an officer and his treatment of his men. I was there at the time of Hollis P. Taylor's sickness and know that Capt. Kyle, though far from well himself, put forth every effort in his power that he, Taylor, might have the best care possible under the existing circumstances in camp as he did for all, who were sick, and was greatly worried that more could not be done. In regard to his relations with the men, I am sure no captain could stand higher than he, as I heard nothing but praise for him, as I mingled with the men of his company, and he is also highly esteemed by his brother officers. I sincerely regret that a private letter should be given for publication, reflecting upon his sobriety, for I am confident that he is not given to excessive drinking. In all my examinations, the only criticisms I could make would be the medical and quartermaster's departments, which I consider badly managed.

Knoxville, Tenn.,
Sept. 23, '98.

This is to certify that the undersigned, Knights of Pythias, visited Camp Poland on the night of Sept. 9th, '98, in quest of Hollis Taylor on receipt of a telegram from his Lodge at Tipton, Mich., to look after and care for him. We found Taylor near his tent. It being our desire to remove him to comfortable quarters in a private boarding house, we were directed by the surgeon to Col. Shubel. The latter said it would be perfectly satisfactory provided Capt. Kyle agreed. We found Capt. Kyle and stated to him our mission and he said there was no objection, provided we complied with certain conditions, the substance of which was, we were to keep him advised of Taylor's condition.

Sept. 23, 1898.

I am asked to make a statement in regard to the late Hollis P. Taylor, of Co. C, 31st Michigan, who left the Camp on the evening of September 9th in charge of a committee of the Knights of Pythias, of Knoxville. Private Taylor and said committee appeared before my quarters on the evening in question and the committee very urgently urged and desired that they be allowed to take care of and provide for Taylor in the city while he was sick, guaranteeing perfect accommodations, a trained nurse, a good bed, quiet, and all that could possibly be done to add to his comfort and promote his recovery. Taylor himself appeared to be bright, strong and cheerful as any member of the party and I demurred somewhat in regard to his leaving the Camp, but finally told the committee I would consent to let him go, if they could obtain the consent of his captain (Kyle.) Captain Kyle's permission was promptly and freely given and I heard nothing more of the matter until the death of Taylor was reported on the evening of Sept. 15th.

I make this statement in justice to Captain Kyle and his connection with the matter, as his compliance with the request of the committee was certainly prompt and freely given.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

C. N. Haskell, who seems to continue to control the Lima Northern, notwithstanding the announcement of a local paper that he has disposed of his interest in the property, stated authoritively to-day just what change that is going to be made in the general offices of the company. A dispatch from Lima has been sent out to the effect that all of the offices of the company are to be moved to Lima. This is not true. Only part of the general offices are to be moved to Lima. The general traffic offices are to be retained at Detroit. The offices of the auditor, purchasing agent, chief engineer and division superintendent are to be changed from Tecumseh to Lima. The general superintendent will have his headquarters at Detroit. Mr. Harkell arrived this morning from New York, and was immediately closeted with his attorneys. It is understood that he is arranging the details for the reorganization of the property.—Toledo Blade.

To-morrow W. S. Allen, late auditor of the D. & L. N., will go to New York to see his family. During his stay in Tecumseh, he made many friends, who, not only wish him all success but will never forget him. W. S. Allen, as auditor, was the kindest of employers and 'tis only with the deepest regret that every one of his men part with him. Wednesday afternoon an order was received from New York appointing F. Seymour, of Lima, O. auditor for the receivors of the D. & L. N. and the auditor's office is to-day being removed to Lima, O. At present the superintendent, train dispatcher, car accountant and their forces will remain.

F. Seymour, the new auditor of the D. & L. N. was up from Lima yesterday arranging to move the auditor's office to that city. The following named employes will go with him, A. W. Lishawa, Art Lee, J. E. Baldwin, Tom Caldwell, Geo. Gorland, P. F. Ensminger, and R. B. Tolan. They are now packing up their books and papers preparatory to moving.

Lima, O., Sept. 28.—Auditor F. Seymour, of the Ohio Southern, tendered his resignation to-day to accept a similar position with the D & L. N., succeeding W. S. Allen. The auditor's office, which is now located at Tecumseh, Mich., will be removed to this city. J. Dougal will succeed Mr. Seymour with the Ohio Southern.—Toledo Blade.

Owing to a freight wreck between Adrian and Britton Wednesday morning, Wabash passenger trains Nos. 2 and 5, were detoured over the Lima Northern railroad from south Adrian to Britton. They were two of the finest trains running over the Wabash and caused quite a ripple of excitement at the Tecumseh depot.

Chas. L. Unlaub, train despatcher of the D. & L. N. left Wednesday for Arizona where he will be train dispatcher for the SanteFe Pacific. T. E. Cane will take charge of the office for the present

Geo. P. Christy, stenographer in the auditor's office, resigned his position and leaves Thursday evening to accept a position on the B. & O. railroad. Success George.

The employees of W. S. Allen presented him with some slight tokens of their esteem this forenoon. The boys all think Mr. Allen the best "boss" on earth.

Dan Morris, formerly of the internal revenue office, has accepted a position as clerk in the auditing department of D. T. & M.—Toledo Blade.

Supt. Haskell's mother died at Ottawa Thursday at 4 p. m., Mr. Haskell being on his way there when the word was received of her death.

Doc McCarthy, formerly a roadmaster on the Nichel Plate railroad, was in Tecumseh Thursday visiting old friends.

Mrs. O. P. Fike and son returned from Leipsic Thursday, where they have been visiting for the past two weeks.

If a canvass was taken of the D. & L. N. employes, it would result largely in favor of remaining in Tecumseh.

Roadmaster Grant spent several days on the south end of the line, returning to Tecumseh Thursday morning.

G. C. Shiffer returned from Napoleon Tuesday morning and resumed work in the superintendent's office.

Supt. Haskell was called to Ottawa Monday evening on account of the serious illness of his mother.

Mrs. Al. Lishawa, who has been visiting relatives in Cincinnati, returned home Monday.

Carl Haskell, of the master mechanic's office, spent Sunday with friends in Ottawa, O.

Mr. Reordon, superintendent of the D. T. & M., was here Wednesday.

G. R. Haskell has been on the sick list for the past week or more.

Auditor and Mrs. A. L. Richmond, of Toledo, were in town to-day.

D. C. Corwin, of Onsted, moved his family here Tuesday.

R. B Tolan, of the auditor's office Sundayed in Lima.

Sept. 28 was a happy day for class No. 1, of the Baptist church, who were fortunate enough to have an invitation to spend the afternoon with their classmate, Mrs. Timothy Mills. They amused themselves much as children usually do, who live in town with only an occasional day in the country. Their ages collectively was 866 years as only 14 of their number having assembled to enjoy the bountiful hospitality of one of them. Some were prevented from one cause and some from another much to their regret.

A Farewell Reception.

At the Baptist church last evening an informal reception was tendered by the congregation and friends of Rev. Hudson to bid him God speed in his new field of labor.

The chapel was decorated in willow and feathery clematis. From the center of the room were festooned garlands of green, which were caught at the corners of the table on which dainty refreshments of doughnuts, coffee and fruit were served. Mrs. Gibbs and Mrs. Richter presided at the coffee urns.

After spending a pleasant evening at the church, the friends repaired to the parsonage and presented Rev. and Mrs. Hudson with a side-board at set of dining chairs as a token of the esteem in which they were held.

Woman and Her Ways

FURNISHING A FLAT.

Experience of a Wise Chicago Girl Which Contains a Hint for Prospective Brides.

"There are good as well as bad things to be said of a long engagement," announced Peggy, after she had snuggled down in the sofa pillows with her latest "best friend" touching elbows with her. "Take Beth Thompson, for instance. Her and Fred's engagement was announced over a year ago and there isn't the least sign of an early wedding day. In the meantime they are furnishing their flat."

"Their flat?" echoed the "best friend," with her mouth full of marshmallow paste. "If there isn't any wedding day how in the world can there be a flat?"

"There isn't one really—only just an indefinite one, located off there in the future somewhere, in the midst of rosy-tinted mists. But they are furnishing it, just the same, and substantially, too. At present the articles are stowed away in Beth's mother's garret, but there is quite a pile of them by this time. It's a pity, though, that the card playing season is so nearly over now," added Peggy.

"You see, they're furnishing their flat with prizes won at cinch and euchre parties. They are fine players, and it is a rare thing, indeed, when they do not come home with either the first or second prize. Their friends have entered into the spirit of the thing, and whenever a girl invites them to come in for an informal little evening she buys something which will shine in the famous visionary flat. Then the other players, too, have caught the contagion, and they work with a wonderfully unselfish spirit to help the struggling would-be housekeepers win. Beth told me the other day that she and Fred had enough china plates to run a hotel, and her bonbon spoons would fit out a jewelry shop. As for pictures, she thinks she will have to lay the superfluous ones on the floor, instead of having rugs. Her doilies and embroidered centerpieces will last her for years, and there is a whole shelf full of books for the prospective library.

"Of course there are several duplicates among all these things, but a clumsy young housekeeper will soon reduce that surplus. Beth says that her only fear is that with next winter's earnings added to the wedding presents which will come some day the flat will have to be enlarged into a storage warehouse. The whole thing is lots more exciting than the usual humdrum accumulation of mere bits for the trousseau. If brides would put a little more thought into getting together hall rugs and dresser covers and library lamps, and less into pale kid gloves and lace petticoats there would be fewer young men with a horror of matrimony. I wonder if it would be unmaidenly for a girl to begin a collection of things for housekeeping before she has found the exact man who is to pay rent for the flat?"—Chicago Daily News.

How to Secure Fresh Air.

A lecturer upon health topics said once: "If you have not a cross circulation of air in your bedroom it can be ventilated or the air changed, for the time being at least, by taking the edge of one of the doors in the hand and swinging it briskly to and fro 22 or 23 times." This advice proves to be satisfactory when taken, and if anyone desires the best authority for it the man who raises bees will give it. It is only a returning to nature's first principles. One of the important functions of some of the bees is to keep the hive ventilated, and this they do with their wings, fanning and keeping the air in motion. In warm weather they reduce the temperature in this way.

The French Don't Bake.

In France no family makes its own bread, and better bread cannot be eaten than can be bought at the appropriate shops. No family does its own washing. The family linen is all sent to women who, making this their sole profession, get it up with a care and nicety which can seldom be equaled in any family.

Up-to-Date Baby Carriage.

It is a very common sight in the streets of Paris to see baby carriages which are propelled by electricity.

LATEST IN SKIRTS.

Clever Idea to Facilitate the Laundering of Befrilled, Tucked and Ruffled Petticoats.

The newest notion in petticoats is the "drop" skirt.

A top of white or dark silk comes just to the knee, and to this buttons a flounce of silk or muslin.

A good many women sew the flounce to the top of the skirt, instead of buttoning it.

The top of the flounce is, of course, finished with a straight band, often formed of a wide tape, and the top of the skirt has a substantial facing about two inches deep.

Since skirts must fit so smoothly about the hips and fall full about the feet, the drop skirt becomes almost a necessity.

Silk being the best for the top part of the skirt, a fluffy flounce of nainsook or cambric and lace buttons to a top of white taffeta, and various colored silk flounces—changed to match skirts with which they are to be worn—button or are sewed to a dark silk top, preferably black.

There is economy in this method also. It takes a good many yards to make a top to every petticoat. One woman, who knows just what is what in matters of dress, buttons her washable petticoat flounces to tops of smooth, heavy, white linen.

With lightweight gowns double lace trimmed flounces are attached to the top. This gives an effect that is pretty and fluffy about the feet.

The laundering of the extra flounces is a much easier matter than the doing up of a petticoat made after the usual model.

Everyone who has ironed a white petticoat knows that it is not an easy matter to turn and twist it over an ironing board.

It is a comparatively easy matter to iron a separate flounce on a table, and this the best laundress will tell you is her favorite way of ironing.

Though this is the original form of drop skirt, there is another that bears the same name.

This is the foundation upon which are built skirts of ganzy fabrics.

This underskirt, either of silk or washable material, is completely finished and is only attached to the top skirt at the waist.

Again, this is a practical idea, for in this way one foundation may do for several frocks or a gown may be completely changed by a change of lining.

The tailor-made gowns are now hung over the separately finished skirts and much improved, indeed, are they.

Seams may be pressed flatter and smoother, and there is not the slightest suspicion of the puckering that sometimes will happen when silk and cloth are sewed into the same seam.

THE PATRIOTIC BABY.

He Dresses in Red, White and Blue and Carries an American Flag in His Hand.

The patriotic baby is very conspicuous as he plays on the lawn. The green grass sets off his colors to perfection. He wears a white mull hat with touches of red and blue silk embroidered all over it. His coat is blue cashmere stitched with scarlet and white and has a little braided yoke of white and blue with a ruffle around the edge, bordered with scarlet stitching.

His favorite plaything is an American flag, which corresponds well with his coat. In making up these little cashmere coats with their colored stitching, the silk embroidery can be selected carelessly so long as the three colors are observed. The yoke can be white stitched with red; or blue stitched with white, or white stitched with red and blue. The colors are put together at haphazard with very pretty results.

Tiny Pimples on the Face.

Though it is wiser to allow pimples to come to a head and remove the pus, if they appear at an inconvenient time, when it is desirous that the complexion shall look particularly well, spirits of camphor will drive them in.

FARM & GARDEN.

CONVENIENT EVENER.

Especially Designed for Equalizing Draft When a Number of Horses Are Driven Tandem.

A very convenient evener designed to equalize the draught when the horses are driven tandem may be made as follows: Take a flat piece of iron 1½ inches wide by three-eighths of an inch in thickness and 12 or 15 inches long. Drill a half-inch hole at each end and another midway between. Fasten this iron to the load by means of a bolt or clevis through the center hole in such a manner that the iron shall be upright and be free to move forward and backward. Attach the evener of the rear team to one end, the upper end for convenience, and that of the forward team to the lower end. This will work perfectly with a team of four horses.

If but three are used the central hole should be one-third of the distance between the end holes and the single horse attached to the long end. For six horses use the evener as designed for four horses for the two leading teams, then use the three-horse evener inverted for the wheel horses. By drilling the central hole two-fifths of the distance between the end holes, this evener will be adapted to five horses worked in the awkward fashion of three abreast and two on the lead, or, as they are less often used, two on the pole and three on the lead.—American Agriculturist.

RYE FOR PASTURE.

In Many Respects Its Value Is Greater Than That of Any Other Northwestern Crop.

Rye is one of the most valuable plants that we are likely to have in this northwestern country, and especially in sandy soils. But it has not as yet been generally grown for such use, and it does not matter very much whether it is wanted for sheep, cattle, swine or horses, it is highly useful in any case. There are but few sections in all the northwest, says Prof. Shaw in Farm, Stock and Home, where it will not stand the rigors of the winter, and there is no kind of soil on which it will fail to make more or less growth, unless it is soil soaked with water in the winter, or unduly impregnated with alkali. And after the rye has served its purpose in providing pasture there are but few localities in which it cannot be followed by another crop the same season. When winter rye is sown for pasture, it should always be as early as September, and if it is to be pastured in the autumn, it should be sown as early as the 1st of August. But, it is evident in dry seasons it may not germinate thus early. The difficulty may be obviated sometimes by harrowing and rolling the land alternately after it has been plowed. Moisture will in this way be brought to the surface. And when the crop is pastured in the fall it should not be eaten too bare toward the approach of winter. When thus eaten, and a hard winter follows, the produce of the rye will be much less the following season. And when rye is sown so late that it enters the winter in a weak condition, the results the following spring will also be disappointing. The growth will be much more feeble than that of rye which has gone into the winter in a strong and vigorous condition. Because of this late sowing many who have sown rye have been led to under-value it as a pasture. It may be sown in with corn at the last cultivation, but the plan that would make it follow small grain is a grand one, for then the plowing of the land buries an army of weeds and thus greatly helps to clean the land.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Don't cultivate the corn too late. You will cut the roots.

We would advise feeding calves from tin or galvanized pails.

If the calf will not drink—and some will not—starve it to it.

Overripe grass is woody, not fit for animals. Cut when it blooms.

Cut the grass when the bloom is on and you will preserve the aroma.

When the rains cease be sure to cultivate and make the surface fine.

Don't put salt on hay. It has no preservative effect and makes the hay moist.

The preservation of a good aroma in hay makes it all the more palatable to the animal.

Clover hay is a hundred per cent. better than timothy for all purposes in feeding stock.

No need of buying hay caps from people who sell those things. Get cheap muslin and paint it.

A tread power, run by a big dog or calf, will do the churning on most farms, and save lots of labor.

It looks now as if wheat would be a good price for the next crop. Don't sell early if you can help it.

The only way to buy binder twine is to club together and demand a reduction in price. The sellers of binder twine are getting rich off the farmers.

LIVE IN THE COUNTRY.

On the Farm Is Where Freedom, Health and Perfect Happiness Await Your Coming.

The person who does not love life in the country has lost the best part of his nature by being cast out of the garden of Eden at an early period of his life, to be artificially reared on the sights, sounds and smells of the streets, alleys and sewers of some city. He knows nothing of real home life—cities have very little—as a rule, only number so and so, such a street; he has very little sense of home joys and affections; the pure air and water of the country; its holy quietudes; its gentle appeals to all the senses; its solitudes, where tumult and mob never intrude; its delightful woods, its sports and pleasures; its loves and friendships, undefiled by the dust and grime of the crowded tenements and thronged thoroughfares; its sacred privacies and seclusions; its leisure, its freedom and independence from the intrusions and demands of hurrying urban life and its sacred exemptions from the gross contacts and associations of the bustling and shouldering streets—all these, and more akin to them, make the rural existence a perpetual delight, undefiled by the conditions that attend the constant pressure of mixed and crowded population.

The farm is not a bonanza, but it feeds the world. To one accustomed, its labors are easy and healthy; its incidents interesting, its rests, changes and relaxations, with exchanges of visits, always full of recreation; its crops engage continual care and attention, with daily vicissitudes of weather that never destroy hope and even cheer with promise of fruition, and at last, with garnered crops, it affords you plenty, with a roaring fire under your own roof—happy in being monarch of all you survey, despite the struggles for bread in the cities and the never-ending exertions and woes inseparable from style and its silly rivalries.

Go back to the country, young man! Go home to the farm. Seize the plow and become an independent and happy man, though you may miss wealth, fashion and luxury.—Norfolk Pilot.

DRAINAGE MADE EASY.

An Accurate and Practical Level, Working on the Same Principle as a Plumb Line.

One of the greatest drawbacks to successful farming operations on thousands of farms is the absence of a thorough system of tile drainage, consequently the early preparation of ground, and the planting of crops, is not only greatly retarded, but the season for growth being also comparatively less, makes them more susceptible to early autumn frosts before maturity. Drain lowest depressions first, and continue the work as circumstances permit and never attempt to do a perfect job without the constant use of the level whenever any doubt exists as to the required grade of the ditch. The accompanying illustration shows a very simple, accurate and practical level, working on the principle of a plumb-line. It is 16¼ feet long, so that by raising either end one inch and marking the variation in the plumb one can easily tell when the grade is one inch to the rod. This level can be slid along in the bottom of the ditch, thus keeping a uniform grade of any desired fall.—American Agriculturist.

PLUMB LINE DRAINAGE LEVEL.

How to Slake Lime.

To slake lime properly three pints of water to one pound of lime are required. Lukewarm water is the best, which is not always to be had when slaking large quantities of lime. If slaked in a box or vat put the necessary quantity of water in first, then put in the required amount of lime. During the progress of slaking it is well to cover the box or vat and the same should be stirred occasionally for the purpose of placing the lime so that all will receive its share of water. Do not put the lime in the vessel first and put the water on by turning it from a hydrant or pouring it in with buckets. If you do the whitewash will be granular and lumpy.

To Prevent Smut in Wheat.

Smut in wheat may be prevented by putting a bag of wheat in a barrel of cool water and leave it until all the seeds are moist, usually two or three minutes. Drain off surplus cold water, then immerse for a minute or two in a second barrel containing warm water. The object of this is to warm the wheat so that it will not cool the water in a third barrel. When warm, plunge quickly in the third barrel and leave it 15 minutes. Keep the temperature (by steady thermometer test) between 130 and 134 degrees, preferably at 131. Remove wheat after 15 minutes and spread on floor, that has never had smutted wheat, to dry.—Prof. H. Garman, Ky. Exp. Sta.

Rape in the Cornfield.

Every cornfield should also have three pounds of rape seed sown at the last cultivation. By putting a boy on a steady horse he can sow the seed broadcast over the standing corn to be cultivated on. A little of the seed may lodge in the leaves, but enough will reach the ground to make a profitable crop. It will not make much show when corn is cut, but in a short time the ground will be covered, and as it grows rapidly after the fall rains it will pasture a large stock and be worth to the ground many times as much as the seed will cost.—J. S. Woodward, in Prairie Farmer.

OUR POSTAL SYSTEM.

It Is Now Being Established All Over Puerto Rico.

The Onerous Task Entrusted to Maj. James E. Stewart by the Post-Office Authorities at Washington.

[Special Washington Letter.]

A GREAT calamity it would be if the postal service should cease in the national capital, or if the people of any other large city should be deprived of the mail facilities to which they have been accustomed.

Suppose that 800,000 people in Illinois, Iowa or any other state should be unceremoniously deprived of their post offices, their railway postal trains, their letter carriers, their money order system, their star routes, their opportunity to buy and use postage stamps. Or, for example, suppose that the cities of Milwaukee, Springfield, Des Moines, Omaha or Kansas City, or any other cities of similar size, should be cut off from postal intercourse with the surrounding country alone, there would be so much trouble and discontent that the writer need not describe it.

Well, there is an American territory containing 800,000 American citizens where the sudden stoppage of postal facilities has been imminent. Only by foreseeing the likelihood, and taking steps to avert such a catastrophe, has the post office department been able to prevent the unfortunate condition. The island of Puerto Rico is an American territory, and the people there are American citizens; and yet they came near being deprived of a postal system.

Postmaster-General Charles Emory Smith has been forehanded enough to anticipate the requirements which will be made on the post office department by the acquisition of the island of Puerto Rico as a result of the war with Spain. That island has a right to expect and must receive mail service which will be in every sense equal to the service rendered by the post office department in any other portion of the United States.

Maj. James E. Stewart, of the Second Illinois infantry, has been detailed from military duty by the secretary of war upon the personal request of Postmaster-General Smith, and he has been appointed chairman of the Puerto Rican postal commission. Maj. Stewart has superintended the establishment of not less than 10,000 post offices. Postmaster-General Wanamaker appointed him chief post office inspector, but he declined the position because he preferred his work in the northwest. He is probably the best-equipped post office man in the country for the important duties assigned to him. Before leaving for Puerto Rico, Maj. Stewart said:

"This is the third time I have been summoned from my regiment to look after postal affairs. I have protested against leaving my boys on each occasion, but since the war is over, and I can render service in this line which will be valuable to the country, I am content. I went into the postal service in 1866, and have been in that service ever since. I was in the clerical force, in post offices, chief clerk of the railway mail service, established the railway mail service to and for the Pacific coast, was sent into the inspection department, and in 1877 was made chief inspector for the western division, a position which I have held continuously ever since, excepting a couple of years during the first Cleveland administration, when the post office department managed to get along without my services.

"Having been made chairman of this commission to Puerto Rico, I undertake the work with full appreciation of the responsibility, and I am looking forward with some degree of anxiety concerning the result. If the work proves to be satisfactory to the department, and every way successful, it will add to my reputation as a post office man. If I make any serious mistake, it will detract from my lifetime reputation in the departmental service. There will be no middle ground on which I can stand. Therefore, you may be assured that the work will be undertaken with due deliberation and none of it will be too hastily done. This postal commission must establish an entirely new postal system for the island of Puerto Rico, and make that system conform with the system already established throughout the United States as far as possible.

"The existing postal system in Puerto Rico will summarily cease on the date of the evacuation of the island by Spanish troops and civilian officials. When that occurs, a few weeks hence, the postal service of the United States must immediately begin. Therefore it will be the duty of the commission of which I am chairman to not only study the maps, but travel all over Puerto Rico. We must establish post offices for every town, establish railway mail service on their short line of railroad, establish star routes all over the island, and make the service economically equal to the public demands. Some of the star routes must carry mail seven days in each week, while others must carry mail fewer days of the week, according to the population. Probably some of the star routes will carry mail only once or twice a month.

"All of the post offices must be established there as first as fourth-class post offices are established in new communities in the United States, and must be subject to our laws and customs. Therefore, after approximating the facts in the different sections of the island, we will establish star routes, make contracts with men to carry the mails, and select postmasters who are intellectually and educationally competent, and establish fourth class post offices, leaving the salaries to adjust themselves.

"At the end of the last term of this calendar year, December 31, all of the postmasters in Puerto Rico will report the amount of their business to the third assistant postmaster general, and these reports, having been recorded, will be transferred to the office of the first assistant postmaster general. In the salary and allowance division of the first assistant postmaster general's office the financial reports of the postmasters of Puerto Rico, as well as the states and territories of the United States, will be carefully gone over, and the salaries of postmasters accordingly adjusted.

"For example, I assume that a majority of the fourth-class post offices established by our commission will remain fourth-class post offices. But when the accounts of the postmasters at such towns as Ponce and San Juan are considered by the salary and allowance division those offices will be made third class or second class with large salaries, and then they will be what we call presidential post offices. As soon as the adjustment of the finances shows that the salaries of the postmasters of the larger offices should be more than $1,000 per annum, the offices will become presidential in class, and new postmasters will be appointed by the president, with the advice and consent of the senate. I suppose that when these accounts are all adjusted, next January, it will be incumbent upon the president to appoint at least five or six presidential postmasters for Puerto Rico. As the population increases and the island becomes Americanized the postal business will expand just as I have seen it grow with the growth of the country between the great lakes and the Pacific coast."

After receiving this interesting information concerning Puerto Rico, the writer called upon First Assistant Postmaster-General Heath, and inquired concerning the proposed postal service in Cuba, Hawaii and the Philippines. Gen. Heath said: "You must remember that Puerto Rico alone is our territory; and that Cuba and the Philippines do not belong to us as a result of the war. In Hawaii, where everything is already American in spirit, we will permit the postal service to remain just as it is. When annexation is complete we will probably give American commissions to those postal agents who are now on duty there by appointment of the Hawaiian republic. That will be the natural and proper thing to do, at least at the beginning of our assumption of authority.

"As to Cuba, you must remember that we have not acquired that island; but have only assumed the responsibility of giving to the Cubans a stable government. We cannot assume sovereignty there at once, and hence we cannot establish a postal system. As to the Philippines, we cannot tell how much or how little of that archipelago we shall take until the peace commission shall have concluded its deliberations, and until the Spanish cortes and the American senate have ratified their work. Therefore we cannot establish a postal system for the Philippines, nor make any aggressive effort in that direction.

"The peace protocol provides that we shall possess Manila and Manila bay; and we have established a postal station there, and are selling United States postage stamps, and sending out letters with those stamps. But beyond that the post office department cannot go for the present. The only work which we have authority to do is to establish a postal service for Puerto Rico, which belongs to us by right of conquest, and that work we have undertaken. The commission of which Maj. Stewart is chairman is composed of experienced men, and, under Maj. Stewart's direction, that commission will undoubtedly perform its work not only to the satisfaction of this department, but to the complete satisfaction of the people of that new territorial portion of our common country." SMITH D. FRY.

The Platform Indorses the Governor's Reform Ideas, and Applauds Secretary Alger's Conduct of the Late War with Spain — Firm for Gold Standard.

Detroit, Sept. 22.—Gov. Pingree was unanimously renominated by acclamation Wednesday afternoon by the republican state convention. The rest of the ticket is as follows: Lieutenant governor, O. W. Robinson, of Houghton; secretary of state, J. S. Stearns, of Ludington; auditor-general, Roscoe D. Dix, of Berrien Springs; attorney-general, Horace M. Oren, of Sault Ste. Marie; treasurer, George Steel, of St. Johns; commissioner of land office, William A. French, of Presque Isle; superintendent of public instruction, Jason E. Hammond, of Hillsdale; regents of state university, Eli R. Sutton, of Detroit, and J. Byron Judkins, of Grand Rapids; members of state board of education, Prof. E. F. Johnson, of Ann Arbor, and F. A. Platt, of Flint. The convention unanimously elected Gen. Arthur F. Marsh, of Allegan (a Pingree candidate), for chairman of the state central committee. The convention completed its work at midnight.

Dexter M. Ferry, of Detroit, chairman of the state central committee, called the convention to order. Grant Fellows, of Hudson, president of the State League of Republican Clubs, was called to preside as temporary chairman. E. O. Grosvenor, state dairy and food commissioner, a Pingree appointee, was made permanent chairman. When the resolutions were reported to the convention they were unanimously adopted without debate.

The Platform.

On the war issue the resolutions say:

"We indorse the present national administration, and express confidence in the honesty, integrity and patriotism of President McKinley. During the trying times that culminated in a war with Spain he displayed rare ability and discretion, until the final cessation of hostilities, which we hope will speedily result in permanent peace.

"We indorse our honored secretary of war, and commend his conscientious, patriotic and unselfish devotion to the honor of the nation and the welfare of the army. We denounce the unjust attacks made on him, and offer him our undivided support and confidence.

For the Gold Standard.

"We reaffirm the principles of the St. Louis platform, and pledge them our support as a sure guarantee of national prosperity and honor. We stand upon the existing gold standard, and condemn the proposition to admit silver to free and unlimited coinage at the ratio of sixteen to one by this country alone."

The platform congratulates the country upon returning prosperity under republican rule and the operations of the Dingley law; offers honor and devotion to the volunteers from Michigan in the war; congratulates the nation upon its land and sea victories and leaves the future destiny of the peoples over whom the nation has gained control through the war confidently in the hands of the properly delegated authority. The administration of Gov. Pingree is commended, especially his care and energy in equipping and caring for the interests of the troops and their families. A state immigration bureau is urged to be established for the purpose of promoting development of unoccupied lands.

State Taxation.

The paragraph concerning state taxation is as follows:

"We commend the present state administration for its earnest efforts in favor of the equal and just taxation of the property of railroad, telegraph, telephone and express companies. We favor the immediate repeal of the tax upon the gross earnings of railroad, telegraph, telephone and express companies' property. This value to be determined by a state board. The taxes collected therefrom shall be paid into the primary school fund. We indorse the principles of the Atkinson bill, and pledge the support of the republican party thereto.

"We favor also the readjustment of the assessment laws of this state, so that all taxable property shall be placed upon the assessment rolls at a just value, and be taxed equally with all other taxable property in the state."

All Previous Records Broken.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 28. — The freight traffic passing through the Sault Ste. Marie canal this season breaks all previous records. The greatest previous traffic was in 1897, when 1,628,699 tons passed westward and 9,176,305 tons passed eastward, making a total of 10,805,004 tons. The official reports for this year show that 2,823,396 tons passed westward and 9,790,243 tons eastward, a total of 12,613,639.

Sawmill Destroyed.

Cheboygan, Sept. 27. — Thompson Smith's Sons' sawmill, the largest in northern Michigan, was burned Monday. The plant was valued at $150,000 and was insured for $50,000 in different companies. The mail was located at Duncan City, a suburb of Cheboygan.

Wheat Fields Damaged.

Sturgis, Sept. 25.—A heavy rainstorm or cloudburst visited this vicinity Saturday and did great damage to wheat fields. Thousands of acres were ruined. Fortunately it is early and many farmers will replant. The damage extends into Indiana.

Post Office Robbers Caught.

Blissfield, Mich., Sept. 28.—The sheriff of Lenawee county surrounded in a woods the three burglars who robbed the Blissfield post office Saturday night and shot Samuel Rothfuss. They were taken after considerable shooting.

Fifty New Students.

Holland, Sept. 24. — Hope college opened with 50 new students. Nearly all of last year's students also returned and the college is prosperous.

Grand Rapids, Feb. 8.—The past commanders of the Michigan Grand Army held a reunion here Monday with a banquet at night; 15 attended.

IMPROVING PASTURES.

A Few Days' Labor Every Season Will Surprise the Owner in Its Beneficent Results.

If there is any one part of the farm that is neglected in the summer time when the rush of harvesting takes up most of the time and attention of all, it is the pasture fields, says a writer in Indiana Farmer. While there may be some little excuse for this on large grain farms, it can hardly be overlooked on a dairy farm, where grass and green pasture are the chief dependencies for success. The improvement of pasture fields is a crying need on many old places. As a rule the roughest and most sterile fields are given over to pastures, and it is not giving a cow a fair show to make her pick up a living on land that would not produce anything else. This is often the case, however, and then we blame the cow for not giving more milk. Half the fault against our dairy cows can be traced to improper feeding. Because a cow has a large field or meadow to graze in it does not follow that she ought to give a large flow of milk. A much smaller piece of land would produce much better results if the pasture was rich and well cared for. It is all right to give the cows for pasture the roughest and rockiest part of the farm, for naturally one does not select that portion for plowing under crops. But it is the part of wisdom to bestow a little care upon such fields to improve them each year. A few days' labor devoted to the pasture fields every season will surprise the owner in the results five years later. First there are rocks and stones that can gradually carried off the field and up. Clearing the pasture field his leisurely way will yield its reward some day when it is found desirable to cultivate the meadows or hillside for orchard or field crops. Along with this work should go that of clearing the land of wild berry bushes, brush, roots and weeds. The roots once taken up will kill the bushes and trees for good, and so with the weeds. See that they are rooted up, and not simply cut off. Noxious weeds prevent grass plants from growing, and generally they harbor parasites and rusts of grain which may spread to the cultivated fields any day, and do a great amount of damage. This work of clearing the pastures of foreign growths is very important at this season of the year when weeds are about ready to produce their seeds. One plant destroyed root and branch now may prevent the growth of 50 next summer. So it is wise to begin at once, for every year that the work is postponed the pasture field degenerates so much more. While engaged in this work of destruction it might be well to reconstruct, too. Plant a few shade trees in the most convenient place of the field, and if necessary for their protection fence them in until they attain a good growth. Years later they will be appreciated by both man and beast. When the weeds are pretty well rotted out, it will pay to sow the field in the fall with grass seed, spreading it thinly around to reenforce the old grass.

CORN-HUSKING HORSE.

It Will Help Many a Lame Back If You Conclude to Build One Right Now.

The horse is made of light material. The cut explains itself. The rung B should be 1¼-inch stuff, put in with shoulders cut down to one inch where it goes through the legs. The rung is put down so the ears of corn will not catch when pulled forward. Cornhusking makes lame backs and sore hands. The horse will help the back and the following recipe will help the hands: Take white wax, one-quarter ounce, spermaceti, one-quarter ounce; almond oil, one ounce; glycerine, two ounces. Mix, melt the wax and stir in the oils until they are perfectly mixed and still continue to stir until cool. Apply to the hands two or three times a day. Wash the hands in warm water and apply the salve while the hands are still quite damp, and rub them until dry. It will keep them from getting sore. The prescription only costs 20 cents for ingredients.—Ohio Farmer.

World's Deficit in Grain.

A world's deficit in grain for the coming year is the forecast of the Hungarian minister of agriculture. He estimates that importing countries will need 115,000,000 to 124,000,000 metric centners, or, roughly speaking, 450,000,000 to 500,000,000 bushels more than their own output, and that exporting countries will be able to send 101,000,000 to 109,000,000 metric centners, an apparent deficit of 14,000,000 to 15,000,000, or say 60,000,000 bushels. This report, emanating each year at this time from what is known as the Vienna grain congress, is made up from a comparison of official and trade estimates of the world's production and requirements. The figures put forth are by no means final, nor of any great value, although interesting, as they seem to reflect general conditions.

Use the best combs for brood nest and the oldest and roughest on the outside for storage.

A weak colony will never build nice comb honey no matter how liberal the honey flow.

Lenawee Pomona Grange.

The next meeting of Lenawee Pomona Grange will be held with Macon Grange, three miles north of Ridgeway, on Thursday, Oct. 6, commencing at 10 a. m. A good program will be given by County Grange, a part of which will consist of an account of her voyage to England by Miss Julia A. Reed, of Onsted. Fifth degree will be conferred at this meeting. Patrons going by railway will be met at Britton and Ridgeway. All members of the order are urged to attend. F. R. PETERS, Master.

The War is Over

And now our thoughts are all of peace and home. There are, too often, people to be found who have no home, and it is to them these few words are addressed. If you really want a home you can easily get one, but you should act at once before the relapse from the war puts prices on the advance. In Marinette County, Wisconsin, the very finest farming land is to be had now at a most modest figure. Excellent home markets are at hand to take whatever the farmer raises, and good prices are given. These lands are on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, and full information concerning them will cheerfully be furnished by C. E. Rollins, Immigration Agent, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago.

THE BRAVE AT HOME.

We do not send them all away—
Our bravest and our best—
When the battle-cry is sounding
And the eagle leaves its nest;
There are brave battalions marching,
And the heroes face the roar
Of the guns that belch their lightning
In the thunderstorm of war.

But the brave hearts, true hearts,
The hearts that wait at home
For the news that tells of battle
On the field or on the foam,
Are the hearts that beat with courage
And the hearts whose hoping thrives.
Oh, the little lips of loving,
And the sweethearts and the wives!

When they march away to glory,
When the flags above them wave,
When the nation sends its greeting
To the valiant and the brave,
There are tender heroes waiting,
There are brave ones left behind,
As the bugle's note of sorrow
Wafts its music on the wind.

The brave hearts, true hearts,
With nothing left to do
But watch and wait and wonder
Till the storm and strife are through;
But their courage cheers the nation,
And it crowns the tender lives
Of the little lips of loving
And the sweethearts and the wives!

'Tis a woman's way to struggle
In the silence of her grief;
'Tis the child-heart's tender habit—
In her dreamland make-belief—
To behold the days with courage
And to live throughout the night
With a tender word of hoping
For the breaking of the light.

The brave hearts, true hearts,
The soldier leaves to weep,
As he takes the weary journey
Down the valley o'er the deep,
Are the hearts at home so gentle
Bound in sorrow's unseen gyves—
The little lips of loving,
And the sweethearts and the wives!

Ah, the little lips of loving,
The little lips that be
So ripe with red-rose laughter
And so innocent with glee!
Ah, the hearts of sweethearts, hoping
Till the dawn shall bring the light,
The wives that wait the echoes
From the fields where heroes fight!

The brave hearts, true hearts,
They are not all away—
And to watch afar the fray;
And the heroes left behind,
Noble hearts and noble lives—
The little lips of loving,
And the sweethearts and the wives!

ROUND ABOUT US.

Clippings and Condensations From our County Contemporaries.

Peter Fisher, of Blissfield, raised a mammoth pumpkin this season. The monstrosity weighed 118 pounds.

There are snakes in Manchester. Last Thursday two Manchester ladies killed a blue racer five feet long and about as large around as a bicycle tire.

Wednesday, the large out buildings of Charles Conrad, south of Morenci, were burned to the ground, including hay and wheat, farm implements, etc. Cause, spontaneous combustion.

The oil house of the Standard Oil Co., burned in the Lake Shore depot yards in Hudson Tuesday evening. The railroad stock yards were destroyed and one of the firemen was badly burned by an explosion of oil.

A disastrous cyclone struck Lima, O., Saturday afternoon. Many buildings were blown down or unroofed, many persons were more or less injured, a large number of derricks in the oil fields were wrecked and great general damage done.

Nature is producing double crops again this season. Apple blossoms and infant apples were discovered on a tree in the rear of the Palmer House, and Johnny Whaley is getting a second crop of red raspberries. Other reports also have been made.—Milan Leader.

Geo. McNair was seriously injured in a peculiar manner Thursday. He was assisting City Surveyor Blair in laying out a sewer district, and carried a number of wire stake pins in his pocket. He fell into a ditch and one of the pins was driven into his left lung. Dr. Morden attended him.—Adrian Daily Times.

A man stupefied with liquor fell over into the yard of a residence near the fair grounds last evening, and was laying in for a good snooze when the rain came up. Meanwhile the police had been telephoned for, but by the time they arrived on the scene, the rain had sobered the man up enough so that he was gone.—Adrian Daily Times.

A lively scene was created in front of Walby & Clay's bank yesterday afternoon, when one woman attacked another for taking in the fair with her husband. The angry wife directed her energies to scratching the face of the other woman, and succeeded in doing so. It is understood the beligerents are residents of Fairfield township.—Adrian Daily Times.

The Ann Arbor Argus says: James Haggerty, of Ypsilanti, is 71 years old and never had his name in print in his life until Tuesday when the Times broke his record for him. Now there will be lots of other papers, who will keep on breaking that record and James can never make such a boast as that again. There aren't many Tecumseh men who can boast of the same.

A woman about 50 years old, giving her name as Mrs. Mary E Smith, and claiming to come from Adrian, left a four or five days' old baby girl at the Benton hotel in Benton Harbor Tuesday night. She had tried to place the infant in the children's home at St. Joseph, but the superintendent would not take the child. Mrs. Smith, who has disappeared, said the baby belonged to a young couple.—Adrian Daily Times.

Miss Mabel Barnsdale, a Clinton school teacher, attended the fair one day last week with a party of friends. They were driving home about 12 o'clock at night, when, near the Quaker church, the horses, unable to keep the road because of the darkness, ran up an embankment and overturned the carriage. Miss Barnsdale's left arm was broken between the elbow and the wrist. She was taken to the Birdsall home and was attended there by Dr. Stephenson.—Adrian Daily Times.

What may prove to be a murder occurred at Blissfield early Sunday morning. The particulars of the affair are contained in the following dispatch to the Detroit Journal:

Blissfield, Sept. 25.—About 1:30 o'clock this morning Samuel Rothfuss, clerk in the Blissfield State bank, was shot down in front of the postoffice by one of a gang engaged in an attempt to crack the postoffice safe, and tonight his condition is critical. Rothfuss is 18 years old. He lives on the west side of the river, opposite the business center of the town. He had been paying a visit to his girl in the east side, and was returning home. His story, gleaned in brief utterances, for he is suffering greatly, is that he had arrived in front of the postoffice when a man stepped out of the doorway and commanded him to hold up his hands.

"I had my hands in my pockets and a revolver ready," says Rothfuss. "I was not looking for trouble, but was on my guard just the same." His response to the hold-up mandate, he says, was to shoot. Five shots were fired. Rothfuss fired two and the bullets can be seen in the wooden siding of the postoffice over the spot where the robber's head must have been. One of the robber's bullets found its way into Rothfuss' abdomen, where it yet remains. Rothfuss turned and staggered up the street to a door leading to a flight of stairs. He awoke Ezra Keeler, who helped him upstairs and ran for a doctor.

About the time the sheriff arrived Farmer Gus Barnholtz, from west of town, came in with the report that his team and surrey had been stolen. The sheriff and three deputies took up the trail at that point, and at 11:30 located the rig, turned loose in a door yard at Federman Crossing, a junction point of the T., A. A. and L. S. & M. S. railroads. He went back to Adrian and took the train for Toledo to continue the hunt there.

Wednesday Sheriff Ferguson surrounded three of the burglars in a woods near Dundee. They were taken after much shooting.

THE CHURCHES.

At the Presbyterian church next Sunday, the Rev. George W. Healy will preach both morning and evening. Mr. Healy was a seminary class mate of the pastor.

On account of the absence of the rector, there will be no services at St. Peter's church on Sunday next. The usual session of the Sunday school will be held at 11:30 o'clock. Mr. Burleson expects to bring his mother and sister with him on his return.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Council Chamber, Village of Tecumseh.

Regular meeting held Sept. 19, 1898.

Present, Trustees Elliott, H. Heesen, J. Heesen, Ames, Eldridge. Absent, President Kyle, Trustee Hayden, Clerk Bowen.

REPORT OF OFFICERS.

Street Commissioners report for August presented showing fire team labor 25½ days; hand labor 24½ days $30.63; poll tax worked 4, $4.00; gravel sold, $1.10. Also labor done from Aug. 15 to Sept. 19. Fire team 29 days; A. Titus 29 days, $36.26; Walter Fink poll tax worked $1. Report accepted, ordered placed on file and orders drawn on the treasurer for the amounts due.

Sexton's report presented for August showing 5 adult and 1 infant interment. Also one lot sold for $45 with treasurer's receipt for same. Report accepted and filed.

NEW BUSINESS.

A petition in regard to certain nuisance was presented, action deferred. A request from Moreland Bros. and Crane to erect oil tanks on the Lovett property inside the corporation met with decided opposition and was not urged.

The following bills were presented and referred to the finance committee. Temple, McClure & Co., lumber, $82.72; W. C. Jordan, painting, $2.00; the Friends' church, cement walk, $12.14; M. L. Gillen, marshal, $25.00.

Committee approved the above bills and on resolution Clerk was instructed to draw his order on the treasurer for same.

The treasurer asked that the time for collecting the corporation tax be extended to October 15, 1898. On motion the extension was granted.

Council then adjourned.

Chas. Eldridge, clerk pro tem.

TO AID THE SOLDIERS.

North-Western Road Issues a Humane Order as to Them—Volunteers on Trains Must be Treated With All Consideration.

A humane order has just been issued by the Chicago & North-Western R'y. Impressed with the pitiable condition of a majority of the returning soldiers, General Manager Whitman of this road has determined that none of the boys in blue who may come into contact with his company shall suffer for lack of attention. The North-Western system covers five or six states which furnished a large proportion of the volunteers, and in order that the boys may be treated kindly on their way home, whether discharged or on furlough, Mr. Whitman has issued special instructions to every agent and conductor on the entire system to give special care and attention to returning soldiers enroute from camps to their homes while upon the trains or at stations of the North-Western. The employes are instructed to be diligent to ascertain if any of the soldiers are in need of food, and more particularly if they are sick and require medical attention, and if any such are found he is to be attended to at the expense of the company, if necessary. It will not be necessary for the soldier to be in uniform to get the advantage of the road's hospitality, for if he can show the proper papers of discharge or furlough, he will receive the same consideration.

"We cannot do enough for the returning soldiers," said Gen. Supt. Sanborn, in speaking of the order. "The boys went down there and faced death in a hundred different ways, and those who escaped are returning home debilitated and worn out. They did this for what? Not for money; it is not in any sane man to resign himself to death for a money consideration. They did it for the love of country."

Other roads probably may follow the North-Western's humane move.—The Chicago Chronicle.

Riches have wings, but it is a sad fact that they rarely fly our way.

CONTINUANCE AND RENEWAL OF LIMITED PARTNERSHIP.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, John L. Anderson, Fred Rosacrans and Webster Anderson, all of whom reside in Tecumseh, Lenawee county, Michigan, and who comprise all the partners of the limited partnership of Anderson & Rosacrans, doing a general dry goods business at Tecumseh, aforesaid do hereby continue and renew the term of said limited partnership, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 78 of Howell's Statutes of Michigan, from the 28th day of September, A. D. 1898, to the 1st day of February, A. D. 1900, for the purpose of doing the same business, and in the same name and upon the same terms and conditions as said original limited partnership of Anderson & Rosacrans, said John L. Anderson and Fred Rosacrans being general partners and said Webster Anderson a special partner, and said Webster Anderson as such special partner having contributed the sum of three thousand dollars ($3000) in cash to the capital stock of said partnership.

ENTIRE CITY UNDER WATER

Stores and Warehouses in Brunswick, Ga., Inundated by a Great Tidal Wave.

EFFECT OF THE STORM IN THE VICINITY

More Than Thirty Persons Are Known to Have Perished, and the List May Reach One Hundred — The Financial Loss Is Placed at $1,000,000 or More.

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 4.—A Brunswick (Ga.) special to the Morning News says that during the tropical hurricane of Sunday a tidal wave was driven in from the sea and inundated for an average depth of five feet practically every business house and warehouse in the city.

Loss of Life Heavy.

Macon, Ga., Oct. 5.—Reports from all around Brunswick are that from 30 to 100 lives were lost by Sunday's storm, which devastated parts of the Georgia and Florida coast. At least $1,000,000 in financial loss was entailed The national quarantine station is gone, and all the inmates are thought to be lost. Reports from all the rice plantations for 30 miles around state they are ruined and the lives of many workers lost. The water rose 13 feet above high water mark, and the wind blew such a terrific gale that no one could seek shelter in the trees. Thousands of dead cattle are floating down stream and lying piled up in the marsh. Such a disaster has not visited the south Atlantic coast since the sea island troubles, and it is feared now that when all reports are in the number of dead will be enormously increased.

Campbell Island Swept Away.

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 5.—Complete details from Brunswick and surrounding country are impossible because of the prostration of the telegraph and telephone systems. Campbell island, 12 miles from Darien, on the Althamra river, is said to be completely swept away, and only three persons succeeded in getting off the island. There is no definite information as to the population of the island, and estimates of the number supposed to have perished there range from 20 to 50. The population was made up wholly of colored truck growers.

At Fernandina, Fla.

Fernandina, Fla., Oct. 4.—The most severe hurricane that Fernandina has ever experienced has caused loss estimated at $500,000. Three deaths are reported, a father and two children. The tide rose so high that it extended for four blocks up into the city and homes and buildings of all descriptions were flooded. Women and children were taken out of the houses on the river front in boats. Four large churches in the city were wrecked, to say nothing of the halls and residences which were blown away. The streets for four blocks up into the city are blocked with wreckage.

George Declines.

New York, Oct. 4.—Henry George has declined the nomination for governor on the ticket placed in the field by the Chicago platform democrats and the committee having authority to fill the vacancies nominated Henry M. McDonald, of the county of New York, for the place. Mr. George in his letter says that by pursuing uninterruptedly the duty of writing his father's biography he can do more for the principles of freedom than by engaging actively in politics.

Increase in the Public Debt.

Washington, Oct 3.—The monthly statement of the public debt shows that at the close of business September 30, 1898, the debt, less cash in the treasury, amounted to $1,067,479,205; an increase for the month of $54,608,488. The increase in the cash during September was $13,070,418. The total increase of the debt on account of the war loan, independent of cash, is $142,720,820, of which about $68,000,000 was added during September.

Terrific Floods in Japan.

San Francisco, Oct. 1.—The steamer Gaelic brings news of a terrific storm which swept over Japan on September 6. The wind did great damage to shipping. Rivers soon became torrents, flooding many sections. A summary of the loss of life and property follows: Deaths, 250; houses swept away, 164; houses overthrown, 1,195; partially wrecked, 11,460; houses inundated, 15,597; river banks broken, 78.

Deed of a Dissipated Husband.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 3.—A special to the Bee from Essex, Ia., says: Walter J. Yates on Sunday shot and dangerously wounded his wife and her friend, Mrs. E. J. Brown, and then shot himself through the head. Domestic infelicity, caused by Yates' dissipation, brought about the tragedy.

SWEPT BY FOREST FIRES

Damage Done in Northern Wisconsin Is Widespread and Cannot Be Estimated.

DESOLATION IS VISIBLE EVERYWHERE.

Hundreds of Families Are Homeless and Destitute—Over 100 Persons Missing and Many Dead Bodies Found—Gov. Scofield Issues an Appeal to the People for Aid.

Turtle Lake, Wis., Oct. 3.—The damage done by the forest fires of the last few days cannot be estimated or overestimated. Hundreds of families are homeless, many are almost naked, and in a few days all will want for food, as the small supplies in the towns are not sufficient. The people are in no condition to pay for what there is. The devastation wrought by the fire is so great that it cannot be comprehended by anyone not on the ground.

A correspondent drove for 30 miles through the burned district Saturday, and everywhere along the roads were the homeless fire sufferers, some sitting beside the few household articles which they had saved, many nursing burns and nearly all suffering from sore eyes from fighting the flames. Many of them are totally blind. The ruins of the forest show how fierce the fire must have been. Great numbers of cattle and horses perished.

Chippewa Falls District.

Eau Claire, Wis., Oct. 3.—It is reported that the timber near Graves wood is on fire. At Livermore dwellings, barns, granaries and crops have been burned. At Chippewa Falls it is reported that all the camp outfits on Cedar lake have been destroyed, and it is feared that several lives have been lost. Men and horses of August Mason's outfit only escaped by plunging into the lake and staying there for hours, almost suffocated by the smoke. At Stout's camp 500 oxen perished. Hundreds of people are homeless. The loss of farm property in Clark, Barron and Chippewa counties is estimated at $300,000. The latest reports say that all hopes of checking the flames have been abandoned. Nothing but rain will save the remaining property.

Charred Bodies Found.

Cumberland, Wis., Oct. 3.—From reports received here, nine people have perished.

A dispatch from Rice Lake says that many unidentified bodies have been found charred in the woods, and that so far as heard from there are over 100 persons missing. Advices from Rice Lake state that the fires in the neighborhood are worse than ever, and that the loss of life will be much greater than it was supposed it would be.

The property loss in this county will aggregate $400,000 besides the farm buildings and crops. A large amount of stock has been burned and much hardwood timber has been destroyed.

Gov. Scofield's Appeal.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 3.—In response to calls for assistance from the forest fire sufferers of the northern part of the state, Gov. Scofield has issued the following public call for their relief:

"To the People of Wisconsin: Forest fires have again devastated a portion of our state and rendered homeless several hundred people, and a request has come for assistance. These people require clothing, food and shelter, and they will have other needs than these which it will be necessary to meet in order to enable them to undertake again their own support. The people of Wisconsin have always given a ready response to calls of this kind for help, and I feel confident that this demand upon them will be generously met.

"Col. William J. Boyle, Milwaukee, will receive contributions of provisions, clothing and money for the fire sufferers, and is hereby appointed to take charge of the contributions and attend to their distribution. The people in any part of the state who desire to help the fire sufferers can communicate by telegraph or mail with Col. Boyle at Milwaukee."

Send Supplies to Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Oct. 3.—Col. William J. Boyle, who has been appointed by Gov. Scofield to receive contributions and take charge of the relief work among the families who have lost everything by the forest fires in northern Wisconsin, has completed his plans for the work. Quarters will be opened in this city to-day, where supplies of clothing, food, furniture and money will be received. The first shipment of supplies will go north over the Chicago & Northwestern road at six o'clock to-night, and other shipments as fast as carload lots can be made up. Col. Boyle says that supplies from all over the state should be sent to Milwaukee to be distributed systematically from here.

Big Bank Fails.

New York, Oct. 5.—With $2,000,000 due to small tradesmen depositors, the Tradesmen's national bank closed its doors yesterday. The vice president said the bank would pay depositors 100 cents on the dollar.

Big Fire in Colorado.

Colorado Springs, Col., Oct. 3.—Eight blocks of the best portion of this city were destroyed by fire, including the famous Antlers hotel. The loss is $1,500,000.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 3.—Despondent over the death of her father, Bertha Bellstein killed her mother in this city and then took her own life.

CAN FIX ITS OWN PRICES.

State Supreme Court Holds That Michigan Central Road Is Entitled to That Privilege.

TWO-CENT FARE DECISION IS REVERSED

Serious Blow at Recent Effort of Gov. Pingree to Secure a Low Mileage Rate—Road Has a Vested Right Under Special Charter Which Can't Be Taken Away.

Lansing, Oct. 4.—Gov. Pingree has failed in his efforts to compel the Michigan Central railroad to sell family mileage books at the rate of two cents per mile. A decision framed by the state supreme court late Monday afternoon decides that the Michigan Central's special charter unquestionably confers the right upon the company to fix its own rate of tolls, and that this is a vested right which cannot be withdrawn by the state without adequate compensation therefor. The court also decides that a law passed by the legislature of 1891 regulating the cost of mileage books to two cents per mile has no application to the Michigan Central, and that the only way to effect the change desired by the governor is to have the legislature amend the charter of the company, which means that the state must compensate the company for any damage involved.

The suit was begun by Gov. Pingree on the refusal of a Michigan Central ticket agent at Detroit to sell him a family mileage book in compliance with a law passed by the late legislature. The governor tendered his money in the presence of witnesses, and the agent stated that he had no such tickets. Thereupon the governor brought suit to compel the company to sell him a thousand-mile ticket of the character mentioned for $20. The mandamus suit was tried in Wayne county circuit court before Judge Donovan. The lower court held that the law in question applied to all railroads in the state, and that reasonable justice and public policy demanded that the state control the charges of the railroads, lest in time the railroads should control the state and the people in that particular. This holding is reversed by the supreme court, which decides that a mandamus cannot be issued.

Detroit, Oct. 4.—Gov. Pingree apparently was not surprised at the supreme court's decision in his mileage ticket case. He declared that the Michigan Central was being favored; since the legislature was restrained from regulating its rates along with those of other roads. He said he could not tell yet what effect this decision would have on other pending railroad litigation.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 5.—Gov. Pingree announced, after a consultation with Attorney-General Maynard and others, that he would try to take his Michigan Central mileage case to the United States supreme court. It is stated that while the governor cannot himself appeal a case of this nature to the United States supreme court, that since the court has jurisdiction over cases involving one state and citizens of another he can get the matter into the supreme court by having a citizen of some other state take it up.

THEY MAY COMBINE.

The Organization of a Trust Embracing Big Refrigerator Concerns Now Under Way.

Detroit, Oct. 2.—A special to the Tribune from Grand Rapids, says: The organization of the refrigerator manufacturing trust is said to be under way. It is to have $6,000,000 capital and to include all the big concerns in the country. There are 32 factories in different parts of the United States, each with more or less valuable patents, and the plan is said to be to buy these concerns outright and bunch the management. A meeting was recently held in this city of manufacturers in the central and western states to discuss the project, and it is understood they were agreeable, and that it will materialize about November 15. Local refrigerator-making interests refuse to discuss the matter.

Fate of an Aged Lady.

Birmingham, Oct. 1. — Miss Abbie Lewis, a Farmington spinster, aged 80, met a terrible death on the farm of O. B. Coleman, four miles northeast of Farmington. She was strong physically, but weak-minded. She desired to pick some peaches and took a basket for that purpose. She was missed for some time and search revealed her mutilated body in a pasture lot. She was butted to death by two vicious rams. Both legs and one arm were broken.

Mission Board Meets.

Grand Rapids, Oct. 5. — The eighty-ninth annual meeting of the American board of foreign missions was opened in the Park Congregational church here Tuesday afternoon, with a large attendance from all sections of the United States and several delegates from missionary fields in Asia and Africa, Spain and Australia. Gen. R. M. Cutcheon, an ex-congressman, gave the delegates a hearty welcome, to which President Lampson responded.

HAS GREATLY IMPROVED.

Industrial Condition in This State Is Reported to Be Highly Satisfactory.

Detroit, Oct. 1.—Labor Commissioner Cox, in a report based on trustworthy advices, declares that industrial conditions in Michigan are vastly improved. More men are employed and wages have been increased. In a number of communities a shortage of hands is reported.

A canvass of the 82 counties reveals the fact that thousands of farm mortgages have been canceled. However, mortgages upon town and city property have increased, indicating that merchants and manufacturers are ready to increase their risks to extend business or make new ventures.

State factory inspectors report a large increase in the amounts invested in manufacturing businesses. There has also been an improvement in all lines of transportation, but a reduction in the forces of express and railroad companies. Express companies have consolidated and the railroad companies have added improved labor-saving devices to their systems. New discoveries in copper and iron in the upper peninsula have resulted in a scarcity of labor there.

THE BLAIR STATUE.

Programme for the Unveiling Exercises, to Occur in Lansing October 12.

Lansing, Sept. 30. — The plans for the unveiling of the Austin Blair statue October 12 have been completed. The programme, subject to change, is as follows: Music; prayer by ex-President L. R. Fiske, of Albion college; music; address, Hon John Patton; presentation of the statue by Gen. Russell A. Alger, president of the monumental commission; acceptance of the statue by Gov. Pingree; unveiling by George Frederick Blair, grandson of the war governor; benediction, Rev. Clarence F. Swift, Plymouth Congregational church, of Lansing. Gen. Israel C. Smith, of Grand Rapids, will be the chief marshal, and it is expected that there will be a large attendance of military organizations and civic marching bodies. Gen. Shafter has again notified the committee that he will be present.

A CRUEL HUSBAND.

Clarence Benjamin Shoots His Wife Dead and Wounds Himself at Lapeer.

Lapeer, Oct. 2.—Clarence Benjamin, 25 years of age, is in jail here, charged with murdering his wife. For three months they had not lived together. Saturday afternoon Benjamin met his wife and her younger sister, who were driving to their parents' home. Benjamin jumped from his wagon, seized his wife's horses' bridle, drew a revolver and fired three shots at his wife, whom her sister was vainly trying to protect. Two of the shots took effect, one penetrating Mrs. Benjamin's breast, killing her almost instantly. Benjamin then walked across a field to his parents' home, threw himself on a bed and fired a shot at himself, which inflicted only a flesh wound. He was taken to jail.

AN INSANE MOTHER.

Mrs. Williams, of Morrice, Poisons Her Children and Then Cuts Her Throat.

Morrice, Oct. 2.—Mrs. S. L. Williams Tuesday afternoon poisoned two of her children and cut her own throat. A neighbor found the woman's two-year-old boy on the floor, crying, and her six-months-old baby dying. Mrs Williams declared she had given them both poison and that the children would soon be in Heaven. The neighbor went for help. When she returned Mrs. Williams was in the cellar and had cut her own throat. The jugular vein was not severed and her life may be saved. The baby died; the older child's condition is precarious. The woman has lately been carried away by religious enthusiasm.

Second Crop of Berries.

Niles, Oct. 5. — The unusual warm weather and abundant rains lately have started a second growth of almost everything in the berry line in southwestern Michigan. In some localities families are indulging in fresh strawberries and raspberries. Late potatoes are as green as in early June, and many orchards are white with blossoms. Wheat has already a growth as large as it usually is at the commencement of winter.

Insane Through Hypnotism.

Houghton, Oct. 2.—John Kuranen, of this city, nine years old, was put into a hypnotic trance by a companion. It did not hurt him the first few times, but Friday he went into the hypnotic state and has not come out. The doctors say that he is hopelessly insane.

Drowned in a Cistern.

Bay City, Sept. 30.—Cora Sheline, three-year-old daughter of David M. Sheline, was drowned in the cistern of his new home, into which he was just moving. She had been left by the other children in the yard and, wandering around, fell into the open cistern.

Found Dead in Bed.

Benton Harbor, Oct. 4.—A colored woman who bore the name of Mrs. John Howard was found dead in bed, the result of a brutal assault by Howard, who is a chimney sweep, late Saturday night. Howard is in jail, and will be tried for murder.

Robbed While He Slept.

St. Joseph, Oct. 1.—Arthur Pearce, landlord of the American hotel, while asleep in a room was robbed of $250, although the money was well concealed under the pillows. The robber succeeded in stealing it without awakening him.

The supreme court may have to settle the case finally.

PRINTERS STRIKE.

Employes of Firm Doing the State Work Claim the Arbitrators' Ruling Is Not Followed.

Lansing, Oct. 4.—All the employes of the Robert Smith Printing company, state printers and binders, struck Monday and the entire establishment is tied up, 150 hands being out. The employes struck July 1 for a nine-hour work day and a new bindery scale. The case was submitted to arbitrators, who granted the scale and a 9½-hour day. The men now claim that the company has attempted to overrule this decision.

Paper Mill Burned.

Ypsilanti, Sept. 30. — Mill No. 2 of the Peninsular Paper company's plant was burned Wednesday night at seven o'clock. The fire started in the wheel room, probably from an overheated journal, and burned everything except the east wing and boiler house. The loss is about $75,000, only partly insured. Twenty men are thrown out of work, though the plant will probably be rebuilt soon.

A Word to Girls Traveling Alone.

A few words about how a young woman should conduct herself when traveling. There is no country in the world where women are treated with more respect than in America, and it is proverbial that they may travel from one end of the country to the other without being molested or annoyed, if they are sufficiently dignified. But this is a very large "if," and it means that girls should be very careful whom they speak to, even look at when traveling alone. Men very often will offer newspapers and magazines to women on board a train or boat. It is safer to accept nothing from a stranger, as it invariably leads to conversation. Conversation of any kind with anyone of the opposite sex whom you do not know is considered very bad form, and generally dangerous. There is no necessity for being prudish and prim, but be perfectly natural, and refuse all offers of politeness from strangers in a quiet, but firm manner. Buy your own ticket, check your own baggage and keep to yourself. It may not be quite so amusing, but it is far safer in the end, and may save you a great deal of annoyance. —From "Physical Culture for Busy Women," in Demorest's Magazine for October.

The Hon. Frank A. Vanderlip, assistant secretary of the treasury, will have in McClure's Magazine for October an article on "The Cost of the War." There has been a great deal of speculation and talk on this subject by people who were in no position to come at the facts, but Mr. Vanderlip must have them all right under his hand, and his article, therefore, cannot fail to be read with eager interest.

Cyrus C. Adams contributes a very timely article on "Our Colonial Possessions" to the October Chautauquan, in which he considers the commercial value of our late acquisitions and our responsibilities in the new role of a home government. Mr. Adams handles his subject in his usual masterful manner, and his statements are both interesting and trustworthy. The article is illustrated with glimpses of the scenery and life of our new colonies.

Declarations of War.

It is no doubt true that the gravity of a great war is more realized now than in earlier ages: or perhaps it would be more correct to say that the gravity of such a struggle under existing conditions is so utterly unrealizable that no nation cares rashly to provoke war. Hence, when events arise which lead to friction, the tendency has been in recent years to prolong diplomatic negotiations in the hope of finding a peaceful solution. But, on the other hand, when it has once become apparent that hostilities are inevitable, the final plunge into war is now taken with far less of courteous formality than in the days of old. Readers of Greek history are familiar with instances of formal embassies sent, sometimes to "denounce" war, at other times to justify it. Among the Romans, a college of twenty priests, known as fetials, was maintained, for the express purpose of such services. They had certain implements, as well as some sacred herbs, set apart for their special use; and they often travelled great distances to demand reparation from nations who hads injured the Roman state, and, if this was refused, to delare war against them.—Lawrence Irwell, in October Lippincott's.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Restores Health.

UNCLE EZEKIEL OBEAR, assessor and tax collector, Beverly, Mass., who has passed the 80th life mile stone, says: "Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine has done a great deal of good. I suffered for years from sleeplessness and nervous heart trouble. Would feel weary and used up in the morning, had no ambition and my work seemed a burden. A friend recommended Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I purchased a bottle, under protest as I had tried so many remedies unsuccessfully, I thought it no use. But it gave me restful sleep, a good appetite and restored me to energetic health. It is a grand good medicine, and I will gladly write anyone inquiring, full particulars of my satisfactory experience."

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on diseases of the heart and nerves free. Address,

The GRAPHOPHONE

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. For entertaining friends nothing like it for amusement at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and reproduce immediately and as often as desired your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it instantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and upwards.

Manufactured under the patents of Bell, Tainter, Edison and Macdonald. Our establishment is headquarters of the world for Talking Machines and Talking Machine Supplies. Write for catalogue.

The school children and some of their parents were very well entertained and instructed with a "talking machine" exhibition given under the public school auspices in Exelby Hall on Saturday evening by M. L. Smith. Two of the children played the lecturer sang songs, which were immediately reproduced through the machine. Pastor Nickerson also recited a short comic speech, which the talking machine quickly shot out at the audience creating considerable laughter. The school fund was enriched with a part of the proceeds.

Those who attended the entertainment at the hall Saturday evening, were very much annoyed by a few young fellows, who insisted on making a confounded nuisance of themselves by disturbing not only the speaker but the whole audience and but for the family connection of some of them, we would mention their individual names. It's time to call a halt right now.

President McKinley as Commander-in-Chief.

At the very outbreak of hostilities came a striking illustration of what has here been said. It is a fact not commonly known that the first dispatch which was cabled to Commodore Dewey within twenty-four hours after the declaration of war, ordering him to sail forthwith for Manila and capture or destroy the Spanish fleet in Philippine waters—an order which resulted in the greatest naval victory in history, decided the struggle in the eastern hemisphere, and changed the future of ten millions of people—was dictated by the President and sent by his direction against the advice of the entire Cabinet save one member. In the campaign of Santiago, which finally crushed the sea-power of Spain and humanely ended the war in thirty days, it was the President's energetic intervention which overcame the strange inertia and confusion that threatened to delay the departure of the expeditionary force until the golden opportunity had passed. On the other hand he had already vetoed a summer campaign against Havana by land and sea, with its needless carnage and its certain disaster from climate and disease.—From "The Man at the Helm," by Gen. A. B. Nettleton, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for October.

COMMISSIONERS' NOTICE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee.

In the matter of the estate of JOHN HOY SR., deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed by the Probate Court of said County, Commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands of all persons against the estate of said deceased, do hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at the office of Fred B. Wood in village of Tecumseh, Lenawee County, Michigan, on the 1st day of November, 1898, and on the 6th day of March, 1899, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days.

And that six months from the 6th day of September, A. D. 1898, are allowed by said Probate Court for the creditors of said estate to present their claims to us for examination and allowance.

Dated, October 4th, 1898.

JAS. W. WIGHTMAN,
JAS. H. ELLIOTT,
Commissioners.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. Probate Court for the County of Lenawee.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on the 4th day of October in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, judge of probate.

In the matter of the estate of BETSEY BANGS deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Harriet A. Griswold a daughter of said deceased, praying that an instrument in writing purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, may be duly proven and admitted to probate, and that administration of said Estate may be granted to Albert Bond.

It is ordered that Monday, the seventh day of November next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition.

And it is further ordered that a copy of this order be published in THE TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

(A true copy.) RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

A. E. BARAGAR, Probate Register.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

Receiver Townsend represents the Brice interests in the Lima Northern, and Co-receiver Bache, of New York, was put in to take care of C. N. Haskell and a syndicate of New York bankers' interests. This much the Blade has from several reliable sources. The relations between the ex-senator and Haskell, the new power in railroad circles, is the subject of no end of speculation in transportation circles. Are this pair of railroad builders still closely allied, or has Haskell severed his relation with Brice? There is a story going the rounds that Haskell and Brice are both working quietly for the control of the Lima Northern. The first outward manifestation of this fight is the appointment of a co-receiver for the Lima Northern. That this action was taken without the advice or knowledge of Brice was evidenced by the surprise that Alex. Smith manifested when an application was made for a co-receiver. Mr. Smith represented Brice in the claims of the D., T. & M., and said that he did not know whether or not his client would oppose the appointment of a co-receiver. The withdrawal of Mr. Brice's objections is, by no means, an assurance that he and Haskell are working in harmony. Mr. Brice knows full well that the court would not hesitate to appoint a co-receiver, if any considerable portion of the security holders were not satisfied with the receiver.—Toledo Blade.

Sunday the D. T., & M. will put into effect a new schedule which will shorten the time of the trains in and out of Toledo and improve the service to Grand Rapids, Muskegon and West Michigan points. The policy of general improvement of the physical condition and equipment of the property has made this practical. The road bed of the D., T. & M. is fully up to the general standard of the lines in Michigan, and the motive power and cars are in excellent condition. This enables the company to shorten the time of its passenger trains without much effort. Under the new time table, the morning train will depart from Toledo at 8:30 instead of 7:30, and the afternoon train at 4:30 instead of 6:30. Arriving under the new card, the forenoon train will be due here at noon instead of 11:25, and the afternoon at 5:45 instead of 6:00.—Toledo Blade.

An order in relation to the receivership of the Lima Northern was made by Judge Hammond in the United States court this morning, authorizing the receiver to pay to Matthews & Rice, of Ottawa, the sum of $25,966.72, due on drafts cashed by them just prior to the appointment of the receiver. The money was all used in the actual work of construction on the road. The order allows the receiver to pay it from any money he may have or will receive.—Toledo Blade.

A. J. Bandy has been appointed chief clerk of the passenger department of the D., T. & M., and has assumed the duties of his position. Mr. Bandy resigned the position of chief clerk to Supt. Fleoter, of the C., H. & D. at Lima to take charge of the D., T. & M. He was formerly connected with the Norfolk & Western passenger department, and is by no means a stranger in the traffic department. He comes to Toledo highly recommended.—Toledo Blade.

It is rumored that the Jackson branch of the Lake Shore road will be transferred to the Michigan Central in which case the Lake Shore depot at Jackson will be closed and the Michigan Central used instead.—Hillsdale Standard.

The Lake Shore has put two more switch engines into service at this point. This makes 17 day engines and 14 night engines in the Toledo yards.—Toledo Blade.

The prospect is very bright for stocking the new shops at Tecumseh with the latest improved machinery and putting a large force of men at work.

A. W. Lishawa, Geo. Garland, J. C. Baldwin and P. F. Ensminger, of the auditor's office, Lima, O., spent Sunday with their families in Tecumseh.

Brakeman L. Lines, who was badly hurt at Delray Sept. 6th, was in town Thursday, enroute to his home in Lima.

A party of Lima Northern officials were in Tecumseh Tuesday evening on a tour of inspection over the line.

The master mechanic's office was moved into the room formerly occupied by the auditor's office Wednesday.

Supt. Haskell and Road Master Grant started for the south end of the line Wednesday morning.

Ed Martin and Sidney Baker attended the dance at Manchester Friday.

Private Stokes, Co. K, 11th U. S. Inf., is visiting his father, J. W. Stokes.

Ray Cole, of Leipsic, O., spent Sunday with G. C. Shiffer and family.

Carl Haskell spent Sunday in Ottawa.

He who promotes the good is greater than he who performs it.

George W. Allen

Died September 1st, 1898. He was born in Egremont, Mass., Sept. 11, 1827. When he was a year old his parents moved over the state line into "York State." In 1835 the family moved to Michigan, arriving in Brownville, June 12, afterwards moving to Franklin where they have since resided. Jan. 1st, 1851, he was married to Ellen E. Whelan. One child was born to them but the little life passed away in a few short months. In 1887 the wife died also. One brother, a sister and his aged mother survive him.

George W. Allen came of good old fighting stock, his father, Daniel P. Allen, having been engaged in the war of 1812, and his grandfather in the revolutionary war was in the memorable "hungry march" with Benedict Arnold to Quebec.

With the exception of a short time spent in the center of the state, his life was passed with his family and friends in Franklin. Simple and unostentatious in his habits, he had no ambition to shine as a public servant or to gain high places socially. It is as the kind and faithful brother and friend that we shall remember him; the mother with the fretful baby, the tired little children will not forget him and many lonely heart in isolated farm houses will long miss his cheery visits.

Edgar Alonzo Tribou

Was born in Woodstock, Vermont, April 3, 1820, died in Tecumseh, Mich., September, 30, 1898.

At the age of 17 he came to Tecumseh which place he has called "Home" ever since. For twenty-five years he was confidential clerk for B. J. Bidwell, for fifteen years in the mercantile business with Bidwell Bros., then a few years with A. B. Ward, was two terms postmaster, retiring from active life in 1885, since which time he has been an invalid and for three years confined to his bed. In 1849 he married Miss Katherine E. Pittman who with one son, J. H. Tribou, of Detroit, survive him.

Thus, uneventful, is the life of Alonzo Tribou, one of the best men who ever called Tecumseh his home. He lived for his family and friends and it was the delight of his wife and sons to give every comfort and attention during his long illness.

During all his life he was a consistant member of the Episcopal church and was always a leader there until his last sickness. His funeral was conducted by the Masons Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Tribou was one of a class of men few in every community. No one cared to say ought against him and everyone respected and loved him. Would that there were more such men.

Amborse L. Millis

Died in this village October 1st, 1898.

Mr. Millis was born in Batavia, N. Y. April 15th, 1836. In his early life he came to Tecumseh where he has resided since. Much of his life was spent in merchandising and manufacturing and won for him among his associates a good name. He was married Dec. 13th, 1860, to Emma J. Fisher with whom he lived until his death. The wife and daughter, Jessie M., are left to mourn his loss.

The writer of this has been intimately acquainted with him during a great part of his residence here, both as a business man and a citizen and I do not say too much when I say he would go as far to pay a debt as he would to collect one. Like many others he became dissatisfied with his political association on the prohibition question and ever after to the day of his death was a consistant hard worker in the Prohibition party. Sometime ago I approached him a number of times on the subject of religion and urged him to give it his special attention and he promised to do so. The evidence was given me that he had kept his promise when in the early part of his sickness, I presented the subject again, he assured me that it was all right and the matter was then settled and he was accepted by the Savior.

If I say that in his family relations he was kind and indulgent, I shall not say too much of him. His sickness was of a peculiar type. For many months he was helpless as a child and the wifely devotion shown through his life was not wanting when the final struggle came. Both wife and daughter were ever at his side to care for him and nothing they could do was left undone. They will miss him in the home; though not a member of the church, yet he will be missed there; he will be missed in the community, and, not least of all, shall I miss his kindly greetings.

Thou art gone to the grave, but we will not deplore thee,
Though sorrow and darkness encompass the tomb;
The Savior has passed through its portal before thee,
And the lamp of His love is thy guide through the gloom.

The Anglo-American Friendship.

Hon. Carl Schurz in the October Atlantic discusses Washington's familiar warning against "inveterate antipathies" or "passionate attachments" for other nations. He shows the historical causes for Great Britian being so long regarded as our hereditary enemy, and traces the changes in sentiment on both sides down to the recent almost extravagant manifestations of friendship. He believes in sentiment as well as interest in international matters, and in close and harmonious relations between the two nations, but not such as should hamper or cripple them or cause either of them to lose the mastery of its own destinies.

A good story is told of a well known dentist who has a big fruit farm not many miles from Ann Arbor. Last Sunday his help cornered a skunk in a hole in the ground near the house. The good doctor, who is a veteran of the civil war and quite a marksman, took his revolver to kill the odorous animal. He fired point blank five times, but missed the snarling little brute every time. Then he returned to the house in disgrace while the hired help killed the skunk with a club.—Ann Arbor Courier.

Monday morning's Detroit Free Press published a good likeness of Rev. B. S. Hudson and has the following to say:

An enthusiastic welcome awaited Rev. B. S. Hudson yesterday morning to signalize the commencement of his pastorate at the Eighteenth street Baptist church. A large audience greeted him at both morning and evening services. The rostrum was decorated with flowers and potted plants. At the back there was the legend "Welcome." American flags were also used with good effect. In the morning Rev. Mr. Hudson preached on the subject of state missions. The evening topic was "The Division of Imperative Questions," the text being "What shall I do then with Jesus, which is called Christ?" The new pastor will reside at 647 Baker street.

This morning, our young friend, Guy Davidson, was crazy. Last evening he hitched his horse in the Methodist church shed and when time for Guy to go home, about 11:00 o'clock, the horse was there but buggy and harness were gone. Guy rode the horse home and this morning back to town, when he and Deputy Sheriff Bidwell commenced a thorough hunt for the lost buggy and harness. It seems, in the meantime, that Rev. Pope had asked guests to remain with him over night and unhitched the wrong gray horse. Explanations followed and now Guy and the Dominie are comparing notes to determine which one was sober.

HOW TO GAIN FLESH.

Mrs. S. T. Rorer Prescribes the Proper Diet and Treatment for Women Inclined to Thinness.

"First of all, the person inclined to thinness must learn to be quiet, even in active exercises," writes Mrs. S. T. Rorer on "The Best Foods for Stout and Thin Women," in the Ladies' Home Journal. "The morning bath and rub is absolutely necessary. For the morning meal she should take some light, easily digested food, as two soft-boiled eggs, a piece of milk toast, or piece of toasted whole wheat bread, preceding this a half hour with a cup of warm water. At luncheon a cream soup, piece of whole wheat bread, well toasted, any of the little made dishes like chicken timbales, boudins, omelets, with at least two slices of whole wheat bread thickly buttered; two ounces of butter at this meal would not be too great a quantity if well masticated with the bread. Use, also, a baked potato, or a couple of tablespoonfuls of boiled rice, and as a dessert, rice pudding, cup custard, any of the light souffles, or Bavarian cream—in fact, anything but cake, pie or boiled puddings. Avoid all of the acid fruits.

"For the night meal have a clear soup, a red meat, either beef or mutton, with a baked potato, or mashed potato browned in the oven, or a potato croquette, or rice in any form, stewed macaroni, a green vegetable, and a salad composed of a green vegetable with French dressing. Do not have more than two vegetables at one meal, besides the salad. For dessert have a charlotte, a little ice cream eaten slowly, or any of those above mentioned, or a wafer that has been thoroughly toasted, and any of the ripe cheeses. For luncheon, where cream soups cannot be used, a cup of cocoa or chocolate with cream is exceedingly valuable."

Fig Sandwiches in Rolls.

Split a dozen figs, scrape out the soft portion, rejecting the skins; rub this to a paste. Butter either white or brown bread, then cut the slices from the loaf as thin as possible; remove the crusts; spread over the paste; roll the bread carefully, press for a moment until there is no danger of the roll opening, then roll it in a piece of tissue paper, twisting the ends as you would an old-fashioned motto, or it may be tied with narrow baby ribbon of any color.—Mrs. S. T. Rorer, in Ladies' Home Journal.

Cream of Corn Soup.

Score down the grains and press out the pulp from six good-sized ears of corn; add to this in a double boiler one quart of milk, a teaspoonful of grated onion, not more than one-eighth of a teaspoonful of ground mace, about a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper, and, if you like, a teaspoonful of sugar. Rub together one tablespoonful of butter and two of flour, add to the soup and stir until thick. Serve in a hot tureen after pressing through a puree sieve.—Mrs. S. T. Rorer, in Ladies' Home Journal.

AT A GHOST PICNIC.

A Form of Summer Entertainment Which Affords More Fun Than Anything Ever Tried.

A fine moonlight evening with the barometer at a satisfactory altitude is one of the essentials for this form of entertainment. On the invitation cards guests should be notified that a white costume of some description is necessary. It may be silk, satin or cotton, according to the fancy or means of the wearer, but pure white, without spot or blemish, it must be.

Since it is not every one, especially among the matrons, and of course all the men, who is in possession of a white costume, some of the shifts to which the guests will resort will be sure to add immeasurably to the merriment of the occasion. So much the better; a "ghost" picnic should be wildly hilarious. The scene of the gathering should not be fixed too far from home, and should be chosen, to some extent, on account of its easy access. Instead of arranging a preliminary meet, as at the ordinary picnic, the guests should find their way to the place in family groups or singly, as the case may be. It will, of course, depend upon the individual humor of each guest to make his or her appearance on the scene as "ghostly" as may be. Some will ride cannily by hedge and bridge and take the assemblage unawares. Some will work wonders on old machines with white paint, and Japanese lanterns at the handlebar will proclaim their advent to all and sundry.

The chief item of the programme should be the supper and this should be as dainty as possible, and as virginal in hue as the culinary art can be. Aerated waters, white meat sandwiches, cakes, sweets and fruits, the latter in any hue obtainable, should be served by white-robed handmaids, on white ware. The glamour of a moonlight night in a sylvan glade will be likely to suggest its own method of killing time, therefore active forms of entertainment need not be suggested. Dumb charades would probably suggest themselves to the more histrionically disposed, and if enacted in a superstitious neighborhood would probably tend to enrich the local folk-lore and dissipate the popular belief that the "little people" have ceased to reveal themselves to mortal eyes.—Chicago Daily News.

Cottage Cheese Sandwiches.

Cut slices of brown bread about half an inch thick; do not remove the crusts; rub half a pint of cottage cheese to a smooh paste, then press it through a fine sieve; add slowly, beating all the while, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, half a teaspoonful of salt, and two tablespoonfuls of thick cream. Spread each slice of bread thickly with this cream mixture. Put on top a very thin slice of white bread, and on top of this another thin layer of cheese. Cover with a slice of brown bread and trim into shape.—Mrs. S. T. Rorer, in Ladies' Home Journal.

A REALLY CHARMING AFTERNOON GOWN.

Although Very Effective, Especially in White Lawn and Insertion, It Is Not Very Expensive.

Here is a very pretty afternoon toilette which can be made with very little expenditure of time or money. The materials employed in its design are lawn and plain embroidered insertion about three inches wide. The seams in the skirt are joined with the insertion and the waist is made of plain lawn. Around the waist is a girdle of old rose satin ribbon, which fastens without bow or other trimming, at the left side.

The attractive feature of the toilette is an Eton jacket which is made of wider insertion. This insertion is purchased for 60 or 75 cents a yard at the most, and runs upward of 22 inches wide. The front of the jacket is cut wide enough to be turned back to form lapels. In this case the lapels are lined with very fine old rose lawn, but plain white can be used with almost the same effect.

The sleeves are tight fitting almost to the shoulders and finished with a little ruffle of fine embroidery. The pattern which combines sleeve and puff in one piece is quite the vogue and will be seen on gowns for all occasions during the summer season.

The collar of the Eton jacket is very high, and the front ends in such a narrow point that it blouses in equal proportions with the front of the waist. If the Eton jacket is not worn the front can be finished with a jabot of embroidery and still the gown will be quite a la mode.

SAINTS AND SINNERS.

They Are Found in Congress Just as Anywhere Else.

Many Men in Public Life Do Not Deserve to Be Called "Honorable"—Others Again Have Earned the Prefix.

[Special Washington Letter.]

THE truth should not be spoken, nor written, at all times; but sometimes it does good.

John Doe and Richard Roe lived in different parts of the country, and they were not acquainted, when they were elected to congress; but they know each other very well now.

Since they became congressmen, their letters are not addressed as formerly, but the word "honorable" is prefixed to their names on all occasions. Whether they are honorable men or not, all congressmen are addressed with that title. Therefore, the letters come addressed to Hon. John Doe and to Hon. Richard Roe.

There are all sorts of people in congress, just as there are all sorts of people in town and in the country. There are many preachers who do not deserve the title "reverend," and yet they are all regarded as reverend gentlemen. So it happens that there are many men in public life who do not deserve the title, because they are not really honorable.

Well, Hon. John Doe is an honorable man, and his letters are properly addressed. Let us see how he conducts himself since he came into congressional honors. In the first place he has brought his wife and family here. He has rented a house, furnished it, and lives in it. He is out of bed every morning at sunrise, and by seven o'clock he is at his desk at work, answering letters from the people who honored him by electing him to congress. He never gets a letter that he does not answer.

He has breakfast at eight o'clock with his wife and children, and he sometimes walks to school with the little ones, because they love him, and like to walk on each side of him, holding his hands and prattling to him about their little affairs. People in the neighborhood see him, and wonder if he has no work to do. They know that other congressmen claim to be too busy to play with their children, and they think that Congressman John Doe must be a fellow who wastes his time. But they don't know him.

After walking two blocks to the schoolhouse, he then takes a walk of about half a mile, and returns to his desk for a lot of hard work, in the way of correspondence. Sometimes he reads a lot of committee reports on important bills, so that he will be well informed when the bills come up in the house of representatives for discussion. That is good work, too, for there are many congressmen who do not study affairs so thoroughly.

Promptly at ten o'clock, every morning, it is his custom to start from home for the purpose of visiting the executive departments, to look after matters about which his constituents have written to him. Sometimes, just as he is ready to go to the departments, some gentleman or lady from his district, who is in a government department, calls with a tale of woe, to which he listens attentively. There is a promotion in sight, and he is requested to visit the secretary of the department, and use his influence to secure that promotion for his constituent. He listens to the story, and accedes to the request.

But, if there is no interruption of that kind, Congressman John Doe visits the interior department to make inquiry about a pension case, which has been appealed. He sees the second assistant secretary, who gives him all the papers in the case, and there he sits for an hour, reading every paper, carefully as a paid lawyer would do, in order to ascertain the merits of the case. Then, after fully informing himself about the matter, he argues the point with the assistant secretary and takes the part of his old soldier constituent as earnestly as though he were a paid pension agent. That is his duty as a congressman, and he does it.

JOHN DOE WHO WORKS.

If the entire morning is not then spent, he will go to the Indian office, to consult with the commissioner about a contract for blankets which one of his constituents wants to make, for the purpose of supplying Indians with those necessary articles. He must convince the commissioner that his constituent will furnish better blankets for less money than any other contractor; and he does his best in the matter, as he is in duty bound to do as a congressman, representing that constituent. Thus he attends to every errand required of him, from day to day; and he writes to each one of his correspondents, giving the exact condition of affairs in every case.

At noon the house of representatives is called to order, and Congressman John Doe is in his place, ready for call, unless public duty has kept him in one of the departments. But, as a general thing, he is always in his place when the gavel falls at noon, and Speaker Reed says: "The house will come to order."

As soon as the house adjourns, at four, five, six or seven o'clock, as the case may be, Congressman John Doe gets aboard of an electric car and hastens home. He takes supper with his wife and children; or, if adjournment has been later than usual, and supper is over, he takes supper alone, but his wife and children are there, and they keep up a tremendous chatter during his meal. They are all happy because he is at home. They don't know what it is to have a husband or papa who does not care enough for his home to come to supper and talk with the family.

So, from his daily record, as thus outlined, we may conclude that the word "honorable" is all right, when it is applied to such a man, and we will continue to refer to him as Hon. John Doe.

Hon. Richard Roe is a different man, and his daily life shall be fairly described, so that he will also recognize his picture, and say that the portrait is excellent in every respect. He is not like Congressman Doe, in any particular. On the contrary, he is a character whose day's doings will interest you fully as much as the day's doings of Congressman Doe; principally because of the radical difference between the two men. Both of them have about equal intellectual ability, and both of them have about equal educational acquirements. The difference between them is altogther as to their understanding and performance of public duties.

First and foremost, let it be said that Congressman John Doe goes to church regularly. Congressman Richard Roe never goes to any church. That is one difference.

Congressman Richard Roe has not taken a meal with his family since congress began, except on Sundays and on such days as the house of representatives happens not to be in session. On these days he occasionally takes luncheon at home.

It is his regular custom to remain down town in the evening and take supper with other members of congress like himself, at a prominent hotel or restaurant. In congressional life, as well as in other walks of life, it is true that "birds of a feather flock together." All of these down-town dinners are preceded by cocktails and other decoctions of liquor; and during the meal several kinds of wine are consumed.

By eight o'clock in the evening this coterie of congressional birds may be seen emerging from their down-town dining-room, with Congressman Richard Roe conspicuously in their midst, a very hilarious statesman who is denominated by his companions "a jolly good fellow." If the evening is pleasant, they saunter down street; but if the weather is unpleasant they take carriages and drive to a variety theater where there is a complete absence of morality from every part of the performance.

Congressman Richard Roe, with his boon companions, leaves the theater before 11 o'clock and repairs to a clubroom where he plays cards until three or four o'clock in the morning, when he rides home in a closed carriage.

This statesman, who is typical of a certain class, after reaching his home at four o'clock in the morning, sleeps until ten or eleven o'clock, awakens with a headache, and is in a bad humor with the whole world. It is upon such occasions, when he is quarrelsome, vituperative and unjust, that his wife is favored with his society. Of course she is loyal to her husband in every utterance; but if she were to tell the truth concerning him she would probably admit that he does not seem to her to be "a jolly good fellow."

Fortunately for this statesman, the government makes an appropriation of $100 a month for a private secretary to each congressman. A sober and industrious young gentleman from a leading town in the district represented by Richard Roe occupies this position. He opens all of the mail and answers 90 per cent. of all communications. He signs the congressman's name, and the people at home suppose that the letters they receive come from their hard-working congressman. As a matter of fact, the word honorable should not be prefixed or affixed to his name. He is sowing to the wind and he will reap the whirlwind. Some of these days the sovereign people will become acquainted with his true character and they will elect in his place some man more worthy of their suffrages and of their confidence.

CORN SHOCKING TOOL.

It Is a Temporary Binder to Hold the Bunch Together While It Is Being Tied.

R. B. Amstutz, of Birmingham, O., gives the readers of the New York Tribune the benefit of a device which he has tried with gratifying results in shocking corn. He says that one difficulty that is experienced in tying with twine is that the shock is apt to be bound too loosely, and then it will not stand well. He aims, therefore, to provide a way for getting a good squeeze on the bundle before tying.

Mr. Amstutz says: "Take an old broom handle a foot shorter than the length of twine to be used. At one end make a hole through which you can put a strip of leather, whereby to attach a piece of rope to the stick. The rope should be about four inches shorter than the twine. A quarter-inch rope is the best size. At the outer end of the rope fasten a ring just big enough to slip over the stick easily. In use proceed as follows: Take the handle and ring in one hand, reach around the shock, pass the ring into the other hand, and then slip the butt end of the handle into the ring. Now, shove the ring along the handle down to the leather, turn the handle out away from the side of the shock, and it will stay there while you deliberately put the twine around and tie. Throw the handle back, release the ring, and go to the next shock." Mr. Amstutz believes that he is the originator of this device, but he is willing that others should use it without charge.

THE RUSSIAN THISTLE.

Worst Pest American Farmers Have Yet Been Called Upon to Keep in Subjection.

Look out for the Russian thistle. It is here and it has come to stay, says Farm News. Last year the writer saw a good many specimens east of the Mississippi river, some of them along the railroads of Ohio. Last fall a good many thistles went to seed and the winter winds blew them hither and yon all across the country. This spring there are a good many places where Russian thistles are springing up miles away from the place where the seed ripened last fall. This is especially true of the prairie sections of Illinois, and it is safe to predict that the battle with this pest is on. Every man must use his best efforts to destroy every specimen on his land, if he would have any peace handling his crops of grain. We have been watching specimens grow along one of the great railroads, and it is surprising how rapidly they shoot up and how thickly the land has become seeded with them in some places. If one of these plants gets a start, it soon throws out side branches and the shade kills any other plant near the thistle, and if the thistles are thick enough every other kind of vegetation disappears. A single plant where it grows alone will often cover a circular spot three feet in diameter before the season is over. It is the worst weed pest we have ever been called upon to fight, and it should be kept in subjection from the first.

How to Pickle Pork.

Some one recently called for a recipe for pickling pork. Here is one that we find good: Salt enough to take out the blood and let it stand two or three days. For every 100 pounds of meat take ten pounds of salt, four pounds of Orleans sugar, three-quarters ounce of saltpeter, two ounces of soda and eight gallons of water. Boil, strain and let cool. Then pour over the meat. Let it stay in pickle at least six weeks. Keep the meat well under pickle, but be careful not to weight it too heavy. If the pickle should not be enough to cover you will have to make enough as proportioned above. This will depend somewhat upon the shape of your vessel. —A. S. Watson, in American Cultivator.

Flax with Other Grain.

Under some conditions it may be advisable to grow flax with other grain. Flax is a very exhaustive crop, but in this fact lies the advantage when grain is sown on very rich land in mixing some flaxseed with it. If the flax is not grown the grain will grow too rank a straw, while with the flax to help exhaust the superfluous fertility there is less danger of this. There will be more of the grain grown, while all of the flaxseed that is harvested will be so much clear gain. Barley is one of the best grains to grow with flax, and both are ready to cut at the same time. But both should be very lightly seeded if clover seed is sown the same spring, else there will be a poor catch of clover.—American Cultivator.

To make ensilage a success, colonies should be very strong and almost ready to swarm.

Jack Harold's ::: ::: Presentiment.

By HELEN BEEKMAN.

"I HOPE I may one day laugh at my own folly, but the hour is not yet," said Jack Harold to his affianced bride, as they stood together one moonlit summer evening at the gate.

"How like you, Jack," she exclaims, "to fancy, because I insist upon this visit to the city, some wonderful event is to happen which is to bring misery to both. No jealousy is at work, I hope, Jack," this last with half-ironical emphasis.

"Even so, it would not be unpardonable," was her answer, as Jack Harold, with fond pride, looked on the beauty of the girl by his side.

"Many men have suffered from the green-eyed monster's sting with far less cause, but I can plead 'not guilty' this time. I do not think jealousy would explain my feeling, but I can never forget, Nellie, how humble is the lot I can promise you in comparison with the gilded offerings of other men. I know, my darling, the admiration your beauty cannot fail to excite, and, oh, how quiet and uneventful will seem this existence 'mid birds and trees and flowers when you are surrounded by the gayety, the excitement and the glamour of city life. Yet should you choose it in preference, the misery would come to me; therefore, I cannot comprehend the dread feeling that something threatens both."

"I will not even sympathize with it, Jack," is her reply, "since it does me so much injustice. Have you forgotten in the pretty home you speak of so disparagingly, love is to be its sunshine, love the very song of the birds, love the rustle of the trees, love the fragrance of the flowers? Who, then, would choose the gilded bars of the caged songster? Jack, what wealth could compensate for the loss of your heart?"

"I can scarcely realize I have you at last," said pretty Mrs. Raymond to her friend, as they sat side by side in the former's comfortable dressing-room preparatory to a good-night chat, woman's dearest privilege. The two had been school friends, and only a year before Nellie had officiated as bridesmaid and it was this visit Jack Harold had anticipated with such dread.

"Now, tell me," continued Mrs. Raymond, "who is this ogre in the country who did not wish you to come to me?"

"Never mind about him," answered Nellie, blushingly. "You see his power was not sufficient to detain me. I prefer hearing something of yourself."

"Of myself! Happiness is always monotonous, and so I have nothing to relate, save that every dream has been more than realized but one, and that is that you should have a home near mine. Therefore I am glad to hear the ogre's claim can be broken."

"Oh, I did not say that!" interrupted Nellie.

"At all events, dear, while you are with me we will ignore it, and perhaps —perhaps— By the way (leaving the former sentence unfinished) Dennis Doane was charmed to hear I was expecting you. To-morrow night he is to dine and accompany us to the opera; so, my dear, look your prettiest."

Again Nellie blushed. A year before Mr. Doane had been the groomsman appointed her at the wedding, and even in the few hours they had spent together he had found time for the pretty speeches, spoken with low, lingering accent, which the color flaming her cheek at his name proved unforgotten. Somehow Jack never said such things. His plain "I love you" seemed to him to cover all, and render all else unnecessary. But they were very pleasant to hear, nevertheless, thought Nellie, as with a sigh of half regret, half longing, for Jack's presence, she lost herself in dreamland.

"Very pleasant to hear." So it seemed, as day followed day, and Dennis Doane hovered like a shadow at her side. He so well knew their magic, could throw into his eyes the fire which seemed soul-lit, or into his voice meaning, which, if counterfeit, defied detection; and slowly but surely the fatal net was woven in which the girl was to yield up her plighted word. Jack read the letters which still came to him from her hand with a sinking at his honest heart and a paling of his ruddy cheek, and he waited, knowing the blow must fall, waiting her kindly words, the while telling her nothing of what love's intuition had taught him, but leaving her hands free and unfettered to strike the blow when she would. He had thought he had steeled himself to bear it, little knowing of the hope which all the while had burned with its faint flame, until it suddenly went out, extinguished by certainty, leaving him to grope in a blackness so dense that for a time not even God's light could penetrate.

"How shall I tell you," she wrote, "that the girl who parted from you under the light of the moon, who so defiantly laughed at your foolish presentiment, has by her own act verified it? Jack, if that night you had told me I could cause your heart such pain I would have scorned even the thought. Yet I dare write the words 'forgive me.' I dare hope in time you may forget me. I have broken my vows to you, Jack. I have pledged them to another. The gilded bars are to be mine, after all, not the home pervaded by love's sunshine, yet it is my own choice. It is as you said. The glare and glitter has been more than my weak eyes could bear. I have promised to love the man who is to be my husband, but the love he requires is more easily given than that the birds echoed and the flowers blessed. I think, after all, my heart is buried on the spot where you and I parted. Let us hope it never may be resurrected. Jack, Jack, forgive me!"

So Dennis Doane had done this work. Her letter once dispatched, Nellie forbade thought to enter more and dreamed that in her new life she had found happiness, while he who had gained her for his own looked on her wondrous beauty and gloried that with wealth unlimited at his command so fair a bride should grace his handsome home. The sweetly solemn words of wife and mother were to him unknown.

But her visit was approaching its close. A few days more and she must return to her home, when the preparations for the wedding were to be hurried as speedily as possible, and in the new year Dennis Doane was to come to claim her. It was the excitement, she thought, which made her head throb so heavily as she laid it one night on her pillow and caused her cheeks to burn so hotly, while she tossed to and fro, wooing sleep in vain. They knew otherwise when they found her delirious and fever-stricken in the morning, and their fear arose to panic when the physician summoned shook his head and pronounced it the fearful scourge of smallpox.

For many weary days and nights the poor girl knew not the dread enemy which had overtaken her. The house, which had been ever filled with gay merriment, was silent and deserted, while the shadow of death in its most horrible form hung dark and dismal over it. But there came a day when it lifted its somber wings and flew away, and those who had well-nigh despaired knew that Nellie Leonard would live. In the early dawn, when her attendants thought her sleeping, when the wonderful crisis had been passed, lying awake and alone, she first realized the full consciousness of all that had happened. But it was Jack's hand for which she longed to press her fevered brow; Jack's lips once more to meet her own, as in the silence and the darkness her own heart stood revealed to her.

Perhaps if she told him she had repented, if she proved to him that her illness had taught her the poverty of all she thought wealth, he might forgive her and once more take her back to his true, manly heart. And with this thought to soothe and comfort her she closed her eyes and slept.

A week later, and with strength and fuller consciousness came a dim wonderment as to the ravages of the disease. She asked for a mirror. The attendants pityingly turned away, but she would have her demand complied with. Once she glanced into it, then asked to be left alone. For hours she lay silent and motionless, only now and then a tear finding its sad way down the cheek whose first bloom had forever fled. Then she called for pen and paper.

"The beauty for which you loved me," she wrote, with a firm hand, "has vanished. I would that all is left had been hid by the coffin's lid, but God's way is not our way, and He decreed it otherwise. You asked me to grace your home, I can no longer do so, since you would turn shuddering from my presence. Therefore, I release you."

Then came in answer a few cold words of condolence and regret, but no petition that her decision be reversed, and Nellie Leonard's life once more belonged to her to do with as she would. But such a shattered, changed life! Jack never would believe now that had all been different she still would have burst her links of gold and asked him once more to bind her in the chains of love. Home! Home! This was the cry of her heart. And at the first hour her physicians gave consent. By slow, careful stages, she was carried back to the home she had left so bright, so joyous. The disease, after all, had been far more merciful than she had at first supposed. It was still a face of fair beauty, with but here and there some slight blemish to prove its finger had but touched her and passed by, but she covers it shudderingly in both hands when Jack Harold first enters the room where she sits. A great rush of tenderness comes over him, as he notes the action, and he approaches her side.

"Nellie, is this true, that your life is yours to do with as you will—that no other can assert a right in its possession? If so, will you once more, my darling, place it in my hands?"

Then she raises her face to meet his, and Jack starts.

"I thought you altered, darling, but you are all unchanged. It is not true, perhaps," he adds, sadly. "I have heard wrongly."

"No, Jack," she says, finding voice and springing to her feet. "If you will take me with my beauty gone, oh, how glad I shall be once more to rest in your love! It has been my punishment, Jack—a fit one. It is also fit that I should suffer."

"Darling," he answered, folding her to his heart, "in my eyes my wife would be ever beautiful, even though disfigurement had indeed been your portion, but thank God He has left you beautiful in other eyes than those blinded by love. Let us not call it punishment, darling, but rather accept it as His hand leading us into the true paths of happiness."—N. Y. Ledger.

Stewed Mushrooms.

Take ten large, fleshy mushrooms. Remove stems. Lay in stew-pan with pepper, salt, parsley and minced scallions. Add two wine glasses of cream. Stew for one-half hour. Remove mushrooms and lay on a hot plate. Beat up yolks of three eggs with one ounce butter and some nutmeg. Add to the liquor in pan, stirring gently until it thickens. Pour over the mushrooms and serve hot.—Good Health.

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

A Fearful Accident Befalls a Pioneer Farmer—Thrown from a Load of Hay with Great Force—Entire Body Paralyzed—The Best Medical Aid Possible Used in His Behalf.

From the Tribune, Charlotte, Mich.

One of the pioneer farmers of Benton township, Mich., is Elnathan Munger. Despite the many privations and difficulties which a pioneer contends with, Mr. Munger has succeeded. He has also served as clerk of his township, and is known as a careful, conscientious and honorable citizen.

His busy life has not been all sunshine, however, and in speaking to our reporter of his struggles in earlier days, he said:

"One Monday in March, 1890, I was drawing hay to a neighbor's, when I was thrown from my wagon with great force to the ground, striking a front wheel in my descent. I struck on both hands with such force as to almost paralyze my whole body. The injury was most severe to my chest, shoulders, back and arms, although my face was badly cut. It seemed as though the great weight of my fall drove my arms back and injured both them and my backbone.

"A prominent Potterville physician was called and on the Friday night following I was able to be taken home. The next day I sent for a Grand Ledge physician who blistered me for weeks. I became some better, but the main trouble with my body and arms remained as bad as ever. During the year following this treatment I was not benefited and began to think life to me was not worth living. I feared that my nervous system was completely shattered and that paralysis would follow.

"In reading an article in the Montreal Family Herald and Star concerning Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, about a year or a year and a half after I was injured, I noticed that people similarly afflicted were claiming to be cured. I at once ordered that remedy through my Potterville druggist, Mr. M. J. Palmer. I think this was the first sold in these parts.

"Inside of ten days after taking the first dose I became satisfied that I had found the remedy to fit my case. I kept gaining; the pills acted as a tonic, regulated my bowels, liver and stomach, gave me a good appetite, lessened the pains in my body and arms and cured a scrofulous condition that I had inherited from my father.

"I now consider myself as good for work as almost any man of my years, and I feel that I owe all I enjoy of life and health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I have no trouble with my arms whatever, and have not had for a number of years.

"I am of the opinion that with pure blood one will have but little, if any sickness, and this medicine will secure that condition. I keep these pills on hand for my family medicine and have not had a doctor since I began their use.

"I am in excellent physical condition and do my farm work without other help than an occasional day's work, and this result has been secured in spite of the fact that I was a complete physical wreck. I cannot speak in high enough praise of this remedy. I have often recommended it to my friends with utmost confidence and shall be glad to answer any inquiries from those who are afflicted, if stamp for the reply is enclosed. My postoffice is Potterville, Mich.

"ELNATHAN MUNGER."

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 21st day of April, A.D., 1898.

GEO. A. PERRY, Notary Public.

"I fully concur in the statement above made by Mr. Elnathan Munger, who is one of our excellent citizens and who would be the very last man to make an overdrawn statement. The cure in his case was marvelous and resulted in a great many sales of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

"M. J. PALMER, Druggist, Potterville."

All the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves are contained in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They are sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or directly by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N.Y.

Mrs. Brewer's Humane Work.

A well-to-do Rhode Island lady, who looks after the sick of her city, writes to Dr. Hartman of her practical experience with Pe-ru-na.

HUMANITY is blessed with some good samaritans. Mrs. Lizzie M. Brewer, of 196 High St., Westerly, R. I., is a noble woman who devotes a great deal of time and money to caring for the sick of Westerly. She has been for several years one of Pe-ru-na's strongest friends, and under date of March 17, 1898, she writes the following letter to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O., the originator of Pe-ru-na:

MRS. LIZZIE M. BREWER.

"Your welcome advice is at hand, and my gratitude is unbounded for the privilege I enjoy of consulting so renowned a physician as yourself, always receiving such prompt and satisfactory replies to my questions. And what amazes me most is that this can be done year after year, with unfailing certainty, free of charge. I have learned that you have become to thousands and thousands of households the same beneficent guide and adviser that you are to my household.

"As for your free books, I read them everyone, and treasure their contents as the choicest wisdom. I have used Pe-ru-na in my family for over four years. I find it a sure cure for all catarrhal affections so common in this part of the country. It cures a cold at once; there is no cough medicine that can at all equal Pe-ru-na; as for la grippe there is no other remedy that can at all compare with Pe-ru-na. I notice in medical journals and from the testimony of my neighbors that the doctors seem quite unsuccessful in treating la grippe, especially in removing the after effects of la grippe. From personal observation in many cases I know that Pe-ru-na is a sure specific for these cases. I am among the sick a great deal in our city, and have supplied many invalids with Pe-ru-na, simply because I am enthusiastic in my faith as to its results. I have never known it to fail to quickly and permanently remove that demoralized state of the human system which follows la grippe.

"In cases of weaknesses peculiar to my sex I am sure that no other remedy can approach in good results the action of Pe-ru-na. It meets all the bad symptoms to which females are subject. The irregularities and nervousness, the debility and misery, which afflict more or less the women from girlhood to change of life, are one and all met and overcome by your excellent Pe-ru-na. I wish every young lady in our city could read your book 'Health and Beauty.' Any one wishing to inquire of me further can do so by enlcosing a stamp for reply."

MAMMOTH STURGEON.

Capturing Half-Ton Fishes Is a Matter of Common Occurrence in British Columbia.

I saw a sturgeon in Victoria, on the cannery floor, measuring 12 feet by the tape and weighing more than 600 pounds. Anyone wishing to deceive the public by aid of a prevaricating camera should pose beside this 12-foot fish. The men who skillfully and laboriously reduced it to sections with an ax said it was not an uncommon fish, though the biggest on the floor; that they often found them far larger, and weighing as much as 1,200 pounds, says the Toronto Globe.

Two men lifting a half-ton fish into their boat is the exciting feature of sturgeon fishing. The sturgeon, if not fastened in his thick hide, is apt to resent it. He shakes his head in emphatic dissent; and a head three feet long and as big as a log, when vigorously shaken by a half-ton body, is a thing to be avoided. The tail, too, is a source of danger, for it not only slaps with energy, but can cover a large surface with one application. The man new at the business is apt to get hurt the first time he helps to coax a wriggling sturgeon of standard size over the gunwale.

On the floor of the cannery it is a great inert mass of flesh. The first operation of the butcher is to chop off the head and tail with an ax, and for these free gifts of nature the Indian and Chinaman are eagerly waiting at the door. The fins are cut off with a knife, and these are not allowed to go to waste. As the refuse is shoveled along the planks to the river there is little allowed to pass the coast native and his cousin with the braided hair, Chinamen potter around the place and help to clear away the refuse for the sake of what they can glean, and have a weakness for taking parts not intended for the river. When such Mongolian tricks are discovered the Chinamen are all driven out with more noise than ceremony, but they take their expulsion with oriental indifference and in a few minutes are all back again.

NAMES FOR MONEY.

This Year It Is Oil and "Let the Oil Trickle" Is a Saying That Is Heard in the Land.

To Artemus Ward is attributed the saying that there are many men in the United States who never seem to have any money, there does not seem to be any men in the United States who haven't a name for money, and the less money a man has the more names he uses. Many colloquial names for money, if not indeed a majority of them, have their origin among gamblers, or at least card players and other individuals who delight to be described in the newspapers as "members of the sporting fraternity," says the New York Sun. Last summer the name very generally in use for money was the word "cush;" the summer before the word phrase in most general use was "the long green." Prior to that such nouns were frequently in use as "dough," "sugar," "stamps," "the ready," "dust," "the old stuff," "the price," "the coin," and "spondulex."

This year the favorite seems to be "the oil," and what has come to be a familiar expression is "let the oil trickle," which is a latter-day version of the old familiar advice, "put up or shut up." When one such expression is fairly started on its way to popularity it remains in use for usually a year, or until superseded by one more descriptive or having at least better claims to acceptance as a verbal novelty. Oil has one marked point of resemblance to money. It is hard to hold.

Newsboy's Response to a Worthy Clergyman's Well-Meant Advances.

Rev. Ward Beecher Pickard, of Epworth Memorial church, while on his vacation in the east, has been writing a series of interesting letters to the Sunday school. In his last he told of an incident in Boston, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

He was walking along the common one morning and stopped to buy a paper from a bright-faced newsboy.

"Have you ever heard of a place out west called Cleveland?" he asked the boy.

"Sure. That where you belong?" came the quick reply.

"Yes," my little man," said Mr. Pickard. "But what do you know about Cleveland?"

"I know it's out on Lake Erie and youse got a dondy baseball club. They're crowding our boys too close for comfort, and that's no joke, either."

Whether the dignified pastor of one of Cleveland's most prominent churches was pleased or not his letter did not say, but he asked the boy how old he was and paid for his paper, saying: "There are 12 pennies, one for each year. If you grow up to be as good a man as you are bright now you'll be all right."

"I've been told that before," was the parting response from the little chap as the preacher moved on.

Novel Insurance Claim Paid.

A claim which is probably unique in the annals of fire insurance has just been paid by an insurance company to a man in Yarmouth, England. The claimant was sitting on the sea front with the ends of his trousers turned up. A little ash from his pipe dropped into the tuck thus formed and burnt a hole. After inspecting the garment the company paid for a new pair, the claim being under a general fire policy.

SHAKERS AS LAND OWNERS.

They Have Invested Heavily in Valuable New York City Realty.

"People would be amazed to know," said an uptown dealer in real estate, reports the New York Mail and Express, "that some of the richest patches of improved land on Manhattan island are owned by the Society of Shakers in New Lebanon. Only a few days ago they acquired title to a valuable hotel property running an entire square on the West side and worth at least $2,000,000. They are forever on the lookout for heavy investments, all in real estate, and seem to have a pocketbook without a bottom. They are rich as cream. Their methods are peculiar, extremely primitive. One of the slyest members slips down to the city, spends a few weeks in nosing around for bargains, talks with property holders and agents, and then goes home to report. The supreme council of the Shakers is composed of 50 acute business men, who can drive a bargain and pray with the same facility. In this body these reports are discussed, and the investment of enormous sums hangs on the verdict. Everybody has a chance to make suggestions, and, in this way, some point that others would miss is seen and acted on.

"As a result these peculiar, ascetic disciples of Mother Ann and Joseph Meacham, who founded the New Lebanon settlement back in the last century on a plain oatmeal basis, now possess property here on the island that will make their descendants Astors. They have gone specially, in the past five years, into upper West side development. All this is the outcome of economy and thrift. Idleness they call a cardinal sin. They have enormous gardens, where flowers, medical herbs, fruits and vegetables are cultivated. Lately they have gone heavily into agriculture and manufacture, and find a ready market for all they produce."

THE OLDEST LETTER.

Was Written Fifteen Centuries Before Christ—Now in the British Museum.

Probably the oldest letter in the world is the letter of the Panbesa, written 15 centuries before Christ, to his friend Amenemapt, the scribe, says the Kansas City Journal.

The manuscript is of perishable papyrus, and it is amazing that it should have survived for more than 30 centuries and still be legible.

It is preserved in the collection of the British museum. It has been several times translated during the present century. It presents an interesting picture of life in Egypt in the time of Rameses II. It is more in the nature of a literary production, a poem composed in celebration of the visit of Pharaoh to the city of Pa-Rameses than an ordinary letter of to-day.

Panbesa "greets his lord, the scribe Amenemapt, to whom be life, health and strength," and then goes on to describe the verdant fields, the thrashing floors, the vineyards, the groves of olives, the orchards of figs; the great daily markets with their fish and water fowl and swarms of purchasers.

The citizens had their "sweet wine of Khemi, pomegranate wine, and wine from the vineyard," and to these they added "beer of Kati."

There was music in plenty furnished by the singers of the school of Memphis.

On the whole, Pa-Rameses seems to have been a pleasant place to live in. "The lesser folk are there equal with the great folk," and Panbesa writes that its maidens were in "holiday attire every day," with locks "redolent of perfumed oil."

What Will Probably Be the Story of the Veteran of the War with Spain.

"Yes, sir," said the veteran, according to the Washington Times, "that was way back in 1898. On the glorious 3d of July we were lying in front of Santiago and the bullets were just—"

"John!" screamed his wife, "Dewey's playing with your razor."

"Yes, sir, as I said, the bullets were just a-popping like rain, I was flat on my—"

"John," said the voice from the inner room, "Schley won't leave the cat be."

"I was flat on my face," resumed the veteran, "when I saw one of our boys drop over, and—"

"John, Shafter has run outdoors."

"As I said, I saw him drop with four holes in his forehead, and would you believe—"

"John, won't you whip Sampson for being naughty?"

"Would you believe it, sir, before he died he asked me for a—"

"John, please come to Hobson, he won't be quiet."

"Yes, sir, he asked for a chew of tobacco. But before I could get it for him a shell struck—"

"John, Miles is beating Olympia."

"Oh! drat them children. Wait a moment, sir, and I'll finish the story."

Decrease of Smallpox in Europe.

An eminent Prussian statistician—Sussmilch—estimated in the time of Frederick I. of Prussia that about one-twelfth of the population of Europe died of smallpox, and that nearly everybody had the disease. To-day hardly one person in 100,000 has it. Since in regions where vaccination has not been introduced the disease is as virulent and deadly as ever, it is a fair inference that vaccination has made the difference.

LITTLE QUEEN'S DAILY LIFE.

Taking It as an Example, Holland Is No Place for Idlers—The Work of Royalty.

"But it is not only the languages which she studied," says Prof. J. H. Gore on the life of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, in Ladies' Home Journal; "there were literature, science, music and all the subjects that demand the attention of a person seeking the highest culture. She rose at seven o'clock, had breakfast at eight, and work began at nine. Her general education had been intrusted to Dr. Salverda de Grave, while the court chaplain gave her religious instruction, and special masters were called in for lessons along their chosen lines of work. Those who taught must be in the room assigned a few minutes before the hour. On the stroke of the clock she entered, and at once began the recitation in hand. If the lesson were not finished at the end of the hour, she rose, bade the teacher good-morning and withdrew. Thus lesson followed lesson until half-past eleven, when recreation came. The queen mother exerted herself to make the recess hours enjoyable, so that study might me resumed with the minimum of reluctance. On rainy days when the usual drive cannot be taken, the mother and daughter sit together for a chat, but their fingers are not idle; they deftly knit caps and mittens for Christmas gifts."

Wore Church and Theater Hat.

It was curious at Broken Hill, says the Snyder Bulletin, the other Sunday to see a priest standing at the altar steps thanking members of the "French Maid" company for singing in the choir and recommending his congregation to go and see the show. But, after all, why not?

It is computed that about 200,000 pedestrians and 20,000 vehicles cross London bridge every day. The incessant traffic across the bridge reduces to powder about 25 cubic feet of granite every year.

Anger is an Unreality of War, says Capt. Lee of the Royal Artillery.

Often during the day the well-known expression "A shot fired in anger" recurred to my mind, and it seemed strangely inapposite. I saw many thousand shots fired during the campaign but not one "in anger." Most men were anxious, many were excited, and not a few afraid, but however hard the fight or however great the losses they never seemed to be angry—that is with the enemy—even when their best friends were killed. Anger, in the popular sense, is one of the unrealities of war.—From "The Regulars at El Caney" by Capt. A. H. Lee, R. A., British Naval Attache, in the October Scribner's.

S. H. Oaks, of Hudson, met with a fatal accident Friday evening. He was leading a team of horses to the barn and stumbled over some object. The horses reared and plunged upon him, breaking two ribs and causing other injuries which resulted in his death Saturday morning.

Geo. Woodworth, of South Medina, had an old horse which he valued highly. He hitched him to a machine corn cutter, however, and in some way the animal got tangled up and cut all his legs so badly that it was found necessary to kill him in order to stop his suffering.—Hudson Post.

Tom Cone comes to the front with a freak of nature in the shape of a hen which is looking after the wants of a cast off puppy. The hen singularly enough treated the dog as one of her chickens, finding it alone, and the puppy evidently grateful for small favors, accepted her fostering care and now trots around with the other chickens as contentedly as if it were its nature to do so. People do not know which is the strangest—the hen adopting the dog, or the dog allowing himself to become a chicken.—Hudson Gazette.

A clever swindling scheme is being worked by a pair of smart fellows in various parts of the country. One goes through the country on a bicycle and when he strikes a town he claims to be hard up and offers to sell the wheel cheap to get some money. The boys admire bicycles and bite readily, paying a small price for a first class wheel. After a few days the other sharper turns up and claims to be looking for a man who stole a wheel. He describes it well, giving the number, and the owner has to part with it. The sharpers raise from $20 to $40 a trip and then start for greener fields.—Ann Arbor Courier.

Eddie Haschle, the 14 year old son of George Haschle, of Manchester, was killed early Saturday afternoon. A party of boys, consisting of David Christ, Charlie Stoats and Eddie Haschle were out hunting together. Soon after noon they stopped to rest on the fence near Isaac Hall's, south of the village. When they started to go Eddie grabbed hold of the muzzle of Stoat's gun and it was immediately discharged into his right side. He was carried to Hall's house and a physician was summoned, but the lad died in about twenty minutes before the physician could arrive. He realized from the first that he was fatally shot, and his last words were "Good bye Dave and tell father the same."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Oct. 3rd, 1898.

Nothing startling and little that was interesting has yet occurred in connection with the investigation of the war, started a week ago, but something may be turned up during the coming week, as Generals Fitzhugh Lee and Joe Wheeler are among the witnesses who have been invited to testify. Although several editors have been asked by the Commission to furnish the names of witnesses willing to testify to statements made in their papers, none have yet done so, although an attache of a New York paper has filed a long statement concerning Wykoff. There is some objection because the Commission decided to allow only representatives of the press associations to be present while testimony is being taken, but it is confined to those representing papers not served by either of the press associations. It must be perfectly plain to anybody who will think a moment that the army of Washington correspondents could not be admitted, unless the Commission conducted the investigation in one of the largest halls in town. No one need fear that any important evidence taken by the Commission will fail to get publicity.

Secretary Hay held his first reception to the diplomatic corps today in the diplomatic room, in the Department of State. It was attended by representatives of all the countries with which we maintain diplomatic relations, although several of the embassys were represented by subordinates, owing to the absence of the ambassadors—the French and German ambassadors are in Europe.

Senator Hanna's statement in a published interview that the United States would not possibly consent to allowing the Spanish government to retain control of any portion of the Philippine Islands, has attracted much attention in Washington, where it is generally regarded as a statement of the president's position, and as an indication of the nature of the instructions given our peace commissioners.

Among the apparent certainties of the coming session of congress, is that action will be asked, in the president's message upon important recommendations, which are to be made in the annual reports of the secretaries of the navy and of war, but whether congress will comply cannot even be guessed at until the exact nature of the recommendations become known. All that is known at this time is that they will include a large increase in the regular army, the increase to be used outside of the United States proper, and a number of changes in present methods, which experience in the war with Spain has shown to be faulty in one way or another. Gen Miles will also make some recommendations in his annual report, one of which will consist of a plan for the reorganization of the regular army.

The Department of State has received a communication from the U. S. Consul, at Chemitz, Germany, that is important to American growers of apples, suitable for the German market. It says: "This is a good year to send American fruits, especially apples, to this empire. Europe's fruit crop is anything but good. If our merchants will not repeat the folly of former years, by sending poor fruit that decays easily, they can command these markets for years, against all efforts to dislodge them. If Baldwins, Greenings, Russets, and other hardy winter apples are sent, the results will not remain doubtful."

The success of Gen. Wood, late Col. of the Rough Riders, in administering the the affairs of Santiago, has resulted in the abandonment of the idea of appointing a military Gov. General for Cuba. According to present plans, which are subject to further change, the island will be divided into military districts, just as the army of occupation takes possession, and the commander of each district will be held to a strict accountability for affairs within his jurisdiction. The advance guard of the army of occupation is likely to be on Cuban soil inside of three weeks, and the entire force intended to be sent is expected to be on the island by the first of December. The command of the Havana district will be the most important under this plan. Sometime ago it was understood—some say postively promised—that the command would fall to Gen. Fitz Lee but since Gen. Lee was summoned to Washington last week, there has been hints that it may go to a regular army officer, probally Maj. Gen. Wade.

The Navy Department finds itself in a rather peculiar situation. So many officers of the Navy earned promotion by gallant conduct during the war that there is a probability that very few of them will get promotion, for the very simple reason that there are not enough positions to promote them to. Secretary Long will ask authority from Congress to give a gold medal and an increase of ten per cent in pay to officers in lieu of promotion, and the idea now exist that Congress will accept that solution of the problem. Some officers, who have already been named for promotion, have expressed their willingness to give up the promotion and take the gold medal and an increase of pay.

Dr. William Elhot Griffis was the Outlook's representative at the ceremonies and festivities which accompanied the enthroning of the young queen of Holland. In the October Magazine Number of the Outlook, Dr. Griffis describes the ceremonies in an extremely readable way. He was well known to the Dutch authorities as the most eminent American historian of Holland, and the facilities given him for observation were unusual. As a result he writes with close knowledge of many things which have not been described in the ordinary newspaper letters. The article is fully illustrated with portraits and with pictures of the royal procession, and also of the curious and interesting historical and allegorical procession which took place after the inauguration. UNDER A NEW FLAG.

Citizens of Puerto Rico Gratified at Changed Conditions.

HOISTING OF THE FLAG IN PONCE.

The Alcalde Speaks for His People—Last Page of Spanish History in the Island Is Written—Ceremony in San Juan.

Ponce, Puerto Rico, Oct. 19.—Tuesday's celebrations in connection with the formal surrender of the island of Puerto Rico were, as had been expected, most enthusiastic. After the parade the bands and various trade organizations went to Gen. Henry's headquarters to be introduced to him. Gen. Henry, in the course of a brief speech, said:

"Alcalde and Citizens: To-day the flag of the United States floats as an emblem of undisputed authority over the island of Puerto Rico, giving promise of protection of life, of liberty, prosperity and the right to worship God in accordance with the dictates of conscience. The 46 states represented by the stars emblazoned on the blue field of that flag unite in vouchsafing to you prosperity and protection as citizens of the American union. Your future destiny rests largely with yourselves. Respect the rights of each other. Do not abuse the government which accords opportunities to the individual for advancement. Political animosities must be forgotten in unity and in the recognition of common interests. I congratulate you all in beginning your public life under new auspices, free from governmental oppression and with liberty to advance your own country's interests by your united efforts."

The alcalde replied in part as follows:

"To-day destiny has written the last page of Spanish dominion in Puerto Rico and the prologue to the entrance of the noble American republic, whose flag is a sign of a new era. We hope to see another star symbolic of our prosperity and our membership of the great republic of states. Puerto Rico has not accepted American dominion on account of force. Therefore we came willingly and freely, hoping, hand in hand, with the greatest of all republics, to advance in civilization and progress, and to become part of the republic to which we pledge our faith forever."

No Disorder.

San Juan, De Puerto Rico, Oct. 19.—Promptly at noon Tuesday the American flag was raised over San Juan. The ceremony was quiet and dignified, unmarred by disorder of any kind. The Eleventh regular infantry with two batteries of the Fifth artillery landed Tuesday morning. The latter proceeded to the forts, while the infantry lined up on the docks. It was a holiday for San Juan, and there were many people in the streets. Rear Admiral Schley and Gen. Gordon, accompanied by their staffs, proceeded to the palace in carriages. The Eleventh infantry regiment and band, with troop H, of the Sixth United States cavalry, then marched through the streets and formed in the square opposite the palace.

Old Glory Unfurled.

At 11:40 a. m. Gen. Brooke, Admiral Schley and Gen. Gordon, the United States evacuation commissioners, came out of the palace with many naval officers and formed on the right side of the square. The streets behind the soldiers were thronged with townspeople, who stood waiting in dead silence. At last the city clock struck the hour of 12 and the crowds, almost breathless and with eyes fixed upon the flagpole, watched for developments. At the sound of the first gun from Fort Morro, Maj. Dean and Lieut. Castle, of Gen. Brooke's staff, hoisted the stars and stripes, while the band played the "Star Spangled Banner." All heads were bared and the crowds cheered. Fort Morro, Fort San Cristobal and the United States revenue cutter Manning, lying in the harbor, fired 21 guns each.

Senor Munoz Rivera, who was president of the recent autonomist council of secretaries, and other officials of the late insular government, were present at the proceedings. Congratulations and handshaking among the American officers followed. Ensign King hoisted the stars and stripes of the intendencia, but all other flags on the various public buildings were hoisted by military officers. Simultaneously with the raising of the flag over the captain-general's palace, many others were hoisted in different parts of the city.

The work of the United States evacuation commission is now over and all the reports will be forwarded to Washington on Thursday next. The labors of both parties have terminated with honors for all concerned. The American commissioners worked without the least delay and in the most thorough and effective manner.

Political Future of the People.

Washington, Oct. 19.—In view of the fact that at noon Tuesday, with the acquisition of Puerto Rico by the United States, about 800,000 inhabitants of that island lost their Spanish citizenship, the question as to what shall become of these people politically becomes of importance. Madrid advices report that leading citizens in Puerto Rico have already taken steps to become naturalized as United States citizens. This is an error, for existing law provided no way in which this change of citizenship can be effected by the residents of the island. There is no United States court there before which a declaration of intention can be filed, and, in fact, no machinery at all which can be put in motion to change citizenship. Inquiry into this subject at the state department discloses the fact that it has been usual to provide for a bodily transfer of the citizenship of people conditioned as those in Puerto Rico in the treaty of peace which terminates a war. It may be prudent for the commission at Paris to avoid any reference to Puerto Rico again, in which case congress will be called upon by the president to confer citizenship upon the Puerto Ricans in the same act as that which must be passed to provide a stable form of govern-

Millionaire Chapin Willing to Spend Double the Amount of the Verdict Secured Against Him.

Niles, Oct. 14.—Millionaire H. A. Chapin will carry the damage suit of Ruth I. Mr. Chapin thinks the damage suit is the result of spitework, in which various citizens of Niles were interested, and on this account he has abandoned a palatial mansion here and moved to Chicago. Mr. Chapin is in very feeble health, and his condition is very serious.

Season Opens Too Early.

Lansing, Oct. 15.—It seems to be the general opinion among sportsmen that October 1, the date set by the present law, is too early for the opening of the quail shooting season, and that the date should be changed to November 1. Hunters who have been out since the first of this month have found quail still on their nests, and many half-grown quail are seen.

Decatur, Oct. 14.—Nathan Clark, a resident of this village for 50 years, is dead, aged 79 years. He was one of the oldest masons in this vicinity, being for more than 50 years a member of Lawrence Blue lodge and one of the organizers of the chapter. Mr. Clark was a prominent politician, and for many years marshal of this village.

Reward Offered.

Jackson, Oct. 14.—Warden Chamberlain, of the state prison, offers $50 reward of the capture of Isaac Ellsworth, the prisoner who cut a hole through the stone ceiling, then got to the roof and escaped. Ellsworth is described as weighing 140 pounds, five feet six inches in height, red hair, smooth face florid complexion.

Was Put Off the Train.

Detroit, Oct. 15.—Jacob Wallace is suing the Detroit, Ypsilanti & Ann Arbor Railway company for $5,000 damages. Wallace says he was given a life pass by the old company in lieu of the company occupying certain la belonging to Wallace, the new company refused to honor the pass and ejected Wallace from its cars.

Visited Old Haunts.

Ann Arbor, Oct. 14. — President Charles Kendall Adams, of Wisconsin university, dropped off here on his way back from the east. His visit was unofficial, and he simply stayed here to visit the scene of his undergraduate labors and look over the new law building. He was entertained by President Angell.

Will Employ 400 Hands.

Kalamazoo, Oct. 14.—The Michigan Buggy company will at once enlarge its plant here by erecting a five-story structure 210 feet long by 50 feet wide. It will employ 400 hands, and have an annual output of 20,000 vehicles. It is a valuable addition to the city's industries.

Gathering Evidence.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 19.—Certificates of the election and inauguration of Gov. Tanner were obtained of the secretary of state Tuesday by a representative of the Chicago-Virden Coal company, and it is supposed they will be used in injunction proceedings against Gov. Tanner for his interference with the unloading of negro miners at Virden.

Tobacco Combine Off.

New York, Oct. 19.—The much-talked-of combination of the plug tobacco manufacturers of the country under the protection of the American Tobacco company is off. The Continental Tobacco company, which was to take over the unprofitable plug tobacco factories of the trust and harmonize the trade, will not be formed.

May Be Punished.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Lieut. Col. O'Brien Moore, of the Second West Virginia volunteers, is slated for considerable trouble before he hears the last of the spread-eagle punishment which under his orders was inflicted upon several members of his regiment at Camp Meade, Pennsylvania.

Dubuque, Ia., Oct. 19. — A report comes from Cascade, Dubuque county, that Bartley and Thomas Murphy were terribly tortured by robbers in an effort to make them reveal the hiding place of money. The story is that the flesh was almost burned from their feet, they were stabbed with sharp-pointed sticks and dragged about the house. The robbers were masked. There is no clew. The Murphys did not give up the secret.

Ten Millon Wheelmen.

It is stated by competent authority that there are ten million people in America who are bicycle riders. Probably each one gets an average of one hurt in a season, and that is just when Henry & Johnson's Arnica & Oil Liniment gets in its good work. Nothing has ever been made that will cure a bruise, cut or sprain so quickly. Also remove pimples, sunburn, tan, or freckles. Clean and nice to use. Take it with you. Costs 25 cents per bottle. Three times as much in a 50 cent bottle. We sell it and guarantee it to give satisaction or money refunded.

Her Health Restored

THE misery of sleeplessness can only be realized by those who have experienced it. Nervousness, sleeplessness, headaches, neuralgia and that miserable feeling of unrest, can surely be cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. So certain is Dr. Miles of this fact that all druggists are authorized to refund price paid for the first bottle tried, providing it does not benefit.

Mrs. Henry Bruns, wife of the well known blacksmith at Grand Junction, Iowa, says: "I was troubled with sleeplessness, nervousness, headache and irregular menstruation; suffering untold misery for years. I used various advertised remedies for female complaints besides being under the care of local physicians, without help. I noticed in Dr. Miles' advertisement the testimonial of a lady cured of ailments similar to mine, and I shall never cease to thank that lady. Her testimonial induced me to use Dr. Miles' Nervine and Nerve and Liver Pills, which restored me to health. I cannot say enough for Dr. Miles' Remedies."

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on diseases of the heart and nerves free. Address,

The Detroit Tribune says Lieut Harry U. Kies, of Clinton, attached to Co. C, 31st Michigan volunteers, writes an interesting letter from Camp Poland, in which he describes the filthy conditions which prevailed at Camp Thomas. He says the soldiers say they would rather face Mauser bullets or h—l rather than go back. The ladies of Knoxville have been very kind to the sick, bringing them delicacies, fruits, flowers, etc.

The Coldwater Reporter of Saturday thus philosophises: An immense flock of crows passed over the city to-day, flying in a southerly direction; to get any idea of the number would be a difficult matter, but some idea of the number may be gained from the fact that north and south, as far as they were visible, the flock extended, and for an hour were passing over. Evidently last night's frost was too much for them and they simply resolved to move out. According to old superstitions we must now look for cold weather. In this respect the birds are above the average run of poor mortals, who must stay in Michigan and freeze throughout the long winter.

CHEERED BY THOUSANDS.

President McKinley Receives a Hearty Welcome Upon His Arrival in St. Louis, Mo.

SPENDS A BUSY DAY IN THE BIG CITY.

An Informal Reception Given at the Southern Hotel—Crowds of People Line the Throughfares—Speaks at the Merchants' Exchange and at the Exposition Building.

St. Louis, Oct. 15.—President McKinley yesterday was the guest of St. Louis, the city in which, two years ago, he received the nomination to his present high office. He was met by the cheers of thousands of people lining both sides of all the thoroughfares through which he passed. At the Southern hotel, where he stopped, an informal reception was given, at noon he addressed a large crowd on the floor of the Merchants' exchange and at the exposition building in the evening the president spoke as follows:

The President's Address.

"My Fellow Citizens: My former visits to St. Louis are full of pleasant memories. My first was in 1888, and then again in 1892, both of which afforded me an opportunity of becoming acquainted with your people and of observing the substantial character of your enterprising city. I omitted my quadriennial visit in 1896 for reasons which were obvious to you and have always been a thankful that my presence seemed to have created no prejudice in your minds.

"I remember on the occasion of a former visit, in company with Gov. Francis and other citizens, to have witnessed the assembled pupils of the schools of the city at your great fair. It was an inspiring sight, and it has never been effaced from recollection. As I looked into the thousands of young faces of the boys and the girls, preparing themselves for citizenship, I had my faith confirmed in the stability of our institutions. To the youth of the country trained in the schools which happily are open to all, must we look to carry forward the fabric of government. It is fortunate for us that our republic appeals to the best and noblest aspirations of its citizens and makes all things possible to the worthy and industrious youth. The personal interest and participation of our citizenship in the conduct of the government makes the condition always an absorbing and interesting one.

Our Credit of the Best.

"It is a matter of great gratification to the people of the United States to know that the national credit was never better than now; that for the first time in the country's history the government is floating a three per cent. bond, every dollar of which was sold at par and are now at a premium of five cents on the dollar, and that this profit has gone to the people. The loan was a popular one, and it has been a source of much satisfaction that the people with their surplus savings were able to buy the bonds. It is an interesting fact that while we offered but $200,000,000 of bonds for sale, over $1,400,000,000 were subscribed by the people of the country and by the terms of sale no one was able to receive bonds in excess of $5,000. It is not without significance, too, that the government has not been required since 1896 to borrow any money for its current obligations until the war with Spain, while its available balance October 1, 1898, was upwards of $307,000,000, of which sum over $243,000,000 was in gold.

Impressed All Nations.

"Nothing more impressed the nations of the world than the appropriation of a large national defense fund, which the treasury was able to pay from its balances without resort to a loan. While the credit and finances of the government have improved, the business conditions of the people have also happily improved. Both government and citizen have shared in the general prosperity. The money circulation of the country was larger on the first of July, 1898, than it has ever been, and there has been no depreciation of the value of our money. The people have borne the additional taxation made necessary by the war with the same degree of patriotism that characterized the soldier who enlisted to fight the country's battles.

One Result of the War.

"We have not only prospered in every material sense, but we have established a sentiment of good feeling and a spirit of brotherhood such as the nation has not enjoyed since the earlier years of its history. Not since the beginning of the agitation of the question of slavery have there been such a common bond in name and purpose; such genuine affection; such a unity of the sections; such obliteration of party and geographical divisions. National pride has been again enthroned; national patriotism has been restored; the national union cemented closer and stronger, the love for the old flag enshrined in all hearts. North and south have mingled their best blood in a common cause, and to-day rejoice in a common victory.

Restored Union Must be Guarded.

"We must guard this restored union with zealous and sacred care, and, while awaiting the settlements of the war and meeting the problems which will follow, we must stand as one man, not in the spirit of party, and united in a common effort for that which will give to the nation its widest influence in its sphere of activity and usefulness to which the war has assigned it. Let nothing distract us; let no discordant voice intrude to embarrass us in the solution of the mighty problems which involved such vast consequences to ourselves and posterity. Let us remember that God bestows upon no nation supreme opportunity which is not ready to respond to the call of supreme duty."

Leaves for Chicago.

The address of the president was received by his 10,000 auditors with the wildest cheers and at its conclusion the demonstration was simply indescribable. For a short time the president then viewed the sights of the St. Louis exposition, after which he left for Chicago.

Arrives in Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—The president of the United States arrived in Chicago over the Illinois Central Saturday night at 9:20 and will be the central figure in the city's peace jubilee this week. He said just before leaving the train: "Throughout the journey I have been deeply moved by the patriotism of the people, and delighted with the evidences of their prosperity."

Rests During Sunday.

The president rested during a great part of the day at the residence of Capt. McWilliams, his relative, where he is being entertained. For a short time in the afternoon he was taken for a drive in company with Mrs. McKinley, Capt. McWilliams and Mrs. McWilliams.

Peace Jubilee Inaugurated.

The national peace jubilee was inaugurated Sunday night with union thanksgiving services at the Auditorium. The president attended and listened to addresses by a Jewish rabbi, a Roman Catholic priest, a Presbyterian clergyman and a noted colored orator. Applause for the president was terrific and at one time he was compelled to rise in his box and respond to the frantic cheering of the audience. The services, however, were of a religious character, and at times the solemn silence of the vast assemblage was much more eloquent than the wildest applause could be.

Given Cap and Gown.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—The University of Chicago on Monday conferred upon President William McKinley the degree of doctor of laws. Eight hundred people, as many as could be jammed into Kent theater, applauded to the echo as President Harper placed around the shoulders of the nation's executive the hood of purple—purple to indicate as Dr. Harper said in Latin that the recipient of the degree "had surpassed other men in rative genius and devoted toil."

A Public Reception.

At four o'clock he left the university grounds and was driven to the First regiment armory, where for some time he received the public informally. Great crowds of people thronged the streets, clamoring for admission to the armory, and only a part succeeded in meeting the president during the time scheduled for the reception. In the evening a dinner was tendered the president at the Auditorium hotel by President Harper, of the university.

Was a Michigan Boy.

Adrian, Oct. 14.—Mrs. D. Clark, of Palmyra township, received a telegram informing her that the remains of her son, Sergt. William Butler, would arrive here. Sergt. Butler had been in the regular army for several years and was killed in the recent Indian uprising in Minnesota.

Leave Army for School.

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 14.—Secretary Alger telegraphed that by special favor 21 men of company A, Thirty-first Michigan regiment, were granted honorable discharge in order that they may reenter the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Lost Part of Her Cargo.

Alpena, Oct. 15.—The steamer St. Joseph reached the harbor here in a waterlogged condition and with about 1,000 of her cedar ties lost overboard. She was picked up by a tug just as she was being driven on the beach.

A Boom for Marshall.

Marshall, Oct. 14.—The Royal Cycle works have elected new officers and the plant will be worked to its full capacity this winter, giving employment to 125 men. It will be a great boom for Marshall.

Died in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 17.—Richard F. Lockton, of company I, Thirty-fifth Michigan volunteers, home Marshall, Mich., died Sunday night in the Pennsylvania hospital of typhoid fever.

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired, any tune or words. The so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is adapted to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce your own voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly reawakens new interest and its charm is ever present. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

However seats were improvised and all were finally accommodated. Considerable interest was manifested in the altar service at the close of the sermon.

Prof. and Mrs. Coppins are firm believers in training children in patriotism and in teaching them to love and honor old glory. This insignia of our country's greatness may be seen every school day, as it should be, flying at the top of the flag pole on the school grounds. The teachers and scholars also celebrated LaFayette day on Wednesday with an appropriate program.

IN OLDEN TIMES

Many Things were Different.—Now-a days the public profit by experience.

When the striped pole or sign which now indicates a barber shop was employed to let the public know where cupping or blood-letting was professionally performed, close shaves were of daily occurrence, not the easy removal of the hirsute or hairy adornment of the head and face, but close shaves from entering eternity. More than one unfortunate entered the barber surgeon's doorway to leave it a corpse or so weak that weeks were required to get the victim of malpractice on his feet. Blood-letting was used for everything from a heartache to a corn, and a pain in the loins was invariably treated with two incisions, one on each side of the spine. Like plasters and liniments, these helped from the counter irritation they created, and we may presume that had Mr. Calvin Wilson, proprietor of the leading shaving parlor of Niles, Mich., lived in the time of George III. of England, in place of taking the course he did a short time ago with his back, blood-letting would have been resorted to. Read how he treated his trouble:

Mr. Wilson says: "My occupation has very likely much to do with the cause of my backache from which I have suffered considerably for a number of years. Standing on one's feet some days 18 hours is hard on the best of backs, but when you have pain across the loins, with lameness and soreness, everytime you move the muscles of the arm, long, long before your daily task is over you often wish you could go to sleep. I tried everything to better my condition but was unsuccessful until I used three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The relief they brought to a man who has worked hard all his life and is now past the three score and ten is much easier to appreciate than to describe in words. Doan's Kidney Pills perform what they promise."

FARM & GARDEN.

PROPER CARE OF HAY.

How to Build a Movable Roof for the Haystack Which Assures Absolute Protection.

Few understand the art of stacking so that rain will not get into the center. One great enemy to keeping hay is the wind, especially in Kansas. Many times the farmer gets his hay and grain stacked up in good condition, and along comes a gust of wind and all of his labor is swept away, as far as the keeping qualities of his stack are concerned. Enough hay goes to waste every year on many farms to pay for lumber to cover it. In Illinois, years ago, stacks of hay were roofed with three-eighths or five-eighths inch ceiling. They were hip-roofed, making them as solid as light material could make them; then to hold them in place, four four by four inch posts were set in the ground 14 feet high, with four plates at the top to hold the posts in position and keep them plumb. The roof was placed in position before the posts were set up, having the corners at the eave ends of the roof set so as to permit the roof to slide up or down on or between the posts. Holes were bored in the posts to put in pins to hold the roof up. When it is time to begin stacking, fasten the roof at the top of the posts and begin the stack between the posts. Build to a finish, or in case there is not enough hay cut, put in what there is, stopping work on the stack for any length of time, take out the pins and lower the roof down upon the hay, leaving the hay level, or nearly so. As the stack settles, the roof will follow the hay down and protect it from rain and wind.—W. H. Doane, in Farm and Home.

FACTS ABOUT FLOURINE.

It Contains Very Little Protein and Is Deficient in Bone-Forming Constituents.

Prof. Snyder, of the Minnesota experiment station, has recently made a chemical analysis of flourine, the by-product of the glucose mills that is now being used as an adulterant of wheat flour. His report, which appears in the Northwestern Miller, is not in accord with the claims which have been made for this product, especially in the important feature of nutritive value. Analysis shows the flourine contains so little protein that a man would have to eat 150 pounds of it in order to get enough protein to enable him to do a day's work. It is deficient in bone-forming constituents and fat as well, and in fact contains little of food value except starch. But still worse, it contains sulphate of soda and sulphuric acid enough to make it injurious to health. Is it any wonder that European consumers of American flour are regarding it with suspicion when there is possibility of it containing such a worthless—and worse than worthless—substance? Is it strange that European governments, which represent people who dare not waste a penny even for bread, are on the alert to protect their people against such an imposition as flour adulterated with flourine? Some means should be found of preventing the exportation of adulterated flour to foreign markets, and also of preventing its sale to our own people as pure wheat flour.—National Stockman.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Never hitch a horse to a tree if you think anything of the tree.

Spray the cucumber vines with paris green to get rid of the bugs.

Pour hot water into the nest of ants, or use bisulphide of carbon.

Cultivate, cultivate, and then cultivate, if you would discount drought.

Don't let your stock get into the public road. It is not neighborly.

It is claimed that one good crop of hemp will destroy Canadian thistles.

Whatever the farmer has to sell now, he can get a good price for. The trouble is that his wheat, etc., is out of his hands, as a rule.

Buy a good harness, if you buy, but that does not mean that you should pay an exorbitant price for it. First class harness can be bought cheap.

Every farm should have its workshop and the means to halfsole boots, and do about everything that is needed in repairing things. It will save lots of money.

If you try to force a calf to learn to drink, you will have a circus. Gently get the calf to the pail, gently induce it to touch the milk, put two fingers in its mouth, and after a few times it will drink.—Western Plowman.

Round Tiles Are Best.

A round tile with a curved bottom can be washed clean with comparatively small amount of water. It is, therefore, much less likely to be clogged with dirt than a horseshoe tile which sits flat on the ground, with the ground itself for a bottom. In a wet time the horseshoe tile may sink in the soil, though it will not do this if it is put down deeply enough so that no frost can ever get down to it. To keep it below the frost line is, in fact, the best security for a drain, whether made of flat or round tile, or of stone.

RIDGEWAY.

Mrs. J. W. Sherman is on the sick list at present.

On the 13th inst., a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Lafayette Pocklington.

Woman's Mysterious Ills.

Explanation of their nature by Dr. Hartman, who tells how to cure them.

YOUNG women are constantly puzzled about their health. Indeed female troubles puzzle all women. Older women have experience, but few possess knowledge of the subject. The periodical suffering is painful. It is accompanied by many varying sensations that distress. How much of this is necessary is a matter of guesswork. The whole question is shrouded in professional mystery.

Dr. Hartman's book for women, called "Health and Beauty," treats these matters with delicacy, and at the same time with clearness. Write to the Pe-ru-na Medicine Company, Columbus, O., for it: it is mailed free. It is a practical printed talk to women. Dr. Hartman defines women's diseases as catarrh and tells how Pe-ru-na cures them.

Mrs. C. C. Naeve, 386 Morrison St., Portland, Ore., writes as follows:

Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

DEAR SIRS:—"I began to take Pe-ru-na when I lived in Columbus, O., in 1887, and have used it and the Man-a-lin ever since whenever I needed medicine. I have never found an equal to Pe-ru-na for regulating the menses, and before I began to take it I was never regular and always had more or less pain. I had tried many different medicines before I saw Pe-ru-na but without success."

There is nothing mysterious about the action of Pe-ru-na. It is not a "cure-all," but it cures catarrh wherever located, and there may be catarrh in any organ of the body, as all are lined with mucous membrane.

Mrs. M. C. Mehl, 504 Walnut St., Columbia, Pa., says: "I have been troubled with catarrh and a soreness in my bowels for several years. I tried everything that was recommended. I tried Pe-ru-na and am happy to say that I am now entirely well."

Dr. Hartman's advice may be had without charge by any woman who will write for it. His book on Chronic Catarrh is also mailed free. It explains the danger of local treatment. All druggists sell Pe-ru-na.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

A dispatch from Lima says: "The sale of the Ohio Southern road was made here today by Special Master John T. Adams, of Waverly, and B. A. Rolopson of this city. The property was offered at 12 o'clock, noon, the upset price being two millions. There were a number of certified checks for $30,000 ready, but only one bid was made, and that was by Hon. Judson Harmon, of Cincinnati, who bid for W. A. Read, of New York, chairman of the first mortgage bondholders' committee and presented the deposit demanded. He bid the upset price and, as no other offers were made for the road, it was sold. The purchasers are W. A. Read, Thos. Demy, Simon Borg, Henry Sanford and E. S. Hooley. The sale is satisfactory to the Lima Northern people and the Brice crowd." The first mortgage bonds only cover a portion of the roadbed, or in other words, the road is in an incomplete condition. The second mortgage bonds cover all of the equipment and part of the right of way and the road bed. The second mortgage bonds are controlled by the Lima Northern people, and by these conditions it will be seen that unless the first mortgage bondholders come to an agreement with the second mortgage bondholders, the claims of the former will not be worth much. The first bondholders might stop the operation of the road, but they would not take possession and operate it. Neither would the second mortgage bondholders. The only way out of it was a compromise, and this has been effected. The first mortgage bondholders are New York bankers. All they care is to realize cash on their securities This they probably have done, which fact will give the Lima Northern control of the Ohio Southern. It has been a protracted fight, but the Lima Northern seems to have won.—Toledo Blade.

In speaking of the Ohio Southern sale, a railway official who is acquainted with the condition of the property, said to day: "You may rest assured that the sale was the result of a compromise. It could not be otherwise. The first mortgage bonds do not cover that part of the road which extends into Lima. On this part of the road, as I understand it, the second mortgage bonds are the first lien."

The Blade interviewed several railway officials on the subject, and all of them practically agreed with this statement. It is evident, as was stated in the Blade Saturday, that the only way out of the entanglement which has kept the road in the hands of a receiver so long, was a compromise between the first and second bondholders The first bondholders are not in position to foreclose without the consent of the second bond holders. As long as the Lima Northern did not have a line into Detroit the Lima Northern people, who control the seconds, were not disposed to come to reasonable terms, and for this reason the sale was postponed from time to time. When the Lima Northern gained an entrance into Detroit they grew anxious to get the property out of the court. Then the holders of the firsts grew independent They thought that they could get a fancy price for their securities. The Lima Northern retaliated by building into Columbus. Here they could make connection with some coal lines which do not run to Toledo, and thus be in position to let go of the Ohio Southern.

Finally, however, the first bondholders met the Lima Northern half way, and now there is not much doubt that when the Lima Northern and Ohio Southern are reorganized they will comprise one system.

An attempt will be made by the next legislature to revoke the charters of the Michigan Central and Lake Shore roads in Michigan. Governor Pingree, in conversation with the Blade yesterday, said that it will be done, but while his excellency is quite an important factor in the politics of the state, it is doubtful whether the legislature will take this action. The Lake Shore officials claim that the legislature cannot revoke the charter of the road unless it pays damages done the property. At any rate, there is prospect of another fight between the Pingree and the Vanderbilt roads in Michigan.

The fight grows out of the law passed by the legislature which forces the Michigan lines to issue family mileage books at 2 cents per mile. All of the roads excepting the Vanderbilt lines, have complied with the law. By virtue of the charters the Michigan Central and Lake Shore have maintained that they are exempt from this law. Further than this, the Vanderbilt lines have been sustained by the courts of Michigan.—Toledo Blade.

Art Lee, of the D. & L. N. sdiitor's office Lima, O., Sunfayed in Tecumseh.

R. C. Caples, recently appointed general passenger agent of the Lima Northern, is making his initial trip over the system. He proposes to bring the passenger service of the road up to the highest standard. On the first of the month a double daily service will be put on between Detroit and Columbus. These trains will be equipped with free parlor cars. This innovation, by the way, is apt to stir up considerable trouble among the other Ohio—Michigan lines. All of the other lines make a charge of from 25 to 50 cents extra for parlor cars.—Adrian Daily Times.

Supt. G. R. Haskell and Train Despatcher Gibbs went to Lima Wednesday and will take a trip over the Columbus division before returning to Tecumseh.

S. Gibbs, formerly train dispatcher for the D. T. & M. R. R. accepted a like position on the D. & L. N. R'y and commenced work Tuesday morning.

Mrs. P. H. Ryan, who was spending a few days at Gas City, Ind., returned to her home in Tecumseh last Saturday.

W. S. Cotterman, operator in the car accountant's office, has been on the sick list since Monday.

Waldo and Gilmore, train despatchers of the D. T. & M., have moved their families to Marshall.

The change of time on the D. & L. N. R. R. will not be made until about November 1st.

Frank Grant, roadmaster of the D. & L. N., was in Tecumseh Tuesday afternoon.

Auditor A. L. Richmond and General Supt. Hawkins were in town yesterday.

D. C. Corwin, foreman of bridges and buildings, was in Tecumseh Tuesday.

It is reported that 85 men will be given employment in the car shops.

J. J. Harmon, of the Tecumseh Gravel Co., spent Monday in Tecumseh.

A. R. Springer, of Toledo was in town over Sunday.

Hannibal Osborn.

Hannibal Osborn, who has been a sufferer of heart trouble for some time, died last Wednesday morning at the home of his son, J. Q. Osborn in Franklin.

He was born in Seneca county in the state of New York, May 4th, 1824, and came to Michigan in 1867, settling in Franklin. Ten years ago he moved to Tecumseh where he resided until last spring when he moved back to Franklin and made his home with his son. He leaves a wife and five children by a former wife who died in 1881.

Mr. Osborn was a consistant member of the Congregational church in Tipton. He was a man of strong character, honest and upright and was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him.

The funeral was held this afternoon from the residence.

THE CHURCHES.

At the M. E. church Sunday evening the pastor will preach on "Earning Wages to Put into a Rag with Holes."

Rev. Leslie Bower, of Portland, Mich., will preach in the Baptist church next Sunday both morning and evening.

The regular monthly meeting of the W. H. M. S. of the M. E. church will be held Wednesday afternoon Oct. 26, at 2 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Will Chiverall. See.

At the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning the pastor will preach on the subject, "The Golden Calf and the Dance." In the evening the pastor will give a sequel to the sermon of last Sunday night on Luther, the subject, "Loyola and the Jesuits." All are invited to each service.

"Fools, or The School of Experience," October 28th, by Thomas Dixon, Jr., who will open the Star Course on that date. Don't fail to hear him. Season tickets now on sale by canvassers at $1.50. Remember that such a high class of attractions were never before offered by the Course, only 25c each. You can't afford to miss them. See what is said of Thos. Dixon:

REV. F. H. KERFOOT, D. D.—Solomon said there is nothing new under the sun; but Solomon had not seen Dixon.

REV. SAM JONES—I know Mr. Dixon well. I have preached in his church and heard him preach. Before he is half through you will have to feel for your old pocket-knife to identify yourself with. He is a live wire.

BENJAMIN STAINBACK, Manager Memphis Auditorium—We had Dixon last night and Dixon had us. His great audience inspired him, and he delivered the grandest lecture ever uttered from the Auditorium platform. I want the refusal of him for next season. Put that down in your book and don't forget it.

NASHVILLE AMERICAN—Before the preliminary service was over at the Tabernacle yesterday afternoon, the vast auditorium was full of people, and Sumner street, for a full block in each direction, was thronged with two streams of humanity pouring toward the building to hear Rev. Thos. Dixon, Jr. At 2:45 it was necessary to shut and fasten the doors, as the Tabernacle was packed to suffocation, and there was a blockade from the door to Church street and another extending down to Broad.

Dr. Talmage's pulpit for years has been the Mecca of the stranger in New York. It is now the pulpit of Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., whose congregation leased the Academy of Music on the removal of the great Brooklyn preacher. This vast auditorium is now crowded every Sunday by even greater multitudes than once listened to Dr. Talmage.

The name and fame of the Rev. Thos. Dixon stands pre-eminently at the head of platform orators. He is the strongest attraction obtainable. It seems superfluous to say one word to eulogize this remarkable man. Suffice to say he has been secured by the Star Course committee to open the Course here on Friday, Oct. 28th.

Mr. Dixon is only one of the attractions of which there are six in the course, all first class, and season tickets are now offered at $1.50, only 25c each. No such list of attractions ever before offered here for the money. You are earnestly requested to show appreciation of the effort of the committee in securing such entertaining and instructive attraction by buying your season tickets at once. Don't delay. Reserved seats can be secured of J. H. Smith, for the season at 50c for the six entertainments.

Woman and Her Ways

THE GROCER'S IRONY.

He Hired a Dray to Deliver a Quarter of a Pound of Pepper to an Occasional Patron.

A certain well-to-do housekeeper in West Chester discovered one day recently that there wasn't a grain of pepper in the house, says the Philadelphia Record. She always had her groceries sent to her from a Philadelphia firm, but on occasions like this she was in the habit of patronizing a West Chester grocer whose store was near by. Therefore she condescended to call up the local grocer by telephone and place with him her order for a quarter of a pound of pepper, to be delivered at once. The grocer is a patient man, and he talked very politely over the telephone. Afterward, however, he swore; then he laughed. He laughed loud and long, and remarked to himself occasionally: "Good idea! That's rich!" About half an hour later the well-to-do housekeeper was somewhat surprised to see a great clumsy dray drive up before her door and back up to the curb. In the middle of the dray was a tiny package done up in yellow paper. The drayman, after taking particular care to get his huge wagon in proper position, adjusted the board from the tail-board to the house steps, and with a thick stanchion proceeded to slowly pry the tiny package off the dray. With infinite care he rolled it onto the step, the amazed housekeeper meanwhile watching the proceeding from the doorway. Then the drayman slowly presented the grocer's bill for the quarter-pound of pepper and drove off.

FOR EVENING WEAR.

The Simplest and at the Same Time the Most Attractive Gown That Could Be Designed.

Beautiful evening toilettes do not necessarily require expensive materials for their construction, for there are so many exceedingly cheap goods out of which they can be made that only the woman who "must have the best of everything" turns to the heavy silks, satins and velvets.

Nine yards of nun's veiling of any desired color, two yards of glace taffeta and 12 yards of beautiful striped ribbon about five inches wide can be made into a gown that would be fitting for a queen. At 25 cents a yard the nun's veiling would come to $2.25; at 50 cents a yard the glace taffeta would be one dollar, and 12 yards of striped ribbon at 15 cents and ten yards of silk cambric at 12½ cents a yard would amount to $3.05—thus making the whole outfit come to just a little over six dollars—a sum which would not pinch the average purse.

The skirt of the gown is made plain and trimmed with two ruffles of the glace taffeta and a double box-plaited ribbon. This double-plaited ruffle is one of the most popular skirt decorations and can easily be made by the directions so frequently given in this column.

The waist is very decollete and is trimmed round and round with three glace taffeta ruffles. There are no sleeves, simply four-inch straps of the striped ribbon finished with bows made in the form of some fall or win-

SMART MOCKING BIRD.

How a St. Louis Lady Taught Him to Sing "Yankee Doodle" and Other Tunes.

I once raised a "mocking-bird" that lived to be nine years old and seemed to be quite "one of the family," as he could call the names of the children.

I taught him to sing "Yankee Doodle," which could readily be recognized by anyone. The variety of his notes was truly wonderful.

A "mocker" must be taken from the nest, when too young to fly, and fed "by hand;" feeding frequently, and a little at a time of the following mixture: The yolk of a very hard boiled egg, mixed smoothly with twice its bulk of freshly boiled potato. This is the staple article of diet for both young and old, and must be prepared new each day. If left over it sours and is not good for the health of the bird. I also fed flies, grasshoppers and bugs, and as a special delicacy a big fat grub worm, or a spider, the last named being essential to the health of the bird, as I ascertained by observation.

In winter, when spiders were not to be found, we hunted over cellar and garrets for nests of spider's eggs, if our bird seemed to be "drooping," and they seemed to act as a tonic, like the spiders themselves.

In winter we utilized wormy nuts, and grubs found in rotten wood, also "meal worms" found in hidden nooks in gristmill. The bird relishes raw sweet apples, also bread and milk, must have a generous bath, and fresh water to drink, and cage must be cleaned every day.

They require care and attention, but give full return in their wealth of song. A stranger could scarcely sleep in our house unless we "blanketed" the bird cage, while we, being accustomed to the nightly serenade, did not mind it at all. My bird died of old age.

This summer a pair nested in an evergreen near the house, and while feeding their young developed fighting qualities unlooked for in a bird. A small cat was the object of their aversion, though we have several larger ones. They attacked the cat whenever and wherever seen if she left the house; they watched every door, and could see her through the screen and would alight close to the door and "scold." They would drive her into the house by swooping down upon her back, until she became apparently so "terrorized" as to be almost unable to crawl, could not mew and I believe would have soon died had I not gone to her rescue several times. They would alight on the porch and promenade in front of her, not a foot from her paws, not fearing her in the least, and such sharp, shrill scolding as they administered was almost more than even our human nerves could stand.

Their performance was considered wonderful by everyone who saw them. Not wishing to have another such experience I destroyed their nest as soon as it was empty; but they set to work to rebuild. I tore it down the second time, when they built in another tree still nearer the house and just above my reach.

The singer mysteriously disappeared soon after the female began "sitting," and as she had her hands full feeding her brood alone, had not much time to spend with the cat, who gave her a wide berth.

She succeeded in getting her young away in safety, and we have seen nothing of them since.—St. Louis Republic.

Renovating Velvet and Plush.

A simple method of cleaning velvet, velveteen and plush, is described in the Ladies' Home Journal by Emma M. Hooper. The rule applies to all three kinds of goods, as all have a pile which if flattened must be assisted to rise again. With the assistance of a stiff whisk broom, a pan of boiling water and an obliging friend who will brush up the nap as you hold the goods taut over the steam the wrong side to the water, these materials will look like new. This process removes wrinkles, brightens the color, and makes the crushed nap stay up when brushed against the grain, and will answer for black or colored pile fabrics. If the velvet has a grease spot on it remove it with French chalk before steaming. A sticky spot may be lightly touched with clean cold water be[illegible] the steaming process.

HER SUCCESSFUL RUSE

How a Feminine Bull-Fighter and Her Husband Won a Fortune.

By HEWETT DARRELL.

IN THE house of "El Chatto," ex-bull fighter of Madrid and present "Torero before the Mexican public," there was dire dismay, owing to the low state—the very low state—of the family exchequer. This sad state of affairs is common to many people among the members of the bull fighting fraternity, who are not esteemed now as they once were. This is, however, only in Mexico; whatever else may come and go in Spain, bull fighting is always with them.

This morning, the day before the bull fight honoring the fiesta of San Marcos, "El Chatto," needing some spare silver for the furbishing up of his costume, had turned out his pockets, with the assistance of Dona Lolita—who, of course was already fully informed as to their contents, being but a woman. Investigation revealed one big silver peso, one 50-cent piece, one ten-cent piece, and 14 copper centavos. Not enough to pay coach hire, even!

Carrambas! Here was a pretty mess; no wonder that "El Chatto" leisurely and calmly spoke every naughty and lurid word that came to his mind during the next half hour, the while Dona Lolita tranquilly drank her chocolate, and then lit a cigarette, her dimpled face very serious all the time, as though in deep cogitation.

At last, out of breath, "El Chatto" paused and glared about him, as though in search of some one to fight. Dona Lolita smiled at him sweetly, removing the cigarette from her pretty lips, as she murmured: "Have you finished, little Snub-Nose?"

A shrug of the shoulders was her husband's reply.

"Then listen, oh, most worthless husband, for I have a plan—a plan most magnificent; thereby we will make a fortune—sufficient for the voyage once more to Espana."

She stopped tantalizingly, and puffed at her cigarette, while "El Chatto" looked at her unbelievingly.

"This is how it is," she pursued, blowing a ring of smoke into her husband's face; "the empresario pay you little—very little—only 100 silver dollars—is it not so?"

"Si, that is all—the pigs!" growled the torero; "and after this there will be no fight until 'Holy week'—no more money!"

"Pues, then we will make more out of them—much more. But first, friend of my heart, will there go many ricos to this fight—the president with his wife, the De la Matas, and those other rich Espanoles?"

"Yes, all of them," replied "El Chatto," who was as yet mystified, not understanding the subtle workings of his wife's brain; "but, por el amor de Dios, what have they to do with that wonderful plan of yours?"

Dona Lolita smiled again, and playfully pulled her marido's nose. "They have much to do—much!" she whispered, seating herself on the arm of his chair and pulling his moody face down to hers. "Listen, marido mio; this is the plan! But cuidado that no one hears us!"

No one hears—not even ourselves—it is whisper, whisper, whisper; and finally a loud shout of delight from "El Chatto." It must be something good—what a shame we are not let into the secret!

The gloom clears away from the house of the matador; there continues rejoicing all that day. "El Chatto" and his pretty wife have a most joyous comida, and afterward lay their heads together on the subject of the morrow's fight and a special Spanish costume that Lolita is to wear—one of old Sevilla—all rose-pink and Spanish mantilla, with a pink rose in her blue-black hair, this latter being another of the mysteries; in Mexico few ladies ever wear the costume of old Spain—it is as much worn, but, passe, here as the patches and powder and hoops of the revolutionary days are in Anglo-Saxon lands. But out of an old box she drags the dress, and shakes and brushes and sews it until even the critical "Chatto" pronounces it "Muy bonita."

To-morrow seems such a long time in coming, but finally it is here—all balmy, blue sky, with never a white cloud to mar it; soft, warm breezes laden with the perfume of the roses and lilies that are just beginning to bloom, the violets over and done with for this year: the silvery pealing and chiming of the hundreds of bells that are vainly calling the faithful to prayer. Everyone is either in the great bull ring in Colon or getting there as fast as he or she can. It is the first fight for a month, and there will not be another one for yet a month to come.

On the cheap side—"the side of the sun"—white-garmented peons, with big sombreros, choke up every inch of space and shout and yell loudly during the performance. As for the shady side, it is well filled—with rich Spaniards at that—for which reason the heart of Dona Lolita rejoices; the more Spaniards, the more dinero. "Ojala, that there were nothing but Spaniards," she thinks.

She has purposely taken a seat just behind the first barrier of the bull ring—not seven feet above the ground, where her husband will kill his bull—"so that she can see him better," as she lisps to an admiring Mexican fighter who wishes her to go into one of the boxes.

Dona Lolita, in spite of that sweet, shy demureness of hers, has noted the effect of her costume on a la Espanola; she rejoices within herself, even though she is beginning to tremble a wee bit, and wishes that it were not yet time for her husband to kill the bull. She again measures the distance between herself and the ground; it is seven feet—quien sabe!

She is trembling from her dainty head down to her tiny, pink-bowed Spanish slippers all the time that "El Largo" is torturing the furious, pawing bull with his sharp banderillas.

The gate swings open at last, and "El Largo" still teases the bull as "El Chatto" moves forward slowly, and bows first to the president and then to the public. In spite of his magnificent silver and violet costume, the gold lace, the red bullion trimming, with capa of gold brocade, he looks deathly ill—his face is white and drawn, and under his eyes great black rings show, that extend almost half-way down his face. Everyone remarks it, and a foreigner who has looked keenly at the bull-fighter, says, sharply: "That fellow ought to drop out and go home; he's in no condition to fight!"

But "El Chatto" is game, if he is sick—perhaps the presence of his wife inspires him with fresh courage, for he unsheathes his bright, keen sword, nods briefly to "El Largo," who gets out of his way, smiles once at Lolita, who is, beneath her mantilla, far whiter than he; then makes a tantalizing movement at the bull.

That animal—one of the huge, fiery Andalusians that are the very terror of Mexican bull-fighters—comes on with a roar of fury, head swinging low to the ground, and the angry foam flying. "El Chatto" dodges, and places himself nearer the wall to meet the bull's return rush. On he comes again, with an angry bellow, and "El Chatto" shakes his sword playfully in the brute's face, as is the Spanish custom, six or seven fancy passes, and then the kill!

After all, no one can fight a bull as does the Spanish matador. At least, during "El Chatto's" splendid work of the next seven minutes, that is what the people think. All of them are on their feet, shrieking, some breathless with delight! Silver dollars, and hats, and flowers rain down into the ring, but "El Chatto" has not time to bow his thanks; he is too busy parrying the plunges of the Andalusian; "furiouser and furiouser," as Alice in Wonderland might say, the beast is making it quick work for the matador.

On her feet, as is everybody else, for that matter, Lolita is watching every motion, her heart beating in great leaps, and so excited and wrought up now that she has forgotten to feel afraid. * * *

Bull and matador are just underneath her, and twice her husband has glanced at her significantly; she is watching with her heart in her eyes. One pass of the sword before the bull's eyes; one leap over his back; one pass of the sword backward over the shoulder—now then, Dios help—a-h-h!

In the twinkling of an eye there goes up from the thousands of people a loud groan of horror, pity, terror—they are all on their feet, watching.

For all in a second it happens; the matador, suddenly reeling, after a fancy pass at the bull, has cast one agonized look up at his wife, and fallen prone on the ground. The bull does not see, for the furious impetus of his last charge has taken him several feet beyond the matador. At the latter's side, on the ground, is the bright sword, that now will not save him. The man was sick, unable to fight.

But before the people have well seen that, however, there is a quick leap and a flash; a slight childish figure is in the ring, her mantilla is cast back, the pink rose has fallen into the dust; her tiny, white hands have caught up the sword. As the bull swings madly forward, she meets him. He is an enormous beast, and to be on a line even with his shoulder she has to rise on tiptoe. She does it. Her face is white and calm as the brute rushes at her, lowering his head. She springs forward and upward; the sword sinks out of sight in the bleeding shoulder—no fancy passes for her!—and the bull topples over on his knees, the blood gushing out in torrents. He is dying—dead!

The mantilla is trampled into the dust, the pink rose is now a faded, reddened scrap, but the woman, her hands blood-stained and her face white as death, knows nothing about that. On her knees, sobbing like a baby, from over-wrought passion and nervousness, she is holding her husband's unconscious head in her trembling arms.

As for the populace, they have passed from horror-stricken silence and terror into hysterical shouts, screams, applause and even tears. Every woman in the audience is weeping copiously, every man is shricking and stamping and applauding at the top of his voice (in his heart envying the matador) as the girl, who has in some mysterious way revived her husband, rises to her feet, and the two stand together for a moment, bowing.

Then comes the exciting part of it. Out come purses and dollars, and even jewels from the rich ladies present, and masses of flowers. Amid shouts of "bravo!" down it all pours into the ring. As for the great banker, Franquillo, who is so excited that he can hardly move—down goes his footman with a message to "La Espanola!"

Not waiting to bow, or to thank the people, so overcome is she with her tremendous success, Dona Lolita flies from the ring, leaving "El Chatto" to bow, and place his hands over his heart, and bow again. It is all she can do to tremblingly thank the bearer of a check from the banker Franquillo, who has filled it out for $10,000. Bravo!

So that Dona Lolita's little plan worked well after all—so well that five days later she and her husband left for Spain, where, having added much more money to the banker's $10,000, they have now retired and are great people. And "El Chatto" says always that he owes his success to his esposa—which is not understood, very naturally, by the Spaniards of Spain.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Gen. Macias, recently Spanish captain general of Puerto Rico, has sailed from San Juan for Spain.

Troops from Camp Merriam to the number of 800 sailed from San Francisco on the steamer Senator for Manila.

The national government has paid in full the claim of Illinois for $250,000 for feeding and equipping the regiments that went into the volunteer service.

It was stated at the war department that troops would not be sent to the southern camps until after frost had made it certain that yellow fever would not be spread.

At the peace conference in Paris Judge Day presented the demands of the American commission in threatening words. He said that delay would no longer be tolerated, the Cuban debt would not be considered, and demanded the complete surrender of Puerto Rico.

Tragedy at Flint.

Flint, Oct. 18.—W. H. Murray, of Clinton, Ia., shot and killed his wife Harriet, an incurable inmate of Oakgrove asylum, and then killed himself. In Mr. Murray's pocket was found a letter in which he said that the only way to relieve his wife from her suffering was to kill her, and that as it was against the law to do so the only thing he could do was to shoot himself also.

Betrayed by His Shoes.

Allegan, Oct. 14.—Andrew Vanderburt, formerly employed by Dr. William Heasley, of Salem, was arrested, charged with stealing $300 in gold from Heasley. He confessed and the officers found $585 in his house. Van was tracked to the doctor's house by his peculiar shoes.

Found Stolen Goods.

Niles, Oct. 14.—Indiana officers found in a deserted farmhouse south of here a quantity of dry goods, clothing and other articles stolen from stores in South Bend. A gang has been at work there for some time breaking in stores, and the officers are hopeful of running the members down and arresting them.

Made a Rich Find.

Calumet, Oct. 14.—While excavating for a cellar on the property of Charles Stroiteon, on Traverse street, Larium, the workmen encountered a large mass of floating copper. It is thought more may be found in the same vicinity. The mass weighs nearly a ton.

POPPING SEAGULLS' NECKS.

An Ingenious Alabama Boy Describes What He Thinks Rare Sport.

"Say, I have been having a barrel of fun," said Willie Green, of Greenville, Ala. to a New Orleans Times-Democrat reporter.

"I have been popping seagull necks—popping them by the dozens, by the hundreds. Fine sport. Never saw anything like it in your life. Say, do you know whether the seagull is worth anything at all on the market for any purpose whatever? If it is, I can make a fortune without any outlay of capital at all, and at the same time have the greatest sport in the world."

Mr. Green, being interrogated more closely as to the nature of this possibly profitable industry of popping seagull necks, explained: "Well, you see, I have been down on the gulf on a lark. Have you ever noticed the seagull dart down for a fish? A shot from one of those big guns we read about does not dart with more terrific speed or hit the water with greater force. It occurred to me that this afforded a chance to get some of these boss fishermen and I tried the experiment, and it would have amazed you to see how it worked. I took a fish I had caught and fixed him to a couple of planks. The planks I weighted so that they would float just below the surface a short distance. Above the planks and almost on a level with the surface of the water I attached a fish so that it would have the appearance of swimming. Now, these foolish birds, seeing the fish and naturally expecting that, like other fish, it would make a lunge to get away, strike for it with a force greater than is sufficient to reach the fish where it stands. In each instance they struck my boards with such terrific force that they popped their necks. Ever try this? Well, the next time you are out on the gulf give it a trial. You will be amazed to see the number of gulls you can kill in the course of one evening."

MARRIAGE MADE DIFFICULT.

How the Laws of France Interpose Troublesome Impediments to Wedlock.

The Temps, which is not always serious, has got two beautiful stories to illustrate the difficulties of getting married in France, says Pall Mall Gazette. A gentleman arrived with his bride-elect to undergo the civil ceremony. "Where," asked the official, "is the certificate of your father's demise?" "My dear sir," replied the bridegroom, "there is my father, alive and well." "But," retorted the other, "your mother is dead, and she is returned in the lists as a widow." The bridegroom explained delicately that his mother had run away from his father and preferred to give herself out for a widow. "But," he said, desperately, "my father is certainly alive." "He has no right to be. Officially he is dead. I cannot marry you without a certificate of his demise."

Hard enough, one thinks. But the other case is still harder. It happened in Cayenne, where two convicts, employed as servants by the governor, got leave to marry. They went to the mairie, and the lady was asked if she was a spinster or a widow. "Widow," she said. "Well," said the official, "but I have not the certificate of your first husband's death." "Really," said the bride, "I thought it was not needed." "Why, it is an indispensable document." The lady smiled, and referred him to the record of her conviction. "You will perceive, sir, that I was sentenced for life for having poisoned my husband!" That would seem to be sufficient, in all conscience. Yet, as a matter of fact, their married happiness had to be postponed till the acte de deces could arrive from Paris.

KINDNESS TO A MULE.

A Humorously Inclined Young Officer's Experience Proved It to Be Useless.

The mule was undoubtedly a bad mule, but Lieut. Kellenberger, of battery G, First Ohio light artillery, said that his disposition had been ruined and his confidence in human nature destroyed by improper treatment, says the Cincinnati Enquirer.

"He had been mistreated," said Lieut. Kellenberger; "I will show you how this mule should be treated." Then the lieutenant, with the assistance of an orderly, saddled the mistreated mule in front of his own tent. The mule offered neither resistance nor protest. The lieutenant patted him on the neck.

"He needs kind but firm treatment," said he. Then Lieut. Kellenberger mounted. The mistreated mule danced three bars of a two-step, executed an individual hop, skip and jump with each leg and projected Lieut. Kellenberger into the air directly beneath a thorn tree.

"Catch that man-eating monster and beat him to death," said Lieut Kellenberger, as the hospital corps assisted him to his tent. Then several men came out of a company street and erected a tablet, reading thus: "Where Kelley Fell, May 28, 1898."

Arabs Value Water.

No one can travel among the Arabs without being struck by the importance attached to the water supply. Where a rich Englishman would bequeath money to founding a hospital or decorating a church, an Arab can think of no other channel for his charity than the construction of a fountain which will assure him the blessings of all future generations. The Arabs have a curious characteristic in common with horses and other animals. They prefer stagnant water, however bad in smell and appearance, to the most limpid running water, which, they assert, generally contains disagreeable medicinal properties.

GOV. ADAMS' RAILROAD PASS.

That Dignitary Had an Encounter with Revenue Stamps and Was Worsted.

"Gov. Adams' acquaintance with the conductors on the Rio Grande railroad saved him from paying fare or walking into Denver the other day from Sedalia," said a fellow passenger. He had entered the coach at the station and when the conductor came along produced the pass he carries all the time, says the Denver Times.

"'You do not have to attach revenue stamps to railroad passes,' ventured the collector of fares.

"'I know that,' retorted the chief executive of the state. 'What makes you suggest that I have attached stamps to my pass?'

"'Because you have done so,' replied the conductor.

"'I guess not,' answered the governor; 'I know better than that.'

"'Then look here. Who has had your pass?' and with this statement the conductor handed it back to the governor.

"The face of the pass was covered with revenue stamps. They were sticking to it, having been attached by the dampness gathered in a sweaty pocketbook.

"'The cigars are on me,' jocularly asserted the chief executive as he looked at the pasteboard.

"'It's all right, anyway,' said the conductor, 'because I know you and know that this is your pass and have its number. Were you a stranger, however, I could not accept it.'

"His excellency expressed gratification at the accommodating train employe and promised himself that he would soak the stamps off the face of the pass when he reached his home."

RED UNIFORMS HARD TO HIT.

It Has Been Proven a Fallacy That Scarlet Is Particularly Obtrusive.

Scarlet, it has always been supposed, was the worst color possible for the purposes of the battlefield, says the Army and Navy Gazette. It has been said so with such frequency, indeed, that nobody of late years has cared to dispute the fact. We owe it to some very practical experiments carried out in Germany that the question has now been put on a more satisfactory basis. A squad of ten men, two dressed in light gray, two in dark gray, two in scarlet, two in blue and two in green, were lately ordered to march across an open country. Their movements were closely watched. The first men to disappear from sight were those in light gray, immediately afterward the scarlet, then the dark gray and finally the blue and the green.

Here we have all well-worn theories upset. Experiments carried out on the rifle range showed that our national color gave the worst mark for the rifle. Twenty men, all good shots, were used for the purpose of the experiment. After they had fired a given number of rounds it was discovered that scarlet was far the most difficult color to hit. For every miss at the other colors there were three in favor of scarlet. We will not assert that these experiments were conclusive evidence in favor of our national color, but they certainly go a long way to justify its retention. There is much to be said in these days of quick-firing guns in favor of a uniform which is difficult to hit, and in this particular scarlet undoubtedly will hold its own against all other colors.

HUNGRY EUROPEANS.

In China Their Only Variation from Pork and Rice Is Rice and Pork.

There was a painful lack of variety in our food. Men dying of thirst spend their last hour in thinking of iced champagne, sherry cobblers, cocktails and draughts of beer, whiskies and sodas, dead horses' heads or whatever their particular beverage may be. We gastronomically fooled ourselves to the top of our bent. "I think," one would say, "when we get to the Hotel de Paris to-night we'll have a nice little French dinner of six courses, with coffee and green chartreuse to wind up with." "Well," another would remark, "I should be content with some soup, a little fish, a slice of beef and some tart." "Chops and tomato sauce for me," murmured a third, oblivious of the fate that befell Mr. Pickwick, who had a similar desire, says Travel.

Then we would reach a slimy, begrimed village, creep into a smelling hut and make our dinner of pork and rice, or rice and pork when we desired to vary the menu. But one night at a spot called Taeping-Pu, when we called for the perennial pork we were informed that we could not be supplied. "No pork!" we exclaimed; "no pork in China? Why, Chinamen are three parts pork." Then we were told we were in a Mussulman village, where swine were an abomination, but we could have salt beef. We jumped joyfully at the salt beef, so called, though we knew perfectly well it was nothing else but stale, unprofitable, sinewy wild goat.

Big Silver Bowls.

In one of the windows of Dalkeith palace there is a large silver bowl, dated 1702, over 2,000 ounces in weight, says the Pall Mall Magazine. The royal arms are engraved upon it, as it was the property of John, second duke of Argyle, at one time ambassador to Spain. He left it to his daughter, Lady Mary Coke, sister to Lady Dalkeith. Four similar bowls are known to exist in Great Britain; they were formerly used for washing plates, knives and forks in the room during the course of a banquet. This bowl has since been put to better use, as it was filled with whisky toddy when the present duke came of age, in 1852.

SICK HEADACHE

Is the Bane of Many a Woman's Life—How the Disease may be Cured.

A Case Cited.

From the Republican, Bethany, Mo.

Mrs. Fannie B. Stoffle, of Martinsville, Mo., was lately rescued from a fate which nearly wrecked her life.

It seems she has for many years been severely afflicted with a complication of diseases and frequently would have fearful attacks in which she would become unconscious for hours.

In one of these, she was unconscious for many hours. Her condition became alarming; the usual restoratives failed to bring relief, the physician's aid proved unavailing and death seemed imminent. She recovered, however, and that she lives to-day is wonderful.

A reporter who was sent to investigate, when he met Mrs. Stoffle could not help but remark "how well she was looking" and could scarcely realize that she had passed through such a trying ordeal as had been represented. In speaking of her experience, Mrs. Stoffle said:

"I used to have terrible sick headaches, which I had as far back as I can remember. In recent years they were getting worse. I would suffer so that I would become unconscious, and the last one I had I was unconscious from seven in the evening until after midnight. I was so bad that the doctor could not get the medicine in my mouth, but had to give me a hypodermic injection. The doctor said I was likely to die in one of those spells."

"A few years a go I took treatment of a specialist in Kansas City, but it only relieved me for a while.

"When I came here two years ago my health was miserable. My husband who had great faith in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, insisted that I commence using them. I finally consented to try them. After taking a few doses I could see an improvement and my headache spells were not so severe. I kept taking the pills until I had used four boxes, and since that time I have not had any of those attacks and I never felt so well in my life.

"I have recommended the pills to my friends and several have used them with good results.

"I am always glad to tell of the great benefit I received from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, for now I feel as though I was the happiest, most contented woman in the world, for with good health who cannot but be happy?"

Mrs. Stoffle is a sister of Joseph Holland, of Bethany, who is well known throughout the county, having been a candidate for sheriff at the election of 1896. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Curtiss, of Eagleville, also well known in this county.

No discovery of modern times has proved such a boon to women as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Acting directly on the blood and nerves, invigorating the body, regulating the functions, they restore the strength and health to the exhausted woman when every effort of the physician proves unavailing.

These pills are recognized everywhere as a specific for diseases of the blood and nerves. For paralysis, locomotor ataxia, and other diseases long supposed incurable, they have proved their efficacy in thousands of cases. Truly they are one of the greatest blessings ever bestowed upon mankind.

GRAND OPENING.

Theatrical Season Opened at Sutton's Opera House Monday Evening with a Grand Production of "Faust."

Not to allow Tecumseh to be behind the times in the play house line, Manager Sutton has kept expert workmen busy almost night and day during the summer refitting the opera house and placing up-to date devices for the accommodation of players and patrons that all might be in readiness for the grand opening of Monday night. So much has been done in this line that a brief description is due the management.

It seems that each February the opera house is rented for a chicken show with the understanding that the renters should scrub out when the show is over. This makes it easy during the first of the coming season to mark with white chalk the numbers of the seat rows on the floor. A new stock of chalk has been procured and the job of embossing must have been the work of an artist. Indeed, the hand of the "artist" is ever present. "Do Not Spit on the Floor," "$5.00 Fine for Whistling or Singing or Hissing or Squealing during the Play" -- these signs are all new and beautifully engraved. A new button has been placed on the box office door and a cord and three-quarters of wood placed in readiness for the winter's heat. So much for the house improvement.

Now for the scenery. Several new flats have been added, that is not exactly new, but the changing them from one side of the stage to the other has served the same purpose. The rent over Shakespeare's left eye in the drop curtain has been sewed up and everybody is delighted. A new torch has been provided for igniting the footlights and the apparatus for turning them off works nearly every other time.

But the culminating effort is in the new electrical devices with which all first class theaters are now so well supplied. Heretofore the arc lights have been turned on and off with a switch, but this plan became tiresome on account of the length of time consumed in the turning of a button. The device of this season consists of a positive wire connected to one leg of the head usher, while a negative is joined to the other. Thus it will readily be seen that with a fish pole in both hands he can, with "lightning" speed, knock the arc in or out at will, provided some "kid" does not "fake" the fish pole.

Now for a description of the grand opening. At 8 o'clock sharp, the head usher wielded his fish pole device with vigor and, after five minutes severe strain the arcs were "knocked out" and the auditorium left in total darkness. It was then that the festive peanut got in his work. This noise of the crunching peanut combined with the thunder of the approaching Devil was indeed interesting and the audience did not seem to mind the pitchy darkness, but patiently waited, many no doubt silently thanking the Lord that peanuts are a wormless fruit. After quite a spell of this the curtain flew up amid the rantings of Faustus and admonitions of the Devil. Between Acts I and II there was another short period of groundnuts and writing fluid, when the audience was introduced to Marguerite and Faustus, the rejuvenated. Between the second and third acts the light was allowed to shine, that is after the fish pole switch had lost three feet off its small end and put out three eyes in the gallery in attempting to discover the arc in the dark. From this time all went smoothly 'till Valentine came home in the fourth act. Everybody was glad he came back in the fourth act and hoped he would die easily, but he seemed to enjoy the finest rubber neck on earth. He head bobbed back and forth and right and left until it seemed like an old-fashioned tip up and he

Ranted and panted
And panted and ranted
And kept it red hot
Until he was planted.

After this most heartrending act the interest seemed to die out to a certain extent; even Dame Martha could not keep up the interest and it was seen that the Devil was losing his grip. All in all the company was good with the exception of Faust, Valentine, Siebel, Wagner, Martha, Lisa, Elsie, Catherine and Olga Verne, so that a listener to enjoy himself was obliged to "go to the Devil."

The above might sound to some people a little overdrawn, but it is all true. Two-thirds of the audience consisted of the best people from Manchester and Clinton and every resident of Tecumseh present was ashamed that our neighbors should take pains to come out to so vile a show in a play house so poorly run. The place would be a disgrace to Newburg.

High School Happenings.

Hugh Osborne is absent this week.

Gertrude Ford visited the high school last Friday.

The sophomore class was organized Tuesday with Donald Wright as president.

Miss Richardson and Miss Howell visited rooms in the east branch Tuesday forenoon.

Wednesday was LaFayette's day on which the pupils of the United States were asked to contribute to a statue of that hero. The amount of the collection will be given next week.

Miss Wimple has the eight grade over in the Tecumseh schools and just 50 were enrolled. Oscar Hooten was not able to enter school till last week, and when he asked Miss Wimple if there was room for him to join her class, she took up the roster, entered his name and simply answered "you're Hooten." Prof. Kellogg has been trying to make out whether the lady is given to slang and is still thinking about it.—Adrian Press.

It is perhaps fortunate that Miss Wimple didn't happen to say anything of the sort, otherwise Mr. Stearns wouldn't have had so good a chance to display his genius as a fiction writer.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Oct. 17, 1898.

Secretary Hay is too shrewd a diplomat to publicly discuss the fakes that are almost daily cabled from Paris and Madrid, alleging hitches and dead locks in the Peace Commission, but his countenance expresses his utter indifference to these sensations, when they are called to his attention by newspaper men. All he will say on the subject is that nothing of importance has yet been received from the American commissioners. The latest fake about the Spanish commissioners having proposed that the Emperor of Germany should be determine the ownership of the Philippines is so ridiculous that one wonders it should have been printed in American papers. It will be remembered that the protocol which brought about the suspension of hostilities expressly provided that the U. S. should retain Manila and the surrounding country, and that the Peace Commission should determine the disposition of the rest of the Philippine group. The Peace Commission is only authorized to negotiate on the basis provided for by that protocol. By keeping that fact in mind, it will be a comparatively easy matter to detect fake news about the doings of the Peace Commission.

Acting Secretary of the Interior Ryan was somewhat surprised when he was visited by a delegation of full blooded Cherokee Indians, who came all the way from Indian Territory to ask him if the Curtis act for the reorganization of Indian Territory, which passed Congress last June and was approved by the President, was really a law; and the Indians appeared to be even more surprised when he assured them that it was. They insisted that he should say in writing that the act was a law, and to please them he wrote on the face of a copy of the act, "This is a law," and signed his name. The Indians took the copy with them, but still seemed to have doubts about the matter.

Secretaries Long and Alger are good friends personally, but the relations between the departments of the government, Navy and War, over which they respectively preside have been more or less strained ever since the Adjutant Gen. of the Army sent a report to the War Investigating Commission, prepared by direction of Secy. Alger, which naval officials and others, regarded as an attempt to make Admiral Sampson responsible for the delays in getting Gen. Shafer's army to Cuba, after it was put on board of transports, at Tampa, Fla. This was flatly denied by Adjutant Gen. Corbin, but his denial did not stop the talk, and it has been sometimes quite bitter on the part of officials of both departments. The relations between the two departments were not improved when Lieut. Frank K. Hill, of the Navy, who had charge of the debarkation of Shafter's army, stated that the transports had arrived off the coast of Cuba with no facilities for landing the troops, and, that if the Navy had not come to the rescue the army never would have been landed, and backed up that assertion by saying that Gen. Shafter had also expressed the same opinion. Lieut. Hill said he had no idea of striking at the War Department in his testimony, which embraced only facts that were known to all who accompanied Shafter's army, but War Department assistants insist that he was actuated by a desire to "get even." It was understood that when the commission, which has gone to Jacksonville, Fla., returns to Washington, it will ask the Navy Department for copies of all dispatches to and from Admiral Sampson.

There will be no military governor appointed for Porto Rico, over which the American flag will fly on and after the 18th inst., as it is the impression in administration circles that Congress will lose no time in providing a form of civil government for the Island, and until that is done the General in command of the U. S. troops on the Island will have the authority of a governor. Maj. Gen. Brooke, is at present in command there, but it is by no means certain that he will remain until the civil government is established. Gen. Brooke has been asked to notify the War Department by cable how many soldiers he considers absolutely necessary to preserve good order in Porto Rico. If Gen. Brooke does not make his estimate too large, it is probable that the Island will be garrisoned entirely by regulars, as the War Department wishes to avoid the expense of the transportation back and forth of volunteeers. Sec. Alger taking the ground that under the terms of their enlistment, "for two years, or for the war," every volunteer who wishes his discharge will have a right to demand and receive it, the minute that peace is officially declared between Spain and the U. S.

Late news from Cuba is not satisfactory. Gen. Gomez, who has done more or less sulking ever since the U. S. declared war against Spain, is reported to have threatened to lead his men back into the field, unless his ideas are carried out by the alleged government of the Cuban Republic and by the U. S. authorites. He wants the U. S. to get off the Island as soon as the Spanish troops do, and leave the Cubans to arrange things to suit themselves. His ideas and those of Senator Foraker seem to be very nearly alike.

ONE CONTINUOUS OVATION

Such Was the Tour of President McKinley Through the States of Indiana and Ohio.

MAKES SHORT TALKS IN MANY PLACES.

Welcomed to Indianapolis and Talks on the Capitol Grounds—An Immense Crowd at Columbus, O.—Arrives in Washington Well Pleased with His Western Trip.

Cincinnati, Oct. 22.—One continuous ovation marked the passage of President McKinley over the states of Indiana and Ohio yesterday. At Indianapolis the president spoke at the capitol grounds to a large audience as follows, being introduced by Senator Fairbanks:

"My Fellow-Citizens: I thank you for the words of welcome spoken in your behalf by your distinguished senator. I thank you for this cordial and hearty greeting at the capital city of your great state. We meet in no party name, we meet in the name of the country, of patriotism and of peace. (Great applause.) It gives me peculiar pleasure to meet the people of the city of the home residence of that illustrious statesman and predecessor in the great presidential office, Benjamin Harrison — (tremendous applause)—and I do not forget, in this presence, that this was the home of that other distinguished Indianian, Thomas A. Hendricks. (Great applause.) Both names are remembered by all of you, and both have been distinguished in the service of their country.

"My fellow-citizens, we are here today because we love the old flag. (Applause and cheers.) It never went down in defeat. It was never raised in dishonor. (Wild applause.) It means more at this hour than it ever meant in all our history. It floats to-day where it never floated before. (Great applause.) Glorious old banner, the same our grand sires lifted up, the same our fathers bore. In many a battle's tempest it shed the crimson rain, and what God hath woven in His loom no man can break in twain. (Great applause and cheers.) The war has been successful. It ended in a little over a hundred days. Matchless victories on land and sea, our army and navy are entitled to every honor that a generous people can bestow. (Tremendous applause and cheers.) Matchless army and fearless navy have done their part, the rest remains with us. The war was inaugurated for humanity, it must not stop until it embraces humanity. (Great applause.) It was not commenced in bitterness, it was not commenced in malice. It was commenced in a spirit of humanity, for freedom and to stop oppression in a neighboring island. (Applause and cheers.) We cannot shirk the obligations of victory, if we would, and we would not if we could. (Great applause.) Happy are all free peoples too strong to be dispossessed, but blessed are they among nations who dare to be strong for the oppressed. (Tremendous applause.)"

Speeches were also made at Noblesville, Rushville, Connersville, Kokomo and Logansport.

In Ohio.

Columbus, O., Oct. 22.—The presidential train arrived here about 8:30 p. m., and at the Auditorium the president spoke to an immense audience, concluding as follows:

"My countrymen, the past is secured. We know the extent of our country now. Some additions have been made since I left you. Our flag floats triumphantly over Puerto Rico. (Cheers). Our troops are in unquestioned possession of that island. The same flag floats over Hawaii. (More cheering). We know what our country is now; we know its history, but we do not know what it may be in the near future, but whatever it is, whatever obligations shall justly come from this strife for humanity, we must take up and as free, strong, brave people, accept the trust which civilization puts upon us." (Cheering).

After a short informal levee on the stage, during which the president shook hands with a large number of citizens, he returned to the train.

Murder and Suicide.

NOW PUERTO RICO, U. S. A.

Insular Cabinet Swears Allegiance to the United States—Last Spanish Troops Depart.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The navy department Monday received the following:

"San Juan, Oct. 23.—Secretary of the Navy: Evacuation of Puerto Rico completed by sailing of last detachment of Spanish troops to-day.

(Signed) "SCHLEY."

San Juan de Puerto Rico, Oct. 25.—The members of the insular cabinet took the oath, of allegiance to the United States Sunday with befitting solemnity. They will issue a manifesto announcing their resolution to avoid partisan politics and end party strife.

About $12,000 have been collected as customs duties since October 18, the day the United States formally took possession of Puerto Rico.

The efficient work of the United States commission has won popularity with its members among the people of San Juan, and there have been a number of graceful farewells exchanged.

A movement has been started to send a Puerto Rican commission to Washington in order to represent to the authorities there the needs of the people of this island.

FRANCE IN AN UPROAR.

Refusal to Pass a Vote of Confidence in the Brisson Ministry Causes the Cabinet to Resign.

Paris, Oct. 26.—Premier Brisson and the entire French cabinet have resigned their offices, impelled by failure of a vote of confidence in the chamber of deputies. The cabinet crisis came as a fitting climax to an exciting session. The resignation of Gen. Chanoine, the minister of war, was the result of systematic terrorizing by military chiefs who charged him with being a traitor to his order in assenting to the proposal to refer the Dreyfus case to the court of cassation.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH MUDDLE

Each (sotto voce)—"What if he shouldn't give way."

After the adjournment of the chamber there was intense excitement, followed by street demonstrations, and there were numerous collisions between the demonstrators and the police. In the Rue Royale the rioters tried to overturn a carriage containing three Americans amid cries of "Down with the Jews!"

Gold in Ohio.

Bellaire, O., Oct. 26.—Malvern, Carroll county, O., just north of this city, is in a fever of excitement over the discovery of gold in paying quantities. In Big Sands valley specimens of yellow sand, rock and ore have been taken out of an old Indian cave at what is known as Shanty Hill farm, in a wild clump of woods a mile from Malvern. Specimens of quartz have assayed gold to the value of $23.77 per ton and $436 silver to the ton.

Put to Death.

Augusta, Ga., Oct. 26.—After a coroner's inquest, during which Jim Mackie and Luther Sullivan implicated each other in the murder of Mrs. J. O. Adkinson at Republican Church, Edgefield county, about 14 miles across the river from here in South Carolina, both men were shot to death Tuesday night by the enraged people of the neighborhood in which the murdered woman lived.

Three Drowned.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—A small skiff, in which were Louis Babon, son of a wealthy brick manufacturer of Evanston; William Schaffer and another man whose identity has not been established, capsized in Lake Michigan about five miles above Wilmette Sunday and all were drowned.

Last of His Race.

Middlesboro, Ky., Oct, 25.—"Wild Bill" Turner, a noted character in Kentucky who had murdered several persons, was killed by Will Coombs near here. He was the sixth brother killed and the last of the family.

KILLED IN A RACE BATTLE

White Men and Negroes Shoot Each Other in a Fight at Harpersville, Miss.

A SERIOUS STATE OF AFFAIRS EXISTS.

Posse Tries to Arrest a Desperado and Meets Resistance—Men Hastily Arm Themselves and Go to the Scene of Riot—Whole Country Excited and More Trouble Expected.

New Orleans, Oct. 24.—The Picayune's Vicksburg special says: Telegrams report a most serious state of affairs at Harpersville, 12 miles north of Forest, Miss., on the line of the Alabama & Vicksburg railroad, in Scott county. It is stated that bad blood has existed in Harpersville between the whites and blacks. Saturday evening a negro man beat most unmercifully an old white man. At night a deputy sheriff and two others went to the negro's house with a war arrest him. When the offic the man's house they fo rounded with a crowd of men, all armed, and wer Potter, a well-known and the other two tho tally wounded. As so reached the center o Harpersville the men themselves and went to the riot. Then the figh reality and lasted the grea the night. At daylight Sund found that nine negroes had killed and four captured who slightly wounded. Some seem to thi the trouble is not over.

Whole Country Aroused.

The whole country is terribly aroused and the sheriff's posse has been reenforced with men from all the neighboring towns. Gov. McLaurin has gone to the scene, which is about ten miles north of Forest, the nearest railroad point. The governor and Adjt. Gen. Henry are naturally counseling moderation, but in the excited state of the public mind a general fear is expressed that the posse will not regard the suggestion favorably. Their presence, however, will undoubtedly have a good effect in restraining the number of fatalities after enough negroes have been killed to satisfy the outraged feelings of the whites in that section.

Fight Is Not Ended.

New Orleans, Oct. 25.—The Picayune's Forest, Miss., special says: Eleven dead negroes, one dead white man and one negro and three white men seriously wounded is the result at this writing of the bloody war being waged between the white and black races in the Harpersville neighborhood of (this) Scott county. Several of the rioters have been captured and lodged in jail at Forest, but the others escaped into the swamps. Large crowds of white men are in close pursuit, however, and more names are hourly expected to be added to the death list.

Fourteen Have Been Killed.

Meridian, Miss., Oct. 26.—Further information reaching here from Forest, Miss., says that 14 is the number of negroes killed in the Harpersville race riot up to this time. The bodies of three more victims were found in the woods Tuesday, which increased the number to 14. The negroes who fled to the swamps have all made good their escape and the race conflict is now at an end.

COST OF TWO WARS.

Something Over a Million Dollars a Day Was Spent in the Conflict with Spain.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Uncle Sam's expenses for the Spanish war sink into insignificance when compared with the cost of the conflict between the states. Thus far the war with Spain has cost $187,529,941, or a fraction over $1,000,000 per day since the beginning of hostilities April 21, against the enormous sum of $3,065,413,425 during the civil war, or an average of $1,685,156 per day.

The total disbursements of the government for the four months of the present fiscal year, which included the civil list, pension payments and interest on the public debt, were $323,587,114. The total receipts were only $183,754,445, showing a deficit of $69,000,000 for the fiscal year.

WIDOW HELD FOR MURDER

Marie Sanderson, of Battle Creek, Arrested and Placed in Jail on a Serious Charge.

IS SAID TO HAVE KILLED HER HUSBAND

Bride of the Late Senator Sanderson Is Accused of Poisoning Him Within Three Months of Their Marriage—Said to Have Fed Him on Ground Glass.

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 24.—Mrs. Rodolphus Sanderson, the young wife of the late ex-Senator Sanderson, of this city, was arrested Saturday afternoon charged with the murder of her husband by putting ground glass in a dish of oatmeal. Mr. Sanderson, who was 80 years of age, married his 28-year-old wife, then Miss Marie Butterfield, July 6 last. On the 6th of this month the aged man died, paralysis being given out as the cause. The young wife went into deep mourning, and nothing was said publicly that there was any reason to suspect her of crime in connection with the death until the unexpected announcement was made a few days ago that the body had been secretly exhumed at midnight and that the stomach had been sent to Ann Arbor for chemical analysis. Mrs. Sanderson was arrested in the office of her lawyer, William Crosby, by Deputy Sheriff Gregory, and arraigned before Justice Harry P. Lewis. She asked for an examination, as the crime is unbailable, and was placed in jail to await trial.

Mrs. Sanderson was formerly a nurse in various Detroit hospitals, and came here to care for relatives of Mr. Sanderson. Meeting him, she became his wife. She is the daughter of Henry Butterfield, a retired farmer of Baraboo, Wis. She is young and pretty. It was noticed that soon after the wedding the pair acted strangely. He seemed downcast, and she overanxious to wait upon him. She was accustomed to make oatmeal for his breakfast, and it is claimed that she put powdered glass in it. The servant girl avers she saw Mrs. Sanderson grind the glass.

Mr. Sanderson was a wealthy and much respected citizen, had been state senator of Vermont in 1849-51, of Michigan in 1895 and again in 1873, and was an ardent republican. In 1849 he married Ruth Adams, and Belle, the only daughter by this marriage, died in 1897, thus leaving no heirs to his will, made in 1882.

The accused woman is col under her trouble, and talks freely on all subjects save the charge against her. "I am innocent, and I will prove it; I will triumph over these reports," is all she will say.

Edward and George Stringham, local business men, have bought the estate of Mrs. Sanderson from Gavin Ritchie, who gave $6,000 for it. Ritchie paid $1,000 down, and promised to pay $5,000 more. The estate is worth many times this amount, but no one cared to risk much money in it. It is understood that the Stringham brothers have been informed by lawyers that even if Mrs. Sanderson is proven guilty by law, she is entitled to the money mentioned in the will made in 1882, which says: "My wife and daughter." It is now hinted that several others will be implicated in the murder.

Battle Creek, Oct. 26.—Interest in the Sanderson alleged murder case continues unabated. Harry Butterfield, a brother of Mrs. Sanderson, reached the city Monday and went to Marshall to see the prisoner. They had a long interview, and the young man was much affected. Mrs. Sanderson talked encouragingly to her brother, declared she was innocent, and expressed her firm belief that she would be acquitted.

Sued by the State.

Lansing, Oct. 24.—The state of Michigan has brought suit by Attorney General Maynard for a trifle over $54,000 alleged to be past due from the county of Gogebic. This amount covers all delinquent taxes and a bill of something more than $30,000 for troops furnished Ironwood during the big strike of July and August, 1894.

University Men in War.

Ann Arbor, Oct. 22.—The University of Michigan, through its Alumni association, is trying to collect all the data possible concerning the University of Michigan men who enlisted in the recent war, and has issued a circular asking all who have information on the subject to communicate with the association.

Entertained at Mount Clemens.

Detroit, Oct. 21. — The general passenger agents' convention ended with an excursion to Mount Clemens over the Rapid railway. Citizens of the bath city had subscribed $800 to entertain the guests. An elaborate dinner was served at the Park hotel.

Yield of Sugar Beets Good.

Saginaw, Oct. 24.—Many of the farmers of this county will begin shipping sugar beets to the Bay City sugar factory at once. It is estimated that the present season's yield will average 12 to 15 tons to the acre throughout the county.

First Michigan Sugar.

Bay City, Oct. 20.—The first granulated white sugar ever made in Michigan was turned out of the beet sugar factory here and put on exhibition Wednesday. The superintendent says the success of the factory is beyond doubt.

Trains Stalled by Leaves.

Munising, Oct. 23.—Trains in this vicinity have been "stalled" in a peculiar manner of late. The morning train to Little Lake has been delayed several times by leaves which have fallen on the track to such a depth that the rails were covered. The leaves were very slippery, on account of the dew, and caused the wheels on the engine to slip. The engine was stuck with only two loads, two empty cars and the passenger coach, and at one place it took 20 minutes to get over half a mile of track.

Moody and the Sinless Man.

Some time ago a man who claimed perfection went to Evangelist Moody and commiserated him on his low level of Christian experience. Mr. Moody, in a kind manner, asked his caller if he never sinned nor did any wrong.

"No; I have not sinned for years, neither have I done anything that was wrong," was the prompt reply.

"Well, I'm glad to know it," said Mr. Moody, "but before I am convinced I would like to ask your wife."—November Ladies' Home Journal.

The Pig a Society Pet.

Who believes in mascots? Our soldiers and sailors do, hence our fashionable young women do also. Charms have been worn on watch-chains, on bracelets, and on chatelaines, and four-leaved clovers in crystal lockets have been very popular all summer. But now you must do away with all your inanimate mascots and have live ones. The pig is the latest fad for the New York girls, several of whom have tiny pigs, with ribbons tied about their necks following them about the house or in the streets, as they walk. Besides pigs, rabbits, goats, white mice, alligators and monkeys are affected by some young women. To be thoroughly up-to-date one is expected to take about for good luck a real, live mascot.—From Society Fads, in the November Demorest's.

David Starr Jordan, the distinguished scientist and government commissioner to Alaska, opens the November Atlantic by giving the results of his official experience and scientific observation of the many errors of our management in Alaska, by which the vast resources of that wonderful country—furs, food-fish, timber, mines, etc.,—have been and still are recklessly squandered, and wealth and property needlessly thrown away by the nation; and he sounds a much-needed note of warning as to the probable results of the administration of the prospective colonies now ready to our hands should they be treated in the same wasteful, corrupt, and ruinous fashion.

LITERARY NOTES

"The Preference" is the title of an amusing story by Caroline Leslie Field, which will soon be published serially in Harper's Bazar. Other features of early forthcoming numbers are College Days and their Sequels, a series of papers by Adaline W. Sterling, and the resumption of the column on Music by Miss Purdy.

A portrait of Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee, the first woman to hold rank in the United States army, forms the frontispiece of The Chautauquan for November, and in an article in the same number on "Some American Women in Science," the first of an illustrated series in which Mrs. M. Burton Williamson reviews the work being done in science by women, there is a sketch of Dr. McGee's life and scientific work.

The first volume of Harper's Round Table, in its new monthly form, which is now completed, contains an unusually excellent collection of serial and short stories, strikingly told and graphically illustrated. There are articles of travel and exploration; practical and instructive articles; narrative and descriptive articles; articles on hunting, fishing and sport of every kind. The bound volume is in every way an ideal holiday gift for young people.

* * *

The late Spanish-American War receives due attention in the November number of Harper's Magazine. Lieut. J. C. Fremont, commanding the Porter, has an article on "Torpedo-boat Service," in which he treats of the character and value of torpedo-boat service, and gives striking instances of heroical adventure; and Frederic Remington uses his knowledge and skill in depicting the soldiers of the Fifth Corps as he saw them in their first battle against a European army. Other special features are: Eastward Expansion of the United States, by Archibald Colquhoun; Bismark, by Sidney Whitman; Our Seaboard Islands on the Pacific, by John E. Bennett; which together with the usual number of short stories and serials make an interesting number.

Public Statement From A Public Man

Hon. W. H. Ohley, Ex-Secretary of State of West Virginia, writes an open letter.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Mar. 9, 1898.

To whom it may concern:

"I most heartily recommend Pe-ru-na as of great benefit in cases of catarrh. It is especially beneficial wherever the mucous membranes are affected. As a tonic it certainly has no superior."

W. H. OHLEY, Ex-Secretary of State.

Hon. W. H. OHLEY.

Pe-ru-na has cured thousands of obstinate cases of catarrh, and is perhaps the only efficient remedy in existence for catarrhal diseases; but there are countless multitudes of people who are still struggling with catarrh and need help. To such as these the unqualified recommendation of Pe-ru-na by Ex-Secretary Ohley is directed. Pe-ru-na is scientific and purely vegetable. All druggists sell it.

Ask any druggist for a free Pe-ru-na Almanac for the year 1899.

Strawberry vines at the home of Wellington Hughes in this city, were blooming and bearing fruit the first of the present week. Some of the fruit was large and fine. From Adams township we received this week some blossoms of the common garden pea, together with the pod of the peas; also growing in the open air at this time. Rather remarkable for the middle of October.—Hillsdale Democrat.

A mysterious disease is epidemic among the farmers' hogs in the vicinity of Stockbridge. They are attacked by a weakness in the back and after a few days' sickness the animals die. The veterinaries cannot ascertain what it is.

Folk-Lore.

The research into popular beliefs is an absorbing and not a profitless study. Scarcely a day passes that we do not run across some piece of superstition that dates, in one form or another, from a far antiquity. Salt is spilled at table, and we jest with our neighbor over the prospect of a quarrel, half believing in the sign, though we may not know that the Romans did the same. A dog howls at night, and we recall the wide-spread belief that the howling of a dog foretells death, but forget that our early Aryan ancestors assigned to the dog the office of messenger from the world of spirits. The every-day custom is as old as humanity; the nursery jingle may be traced back to an origin in the world's babyhood; the familiar fairy-tale which delights nineteenth-century children is found in varying forms in all countries, pointing to a common origin in a remote age, embodying old Aryan myths, and giving us interesting information of the conceptions of our ancestors regarding nature and human life.—Jessie F. O'Donnell, in November Lippincott's.

IN OLDEN TIMES

Many Things were Different.—Now-a days the public profit by experience.

When the striped pole or sign which now indicates a barber shop was employed to let the public know where cupping or blood-letting was professionally performed, close shaves were of daily occurrence, not the easy removal of the hirsute or hairy adornment of the head and face, but close shaves from entering eternity. More than one unfortunate entered the barber surgeon's doorway to leave it a corpse or so weak that weeks were required to get the victim of malpractice on his feet. Blood-letting was used for everything from a heartache to a corn, and a pain in the loins was invariably treated with two incisions, one on each side of the spine. Like plasters and liniments, these helped from the counter irritation they created, and we may presume that had Mr. Calvin Wilson, proprietor of the leading shaving parlor of Niles, Mich., lived in the time of George III. of England, in place of taking the course he did a short time ago with his back, blood-letting would have been resorted to. Read how he treated his trouble:

Mr. Wilson says: "My occupation has very likely, much to do with the cause of my backache from which I have suffered considerably for a number of years. Standing on one's feet some days 18 hours is hard on the best of backs, but when you have pain across the loins, with lameness and soreness, everytime you move the muscles of the arm, long, long before your daily task is over you often wish you could go to sleep. I tried everything to better my condition but was unsuccessful until I used three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The relief they brought to a man who has worked hard all his life and is now past the three score and ten is much easier to appreciate than to describe in words. Doan's Kidney Pills perform what they promise."

Richard Harding Davis, who was one of the few war correspondents to follow the army from Cuba to Porto Rico, and who was with the advance from the time of landing until the close of hostilities, gives his impression of the Porto Rican Campaign for the November Scribner's. He pays high tribute to the generals and troops who made the closing campaign of the war seem more like a triumphal parade than an aggressive advance through an enemy's country, and shows that both regulars and volunteers did the work before them in a way to satisfy the most exacting military demands. The article also gives a vivid and clear impression of the country and people, and describes many pictuesque and amusing incidents that give Mr. Davis' work so much human interest.

Man is born to rule the world, but woman comes along and makes him forget what he started out to do.

Ten Millon Wheelmen.

It is stated by competent authority that there are ten million people in America who are bicycle riders. Probably each one gets an average of one hurt in a season, and that is just when Henry & Johnson's Arnica & Oil Liniment gets in its good work. Nothing has ever been made that will cure a bruise, cut or sprain so quickly. Also remove pimples, sunburn, tan, or freckles. Clean and nice to use. Take it with you. Costs 25 cents per bottle. Three times as much in a 50 cent bottle. We sell it and guarantee it to give satisaction or money refunded.

The GRAPHOPHONE

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired, your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

The HERALD is not a political newspaper, has no "ax to grind" with any politician or political party, neither is it in any way a neutral paper, but independent and always on one side or the other so far as men are concerned.

For representative to congress there is no reason why the thinking voter should not vote for Henry C. Smith. He is the leading trial lawyer of Lenawee county, a man to be trusted in every particular and one who will reflect credit on this district. In congress we desire a man of affairs who will wield an influence with other men and obtain concessions for the district he represents. Such a man is Henry Smith.

Than Willard Stearns there could be found no better man for circuit judge. For years the work in the Lenawee county circuit court has dragged along for want of a man who had push enough to force the lawyers into doing business and getting their cases ready. Mr. Stearns is a capable lawyer, good business man and would be a credit to the circuit.

J. W. Helme is a good man for state senator and should be sent to Lansing.

Between Dr. Howell, of Tecumseh, and Dr. Rice, of Franklin, there is no comparison. Dr. Howell is a conservative man of experience and his judgment is wise and mature. Dr. Rice is an adventurer in politics, hot headed and foolish. He is the man who published the letter in the Adrian Telegram regarding Capt. Kyle and then, after public opinion changed, attempted to lay it to Postmaster Hampton. He would indeed be a fine specimen to represent the second district at Lansing.

Edwin S. Ferguson has made a good shoriff and it would be a calamity to the county to have his place taken by any green man at this time.

John Gahagan, of Hudson, is a bright man and would make a good clerk.

In direct contrast to the sheriff is the case of the states attorney. As assistant prosecutor Sampson has been a total failure. The performance down at New York with the butter maker who ran away from the Ridgeway creamery showed simply that the man was wholy incompetent. Bert Chandler, of Hudson, is one of the brightest young men in the county, full of days' works and, unless all signs fail, would make the best prosecutor Lenawee has had for many years. In fact, it might not be out of place right here to state that the sheriff has been handicapped all through his term by the incompetency of States Attorney Bird and his assistants.

Mark B. Mills has made a good register of deeds. One cannot find a person who has any complaint to make concerning the work in his office and there is no use putting in a new man.

Garland Gillespie, of Clinton, would make a good circuit court commissioner and is in every way a reliable young man.

There could not be a man better suited for surveyor of Lenawee county than Alexander Richards. He knows every foot of the county and is besides a thorough and competent engineer.

The opinion of the HERALD is that the above men are the best adapted for their respective places on the tickets. The list is taken from both tickets without any regard to politics and this is the way candidates for county offices should be chosen by every voter.

Of the state ticket there is nothing for a local newspaper to say except that every voter should be warned against voting for Jason E. Hammond for superintendent of public instruction. This department is rotten to the core. The state has spent thousands of dollars printing statistics for inducing school districts to furnish free text books and the peculiar thing is that all the books are furnished from one book concern. The voters of Michigan should set on this man with a dull thud.

An Afternoon with the White Ribbons.

The Baptist church was beautifully decorated with flags, palms and chrysanthemums in honor of the visiting delegates to the county convention of the W. C. T. U. this week. Over the pulpit three handsome silk flags formed a canopy under which stood Mrs. Humphrey, the president, and Dr. Julia Green, her secretary. In front of the rostrum, pendant from a chandelier, was a large blue silk globe encircled by a white ribbon, the work of girls at the Industrial Home.

The attendance on Thursday was very small considering the beautiful weather and the bountiful preparations the resident ladies had made for their entertainment. Less than a hundred people were in the church during the morning exercises, with a slight increase in the afternoon. To the man on the back seat who did the proceedings for the newspapers, it must have seemed an assemblage of women with low voices and loud hats.

In the middle of the forenoon (for our Baptist ladies do not consult standard time when a dinner is to be prepared) the aroma of boiling coffee stole in from the kitchen and hovered over the patient tellers who distributed ballots for the election. Dinner waited until 12:30, for hungry delegates who "rose to points of order" and "asked for information" on parliamentary law, but the dignified president was a fine parliamentarian and (no other words express the situation) "onto her job" and held them down in a way that Tom Reed might envy. The result of the election was: President. Miss Clara Daniels, of Onsted; cor. secretary, Mrs. VanAuken, Rome; rec. secretary, Mrs. Green; treasurer, Mrs. Clark, Raisin Valley.

At this point a sympathizing sister noticed that the president was pounding the desk with a lead pencil and moved that a gavel be purchased for use at county conventions. Motion was carried and committee requested to secure one from the old Crusade church at Hillsboro, Ohio.

Then a spectacle for club women took place. The president called the president-elect and her fellow officers to the platform, introduced them to the audience, encircled her successor with her arm and prayed that the society might give the new leader the same kindly support and loving sympathy that she, herself, had received at their hands and called upon Heaven to help her perform her new duties. This was a little new and worth more than any number on the program to the club women, some of whom had seen elections of officers where the spirit of prayer did not prevail in the room for a full hour and a half after the ballots were counted.

At the afternoon session Mrs. Weaver, Adrian, gave a paper, beautifully read and eloquently written, on "Motherhood and Citizenship," by Mrs Olive Shaw, Adrian. Among other fine things said by Mrs. Shaw, one was that "the ballot will turn to ashes in woman's hand unless she realizes that the casting of a ballot is less important than the training of a voter," and that "Culture has not banished drunkness from among the cultured," also "A child will drag the chain of a mother's love and affection through the mire of degredation and dishonor, but will still retain a few saving links."

A set of resolutions were read for the approval of the convention and carried. Prominent among which was one thanking the citizens of Tecumseh for their interest and an especially complimentary one to Prof. Kellogg for his endorsement of the cause, the president stating that she had attended conventions, national, state and county, and never but once before—and that in Montreal—had a professor of the public schools come into the meeting with a word of sympathy. Prof. Kellogg was the second (and the other a Canadian) and his eloquent words were appreciated.

The Presbyterian ladies served supper, the Methodists having entertained the day before, and in the evening Mrs. Elsie Orr, accompanied by Miss Ella Chilson on the organ, sang most acceptably and in a way that touched all hearts, "I am Nearer my Home Today." This was followed by a stirring address by Rev. E. L. Odle, state missionary in the lumber camps, which was listened to attentively by a good audience. Thus ended the convention, the success of which, as far as Tecumseh's part is concerned, belonged in no small measure to the efforts of our own Anna Bryant Smith than whom there was not a more competent and finer looking delegate in the whole crowd.

Words fail to express the gratitude I owe Mr. E. F. Kirchgessner, for after paying nearly $100 to Doctors, Opticians, Pedlers and Swindlers for Glasses, and failing to get relief I consulted Mr. Kirchgessner who fitted me perfectly the first time. I was certainly going blind for the want of proper glasses and my glasses must be very complicated, for I have never found anyone that could see either distance or near by with them. Anyone buying glasses will make a mistake by not first consulting Mr. Kirchgessner.

The regular monthly social of the Baptist church will be held next Thursday, November 3rd. Supper 10 cents. Everybody come.

At the Presbyterian church next Sabbath, the pastor will preach in the morning on the subject "A Prosperous Church." The evening subject will be "The Great Refusal." All are invited to each service.

The quarterly tea meeting of the W. F. M. S. of the M. E. Church will be held Thursday Nov. 3rd. at the home of Mrs. H. Griswold. Meeting to be called at 3 o'clock. Tea served from 5:30 until all are served.

The meetings which are in progress at the Friend's church will be continued every afternoon and evening this week except Thursday evening. The evangelist will remain over the sabbath and preach morning and evening. All are invited. L. G. Romick, pastor.

A Pretty Reception.

On last Tuesday afternoon the home of Mrs. Robert Moore was the scene of a very pleasant reception given in honor of Mrs. Arrington Douglas, of St. Paul. It was particularly enjoyable to many of us because all of the rooms in the handsome new home were thrown open and perhaps just for a moment the "green eyed monster" may have entered some of our hearts but he was soon banished to make room for the spirit of cordiality and hospitality felt by all. Misses Harriett Conklin and Ella Chilson presided at the coffee urns while the Misses Julia Hicks, Mabel Clements, Winnifred Wilson and Smallshaw, of Adrian, served the guests. The afternoon was inclined to be stormy,

But what cared we for wind or weather,
Over the tea cups chatting together.

The house was gay with nasturtiums, chrysanthemums and fall vines and defied the weather outside.

When five o'clock came the guests were still visiting and very loathe to go. If Mrs. Douglas enjoyed her afternoon with the Tecumseh ladies as much as they did theirs with her, we feel sure that this will not be her last visit to our little village.

ROUND ABOUT US.

An exchange tells of a farmer who is kicking on the corn crop this year because he wasn't going to have any "nubbins" to feed his cows.

A marble slab in the Blissfield cemetary contains a queer inscription, "The Lord giveth, and the doctors taketh away, woe unto the doctors."

An Oxford pastor prayed fervently for rain during the street fair recently held in that village, believing that the occasion would be a carnival of sin. The pastor now admits that the Lord knew best, for the weather was fine and the fair was moral.—Jackson Patriot.

Jas. Whitcomb, of Hudson, has invented a new light similar to the electric light. A current is produced in a chemical battery and the light is smaller than the incandescent light but is claimed to be much stronger. The patent has been disposed of to Adrian parties, who are confident it will supersede the electric light.

An Adrian paper says: "Clayton possesses a justice of the peace, who is becoming renowned as a marrying justice, and his services are often sought from away. He is a thorough believer in newspaper advertising and his advertisement in the home paper reads. "If a man's in love, that's his business. If a girl's in love, that's her business. If they contemplate matrimony, that's my business. Thomas Tall, Justice of the Peace. P. S.—I always reserve the right to kiss the bride. Terms liberal. Time given if desired. Wood taken in part payment."

A hatless, long locked, brown bearded individual arrayed in a flowing gown of black silk, relieved by a crimson sash strung across the shoulders and a crucifix dangling from a chain about his neck, was seen on the streets of Adrian Monday. He claims to be August Schrader and tells the stock story of enduring a 40 days' fast in the mountains of Mexico and performing cures by prayer and the laying on of hands. When asked how long he intended to remain in Adrian he said it all depended upon how he was appreciated.

A little six-year-old girl in Sunday school was asked one morning recently what she remembered of the story about Samson and the Philistines, whereupon she promptly replied: "He sailed into the bay in the night and at daylight opened fire on them and sunk eleven of their warships with a jawbone of an ass. He then took some prisoners who had never seen a razor, bombarded the town and took up five baskets of fragments. He then told them that he would set his bow on the bay so that whenever they saw it they could remember the Maine."—Blissfield Advance.

DAINTY UNDERSKIRT.

It Can Be Easily Made Out of Almost Any Pretty and Suitable Material.

Here is the way a perfect-fitting underskirt should look before it is sewed together. If you have patience, from this very little model you can cut newspaper patterns, making each one a size larger than the other until you will have one that will fit yourself. A well-made underskirt is as essential as a perfect hanging dress skirt, for often a defect in the latter is caused by some flaw in the former.

To make a skirt like this you will need six yards of moreen. This goods is not very expensive and wears for years without losing its color. Dark red is a very favorable hue and one that can be combined with almost anything. Commence to sew the seams from the top, so that the unevenness will come out at the bottom. After the seams have been run together for about eight inches it is very nice to insert a panel of fancy silk or other figured material, to give additional width and beauty to the skirt. The yoke should be put on as soon as the seams are sewed, so that the band will not stretch in handling the skirt, while the finishing touches are being put on.

PATTERN FOR UNDERSKIRT.

For those who do not care to make a skirt, an easy plan is to purchase a cheap one, rip open the seams and then put in the fancy panel. This could be done at little expense, and your skirt would have all the beauty of a $15 or $20 silk garment.

Stewed Fruit Is Healthy.

There is no doubt that stewed fruit is a most wholesome addition to ordinary diet. There are, however, many persons who cannot eat it, either on account of the acidity of the fruit or of the large quantity of sugar required to make it palatable. It should be remembered that sugar does not counteract the acidity of the fruit, it simply disguises it, and if much of it is used it is apt to interfere with the digestive organs. Before cooking the fruit, sprinkle over it a small pinch of carbonate of soda; this renders the dish more wholesome, and certainly more tasty.

CLEANING FUR GOODS.

Professionals Use Sawdust and Cornmeal and Then Beat the Furs with a Switch.

"Furs become very much soiled and need renovation as much as any other part of a woman's wardrobe," says Emma M. Hooper in the Ladies' Home Journal, "but among the many directions given for cleansing and renovating one seldom finds anything regarding furs. Furriers keep all such trade secrets strictly, but occasionally there is a leakage, and I am able to give the result of one. Dark furs, as seal, mink and black marten, are cleaned with fine cedar or mahogany sawdust, which is kept in stock by furriers. The garment is ripped free from the lining and the fur is laid on a table with the hair up; then the sawdust is rubbed in the hair and neither strength nor sawdust spared during the process. When finished shake the fur lightly over the table and save the sawdust that drops out. Then put upon the table one or two feather pillows in their usual muslin slips, and upon these lay the furs, hair down this time, and beat thoroughly with a switch until the sawdust is out and the fur as clean as a pin; keep moving the pillows, as the fur must have a soft support while beaten. White furs are cleaned with white cornmeal applied as the sawdust is on the darker varieties. If white furs are only slightly soiled they may be cleaned with magnesia in small cubes that is well rubbed in and then thoroughly dusted out."

REMOVING CINDERS.

How to Get Rid of Foreign Bodies That May Have Found Lodgment in the Eye.

From the Nursing World we learn that small substances like cinders, dust, or small chips of stone or metal can often be removed from the eye by very simple means. Sometimes the flow of tears washes them out. At other times, catching the upper lid by the lashes, and pulling it away from the eyeball, and down over the lower lid, then letting it go, so that, as it recedes, its under surface is swept by the edge of the lower lid, will clear it out. If this does not prove successful, a loop made of a horsehair or of a long human hair can be passed under the lid and swept from the outer side toward the nose, and drawn down. Better than this, however, is the washing of the eye, or flushing with the eye-dropper. Every person should carry one in his traveling bag, for they are invaluable. Have the patient catch hold of the lower lid and upper lid, drawing them away from the eye, and then fill the dropper—which is like a syringe—with water, and flush the eye two or three times. This will always remove the cinder at once. Should lime get into the eye, it should be treated in the same manner, first with water then vinegar, or lemon juice and water—a teaspoonful of vinegar or lemon juice to a teacupful poured over the eyeball.

Dogs That Never Bark.

There are three varieties of dogs that never bark—the Australian dog, the Egyptian shepherd dog and the "lion-headed" dog of Thibet.

Chrysanthemum Yellow and Watermelon Pink Cape.

Evening wraps, as a general rule, are so expensive that the woman with only a little to spend and a great deal to buy feels that she is unable to indulge in such a luxury; but thanks to the beautiful new flannel that is now being imported every person can have something dainty for evening without a sacrifice.

The new flannel comes in all the leading colors and you can get it both striped and figured. Five yards will make a cape and two yards of silk will make the frills. The wrap in this case is of chrysanthemum white flannel with watermelon pink stripes running through it and big yellow chrysanthemums scattered over it. The collar is very high and is made so that it can be turned down when the wrap is thrown open. Three yellow China silk frills are sewed around the cape about a foot apart, and the whole wrap is lined with pink nearsilk.

The hat worn with this cape is of soft white felt trimmed only with two long ostrich plumes and a rosette of pink ribbon and a yellow chrysanthemum under each side of the brim. As the long plumes are very expensive it is a very good idea and a great saving of money to purchase two cheap ones and sew them together so that they make one long, full feather.

FARM & GARDEN.

PRETTY WELL HOUSE.

It Is Not Only Very Attractive But Helps to Keep the Farm Water Supply Cool.

In view of the comfort which comes from a well of cold water during the hot weather on farms where ice is not put up, it is worth the while to do all in one's power to keep the sun's heat out of the well. Few realize the amount of heat that goes down into a well of water through the platform that surrounds the pump. It can be partially realized by going up into a close attic under the roof some hot day. As a matter of fact, closed air spaces beneath boarding that is exposed to the bright sun become fearfully heated, and in the case of wells this heat is soon transmitted to the water. A double platform with an air space between will help greatly, but best of all is a summer house, or regular closed well house, built over the platform, and this in turn covered with vines. Not only will such a little house serve an excellent purpose in keeping the well cool, but it will be an ornament to the place as well, and, as a "summer house," may be a most agreeable place to spend an hour on a hot day. Woodbine is one of the best vines to use in covering such a house, as it provides abundant shade very quickly and is hardy even in the coldest climates. A few little things like this done about the farm each year will soon greatly improve the looks of the farm surroundings and will decidedly increase the comforts of farm life. A suggestion for such a house is given herewith.—N. Y. Tribune.

KEEP FENCES TIGHT.

A Good Part of the Injury to Stock from Barbs Is Due Almost Altogether to Neglect.

One of the most common causes of breachy animals on the farm is poor fences, and we may go further and say that a good part of the injury to stock from barbed wire fences, is due to a poor condition of the fence. The wires get loose and sag down, and stock get tangled up in them and injure themselves much worse than they would if the fences were kept up properly. Low tumble down fences are a constant temptation to stock to break over, and once they get started it will be much more difficult to restrain. The safest plan in all cases is to keep the fences in a good condition, especially those around the pastures. If the stock are to be changed constantly from one pasture or field to another, provide good gates, as laying the fences part way down and compelling the animals to jump over what is left up, is giving them the first lessons in jumping or becoming breachy. If an animal seems inclined to be breachy, get rid of it as soon as possible, as one mischievous or breachy animal on the farm will soon teach the greater part of the others to be like them. With wire fences properly built, care being taken to have strong corner posts well braced, it is not much work to keep them in good condition. But no matter what kind of fences there may be on the farm it is good plan to go over them every few weeks and see that they are kept in good repair.—Prairie Farmer.

Thistles Among the Oats.

Where oats are sown early in a field that is infested with Canada thistles, the latter will often blossom and bear seed before the oats are ready to be harvested. A Canada thistle in blossom will ripen its seed if the whole stalk is cut and allowed to dry with it. Fortunately, the Canada thistle will send up its spires for blossoms several days before the oats begin to head out. It is easy then to go through the field, and with a long, sharp knife lop off the heads of all the thistles which will tower six or eight inches above the oats. The work must be done within two or three days, as the oats head out very quickly after the thistles, and both must grow together until the harvest.—American Cultivator.

This Is Worth Considering.

Experiments recently made at the Michigan Experimental station show that about four times as much feed is obtained from a meadow allowed to mature hay as from a field pastured. In soiling, the difference would probably not be so great, owing to the fact that the grass, or peas, or alfalfa, or whatever is grown for the purpose, is cut before it fully matures, but even then from two to three times the number of animals can be supported by soiling as on pasture.—Prairie Farmer.

LOCATING AN ORCHARD.

A Light, Pervious Clay Loam, with Some Lime in It, Is Certainly the Best Soil.

The site for the orchard on the farm must be selected from such lands as make up the farm, taking the location of the buildings and the lay of the land into consideration. Of course, it is impossible on every farm to supply the best conditions for fruit culture, but a little care in the selection of the location will make a difference in the quantity and quality of the fruit.

When it can be had, a deep soil—the deeper the better—as the greater the depth of the naturally drained soil the better it is adapted for fruit.

It is a waste of time and money to set out fruit trees in a wet, heavy, impervious soil that is undrained. On the other hand, an orchard growing on high, dry, exposed situations will not thrive as it should. The trees may live, but in many seasons the fruit will not mature promptly, and what does mature will be of an inferior quality. One advantage of a deep soil is that the trees growing in it are better able to withstand drought.

It is true that in many localities land too rocky or broken to be cultivated to advantage may be planted with fruit trees and be made to return a better profit than would otherwise be possible. At the same time the best fruit and that which brings the best returns is grown in deep, rich soil, kept in good condition.

The fact should be considered that an orchard will occupy the ground for a number of years without a change—more so than any other crop grown on the farm.

In localities where late spring frosts appear with fearful effect, an eastern or southern exposure should always be avoided. A northern slope gives a colder and later soil, and thus retards the blossoming until a later period, and in this pay reduces the danger of injury from late spring frosts.

A light, pervious clay loam, with some lime in it, with natural drainage, is the best for an orchard.

If the orchard can be protected from the north and west winds, all the better. When an orchard is to be planted in the fall, the location should be selected in good season, in order that it may be plowed and prepared in proper condition. As with all other crops, the best results are possible only by making the necessary preparation and the giving of proper care.—St. Louis Republic.

SAFE FRUIT LADDER.

If You Make One This Winter for Next Season's Crop You Will Never Regret It.

Upon the ordinary fruit ladder one must stand for a long time and endure the strain and the cutting into the feet of a small round. A fairly broad flat step gives firm and comfortable support to the feet. The ladder can be made light, too, as the one shown in the illustration. Make one in winter according to this pattern, while you have plenty of time, and it will be ready for next season's fruit picking. The top of such a ladder can be narrowed to a point if desired. The main piece must be of some light material free from knots and other imperfections. Dress all the material before putting together, then paint. If kept under shelter when not in use it will last many years.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Experiments with Strawberries.

An Ohio farmer who always had plenty of strawberries did not reset his patch oftener than once in seven or eight years. He made the soil very rich before setting the plants. As soon as the first crop was off he trained the runners into the spaces between the rows and late in the fall plowed the old rows out, turning the furrows over the new plants, afterward raking the soil off them and back into the furrows. This plowed space was then manured and cultivated during the fall until the weed seeds in the manure had sprouted and had been killed. When freezing weather came the patch was mulched with straw and the next season there was a good crop on it. This operation may be repeated indefinitely.

Renewing Raspberry Patches.

A raspberry patch, of the black-cap varieties, needs to be renewed every four or five years, as the red rust comes in and will injure so many of the plants that the plantation will cease to pay. The black-cap raspberry will not last so long as this if it has been grown from suckers. Those grown from the tip ends of this year's shoots will keep free from disease longest. But after four or five years it is too much labor to keep the plantation free from weeds, and a new plantation, after the first year, will give more fruit, with less cost of labor in caring for it.

The man who wants BattleAx PLUG can get it anywhere. It is as popular as sunshine and almost as universal. It satisfies that dry taste in the mouth better than anything else, and you can buy a larger piece of Battle Ax for 10c. than of any other kind of high grade quality.
